Moses' great contribution lies in the fact that he took an oppressed people with no organization and a discouraged people and developed them into a nation. He was a Great Leader. On the other hand, he gave to his people laws by which they were to be governed as a nation.

He is one of the first great lawgivers in the history of nations.

How did Moses' preparation qualify him for a position of leadership?

Did Moses' Egyptian training become of any value to him in his task?

What is the origin of the Ten Commandments?

How much is Moses responsible for making them?

What qualities of leadership in Moses are valuable in leadership today?

Naomi—A Woman of Faith and Courage

Lesson Text.—Ruth 1:14-22; 4:14-17

Golden Text.—A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Proverbs 31:30.

We now move on from the time of Moses through the time of Joshua and the settlement of the Hebrews in the land of Palestine. The tribes are still not united, neither are the enemies in Canaan conquered. After Joshua we enter the time of the Judges where warrior-judges arose and led their people to victory. The Book of Judges records the process of conquest and unification of Israel. The period of Judges is one of war, murder, conquest, and bloodshed. It is during such dark days that we turn to look into the domestic life of the Hebrews. To go from the Book of Judges to the story of Ruth and Naomi is like being in an electric storm and then suddenly experience a calm, quiet, sunshine day.

The love story of Ruth and her relation to Naomi is one of the most beautiful stories in all literature. The story briefly is that during a time of famine the family of Elimelech goes into the land of Moab to live. While there, Elimelech dies, leaving Naomi a widow. Naomi's two sons had married daughters of the Moabites, Ruth and Orpah. The sons died, leaving Naomi with her two daughters-in-law. Naomi has not forgotten her homeland and her people, so she decides to go back to southern Palestine, near Bethlehem. She suggests that Ruth and Orpah remain in their homeland. These girls loved Naomi and hated to part with her. Orpah decided to stay, but Ruth said she would go with Naomi. So Naomi and Ruth go back to Palestine, where Ruth meets Boaz and he becomes her husband. There are two outstanding truths in this lesson. The one is the fact that while in the time of the Judges there was war, murder, bloodshed, treachery, and hatred, there was to be found in the home life of these simple people friendship, love, loyalty, and great devotion. Naomi, whose name means "pleasant," comes back not only older in years and experience, but with a life of sorrow. She said, "Call me Mara," which means "bitter." She had bitter experiences, yet through it all she kept her faith in Jehovah and manifested great courage.

What is the importance of the story of Ruth?

Which manifested the greatest love and loyalty, Ruth or Naomi?

What was the effect on Naomi's life of her bitter experiences?

What is the difference between love and sympathy?

ADVERTISING MILK

A dairy farmer in Northern Illinois, happening into the barber shop, forcefully expressed his opinion of a state of society which gives the food producer so little for his efforts

The barber heard him through, then said "You won't get any sympathy from me. I drove by your farm the other night and saw a big beer sign on your silo. For two or three dollars you are permitting your silo to be used to advertise a competitive product that has already reduced milk consumption twenty per cent in this town. Why don't you advertise your own products"?

The farmer went home with something to think about. Perhaps that barber has made a real contribution to farm relief.

ABOUNDING GRACE

In Paul's Second Letter to the Corinthian Church we find these words of encouragement and promise: "God is able to make all grace abound toward you: that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work" (II Cor. 9:8). The word GRACE as used in this text is defined in the Greek lexicon as a kind, affectionate, pleasing nature; a courteous or gracious disposition; a friendly willingness. God is able to cause His children to abound in these most desirable traits of Christian character, and to develop these admirable features of the sanctified life, by His indwelling Spirit; in order that they may unselfishly minister the same to others and abound unto every good work.

This "Spirit" is given to every man to profit withal," or literally rendered, "for the profit of all." God always blesses His children in order that they may be made a blessing to others.—J. D. W., in The Alliance Weekly.

Bear your burdens manfully. Boys at school, young men who have exchanged boyish liberty for serious business,—all who have got a task to do, a work to finish—bear the burden till God gives the signal for repose—till the work is done, and the holiday is fairly earned.—Jas. Hamilton.

JOTTINGS

The oldest Christian Endeavor Society having a continuous existence in the Mennonite church is that of the Herford congregation at Herford, Pa. It was organized under the pastorate of Rev. C. H. van der Smissen, January 15, 1887. Other young people's organizations of an early date, some of which continue to this time, are the societies of the Salem, Ohio, church, organized in 1887; the Halstead, Kansas, society, organized March 25, 1888; the Hillsboro, Kansas, Young People's Society, organized 1889; the Christian Endeavor Society of the Summerfield, Ill., church, organized 1890; the Young People's Christian Association of the Deep Run, Pa., church 1892; the South Alexanderwohl, Kansas, Young People's Society and Sewing Circle, organized 1892; it combined a sewing circle with a devotional organization. The young men bought the material and the young women did the sewing; the Christian Young People's Association of Bluffton, Ohio, organized in 1892; the Young People's Christian Association of West Swamp, Pa., organized in 1892; West Zion, Moundridge, Kans., Young People's Association, organized in 1896; the C. E. Society of the First Church, Philadelphia, Pa., organized October 18, 1892; the Trenton, C. E., organized in 1893; the Young People's Society of the Hamilton congregation, Aurora, Neb., organized in 1893; Silver St. Young People's Society, Goshen, Ill., organized in 1892; Young People's Society of the White Oak Church, Hudson, Ill., 1893; the C. E. Society of the Pulaski, Iowa, church, organized in 1893; the C. E. Society of Souderton, Pa., organized in 1893; the society of the East Washington, Ill., church, organized in 1893; the Young People's Society of Berne, Ind., organized 1894; the C. E. Society of the Gnadenberg, Kans., church, organized in 1896; the Garden Township, Kans., C. E. Society, organized in 1894; the St. Louis, Mo., congregation had an organized society in 1894; the Wadsworth, Ohio, C. E. Society organized in 1894; the society of the Bethesda church, Henderson, Neb., organized in 1892; the Bethel C. E. Society of Tipton, Mo., organized in 1895; the St. John's, Pandora, Ohio, Young People's Society organized in 1892; the Noble, Iowa, C. E. Society organized 1897; the Young People's Society of the Quakertown, Pa., church, organized in 1887; the C. E. Society of the Mennonite Mission, later the Second Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa., organized 1897. Some of these earlier societies were simply young people's organizations. Many of them later identified themselves with the rapidly spreading Christian Endeavor movement. It would be of interest to know how many of these societies, besides the Herford C. E. have had a continuous existence to this time.

Of the numerous confessions of faith that at various times were put forth either by single Mennonite churches or groups of Mennonite churches none has had a wider acceptance than the so-called Dortrecht Confession which was drawn up in Holland in 1632 by Mennonites in Dortrecht, where as early as 1551 there was already a Mennonite congregation. The church flourished until about 1750, when it gradually grew weaker and was dissolved. However, in 1896, after there had been no services in this place for many years, it was again revived. The first Mennonite publication in the English language in America was from the Bradford Press in Philadelphia in 1727 and was their confession. Copies of this edition are extremely rare and highly prized by collectors. There have been many later reprints of this confession and in many places it still commands respect.

An old edition of the Mennonite Year Book gives the following account of a Mennonite shipbuilder: "At the time of the truce between the Spaniards and the Dutch, in 1609, there lived at Hoorn, in North Holland, a Mennonite, Peter Jansen, who took the notion that he would build a ship of the same proportions as Noah's Ark, only smaller, that is 120 feet long, 20 feet broad, and 12 feet high. While it was building every one laughed at him, but Dutchman like, he kept sturdily on and found in the end that it justified his expectations, for when launched, it proved to be able to bear a third more freight than other ships of the same measurement, requiring no more hands to manage it than they, and sailed much faster. The result was that the Dutch built many others like it, calling them Noah's Arks, and they only ceased to be used after the close of the truce of 1621, because they could not carry cannons and were not safe against privateers.

The treasurer of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference, J. E. Regier, Newton, Kansas, reports the following receipts for the month of May: General receipts, $4,471.40. Balance on hand, May 1, $27.70. Gifts for General Fund, $3,401.40; Gifts for Orphans, $355.00; Gifts for Pension Fund, $15.00; Gifts for Sundries, $1,000.00. Total $4,799.10. Paid out on orders, $2,374.44. Remitted direct, $25.71. Balance on hand, June 1, $2,398.95.

The Executive Committee of Mission Societies of the General Conference reports for May as follows: Jubilee Fund Contributions, $438.01; for India, $100.00; Expenses of Executive Committee and News and and Notes, $26.65; Miscellaneous, $159.65. Total, $724.31.

The Emergency Relief Board of the General Conference acknowledges the following contributions received during the month of April: For Russia, $89.50; for Canada, $13.00; for General, $347.81. Grand Total, $450.31. Disbursements, $679.87.

The International Christian Endeavor Convention will be held in Philadelphia, July 2-7. Preparations are being made on an extensive scale for the entertainment of the convention. The Endeavorers of the Mennonite churches in and near Philadelphia anticipate a splendid opportunity for inspiration and blessings.

The Ministerial Conference of the Eastern District Conference announced for June 21, had for its guests Dr. C. Henry Smith and Prof. Russel Lantz of Bluffton College, who had parts on the program.

The Gospel Team of Bluffton College made a tour of the Pennsylvania churches, giving programs at the several places where they stopped.

The church at Los Angeles, Calif., was happy to have with it on a recent Sunday, Missionary John P. Suderman of the Mennonite Indian Mission at Oraibi, Arizona.

Rev. G. A. Linscheid of the Cheyenne Mission at Clinton, Okla., preached the baccalaureate sermon to the graduates of the Oklahoma Bible Academy in Meno, Oklahoma.

Levi Mumaw, Secretary-Treasurer of the Mennonite Publishing House, Scottdale, Pa., who was known through his connection with relief work and other interests to Mennonites generally, passed to his eternal reward at his home June 4.

The new Mennonite congregation at Wichita, Kans., is enjoying a prosperous growth under the direction of its young pastor, Olin Krehbiel. Recently the congregation received into its membership a number of additions through baptism and letter.

It is estimated that 3000 persons or more attended the Annual Mennonite song festival at Newton, Kans. It was first planned to hold the festival on the campus of Bethel College, but rain made it necessary to use the large city auditorium.

The Congo Inland Mission is a distinctly cooperative Mennonite foreign mission. The present missionary force shows the following list of workers on the field: Mennonite General Conference, 3; Central Conference of Mennonites, 6; Defenseless Mennonite Conference, 7; Conference of Defenseless Brethren in Christ of North America, 2; Mennonite Brethren, 1; Mission Church Association, 1; Bethel Church, Inman, Kans., 2.

The Russian government in an effort to conceal from the world the fact that there is distress in that country has forbidden its citizens to receive material assistance from other countries. A report recently received brings the information that eight persons, including two Mennonites, were condemned to death because they received help from friends outside Russia.

In connection with the observance of Children's Day in the church at Upland, Calif., nine young people were received into membership through the rite of baptism.

The readers of this paper are well aware of the fact that the General Conference will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary this summer in Los Angeles. We are also reminded that this year will mark the fiftieth year of the publication of The Mennonite and the fortieth year of the Mennonite Year Book.

Posters announcing the General Conference Young People's Retreat have been sent to the churches to be posted for the benefit of the young people and young people's leaders. Churches who have not received the poster or those who could use additional ones should notify D. D. Eitzen, 722 East 79th St., Los Angeles.

"It is eventide, and there is light;
Thanks be to God forevermore!
I walk with Him, the darkest night,
And see the way as ne'er before.

For He leads me on in His own way;
And past the darkness of the night,
Will dawn the bright, eternal day."

ENTERTAINMENT OF GENERAL CONFERENCE DELEGATES

The Upland church is happy to act as host to the General Conference for a few days before the Conference moves to Los Angeles. Will all delegates arriving by train or bus please notify Miss Gertrude Eymann, 814 Washington Blvd., Upland, Calif., of the time of arrival in Upland or Ontario? In the case of groups, parties, or District Conference delegations, such notification may well be sent by the group organizer, or secretary, or other responsible individual. All trains upon which delegates arrive will be met in either Upland or Ontario. In the case of delegates traveling by automobile, a notification as to probable time of arrival will be helpful. All delegates coming by auto should report at the Upland church building immediately upon arrival.

If delegates wish to make advance arrangements for lodging and entertainment, please address such requests to Miss Linda Schmidt, 524 East Arrow Highway, Upland, Calif. Every effort is being made for the comfort of Conference delegates. Due to the fact, however, that many non-Mennonite homes are being asked to entertain conference delegates and visitors, it is deemed wise to charge seventy-five cents per person for a night's lodging and breakfast. Wherever two persons share the same room the charge will be only a dollar for the two for lodging and breakfast. In the case of Mennonite homes this money will be given to the Jubilee Fund.

L. J. Horsch, Chairman
Local Arrangements Committee.

ENCOURAGING

It was indeed encouraging to read the resolutions adopted by the S. S. and C. E. Conventions held in Kansas and California, respectively. A wholesome and consecrated interest is being manifested by the young people in the spiritual and material obligations of the conference work.

The following exerpts from a letter from an "older" brother is an inspiration: "May God bless our young people and the work they do in connection with the conference. Our denomination still has a greater percent in Sunday School and church attendance — — — which is verified by the large attendance at our (............) S. S. Convention and (........................) District Conference. Their willingness to serve is gratifying and praiseworthy. Yours for the young people, — — — —."

There are increasing evidences of a prayerful interest in the forthcoming General-Conference-Wide Young People's Retreat on the part of old and young alike. It is hoped that a goodly number of young people from every District Conference will be able to attend.

—D. D. Eitzen.

ATTEND THE FIRST GENERAL CONFERENCE Y. P. RETREAT

If you count yourself as one of the young people of the General Conference, this is to you. Are you planning to attend the first General Conference Young People's Retreat, August 12-17, at Camp LaVerne, California? If not, will you believe that it would be possible for you to go, if God wants you there? Begin thinking and praying about it from that angle, and trust that God will very definitely close the door, if you are not to go.

It may mean sacrifice of time and money, but it is only because someone made great sacrifices 75 years ago that our General Conference came into being. No one can predict what a gathering of Mennonite Young People from all the Districts of our Conference may mean to the future of our denomination and Christ's Kingdom among us.

Why should YOU attend? Because,

1. It is the first effort to hold such a gathering, and future Retreats of this type will depend on the success of the first one.
2. It is to be held in CALIFORNIA, which will not occur again before you are too old to participate in a Young People's Retreat.
3. A select group of leaders, representative of our denomination, with a definite message have been secured.
4. You will meet and form lasting friendships with Mennonite young people from all sections of our conference.
5. Your conception of the denomination to which you belong will be enlarged and enriched.
6. You will receive a new vision of Christ and what it means to follow Him, that can transform your life and glorify every task that falls to you to do.

Now perhaps some who are not young people have been interested enough to read to this point. To you I would say that perhaps you are the one who through encouragement, prayer, or financial aid can make it possible for some young person to have a share in this wonderful gathering.

Emma Ruth, Reedley, California.

THE DIAMOND JUBILEE

Psalm 66:8-20

I. The Background of the General Confe ence. Think back to Golgatha, where the see of the Church of the First-Born was sown. Du ing the centuries that followed, the ten maj persecutions by the Roman government glor fied the cross among the believers. The inqu sition instituted by the Roman Church in th Dark Middle Ages paved the road of the cros bearers crimson as they marched down the pat of time. Then came Martin Luther.

The very pith and marrow of the Reform tion was a group of cross-minded believers Holland and Switzerland, known as Dopsgesi de and Anabaptists. Their intensely practic spirit of other-worldliness made them the ta get of Protestants and Catholics alike. The devout farmers and tradesmen under the lea ership of a number of scholarly Christ-center men, insisted on living a consistent Christia life according to the Word of God.

Thereupon the Heavenly Father whom the trusted, set about to prove and refine them manifold trials and martyrdoms (Ps. 66:10-12 Through the sixteenth and seventeenth ce turies they were in the melting-pot. Then G led them into a broader place, that they might take an invoice of themselves in East Prussia, Poland, Galicia, South Russia, and Siberia, and finally He threw open wide the door of America. ("Thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place" Psalm 66:12b.)

From such a background sprang the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America.

II. The Purpose of our General Conference is seen in the impelling determination of our organizers to pay the debt of gratitude they owed to the God of their deliverance.

Listen to the Psalmist.

He will pay his debt of gratitude to God with worship and offerings. Ps. 66:13-15.

He will pay his debt of gratitude by calling together and testifying to all them that fear God. Ps. 66:16-20.

He will pay this debt by proclaiming the glories of God's grace even to the nations. Psalm 66:8-9.

In like manner, the purpose of our conference centered in paying our debt of gratitude, first, through worship and offerings (Ps. 66:13-15); second, through an effort to gather all groups of Mennonites into one bond of fellowship (Ps. 66:16); and third, by proclaiming the glories of God's grace to the nations (Ps. 66:8-9).

So it is safe to say our Conference exists that it may pay an immense debt of gratitude.

The five plans of the Conference platform adopted at the first session, May 28-29, 1860, at West Point, Iowa, demonstrate this:

1. To unite all Menonites in North America.
2. To carry on Home Missions.
3. To carry on Foreign Missions.
4. To promote our own tract-distribution and publication work.
5. To establish a Mennonite educational institution.

(See report of First General Conference, pp. 4-6).

III. And so our Diamond Jubilee is at the door that we may rally again to the payment of our tremendous debt of gratitude. The Jubilee makes possible a concentrated union of effort and faith. It makes possible a more purposeful enthusiasm in our missionary endeavors. It makes possible the recollection of our historical background and purpose in order that we may let the Lord of the Harvest evaluate our cross-bearing faithfulness.

Have you paid a substantial part of your debt of gratitude?

P. R. Schroeder,
President General Conference.

FIRST GENERAL CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S RETREAT

Having been asked to do so, I undertake to set forth a few thoughts regarding the subject. There are three points that I wish to emphasize, namely, The Retreat, The Leaders and Courses, and, last but not least, The Place.

The Retreat.—Jesus advised His own disciples to practice the idea of the Retreat, when He said to them, "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while." Mark 6:31. The Psalmist, possibly out alone with God, in the open, said (Ps. 46:10), "Be still, and know that I am God." With the hurry and rush of today, it is well that we retreat and give time for thought and meditation. Young people need to face life's many problems. This ought to be done under Christian influence and Christian leadership. The Retreat furnishes such a setting. In the brief ten years since the first Mennonite Retreats were held, the idea has justified itself again and again. While engaged as Y. P. Field Secretary, 1933-1934, the writer came in contact with many of our young people who, it was discovered, received a great deal of their inspiration and direction in Christian life in our Retreats. Come ye apart, Mennonite young people, permit the Spirit of God to lay hold on you, to mould and use you. Many tasks await you. "He calleth for thee," still echoes today. Are you listening?

The Leaders. — The Young People's Committee has been working on this program for almost a year. The committee had two or three persons for each assignment, some of these found it impossible to attend, but they are glad for everyone whose name appears on the printed program. They are all tried Y. P. leaders of many years experience. Who of the Pacific District has not heard the soul challenging messages from Emma Ruth? Last year she was one of the Bethel leaders, and all were enriched by her teaching. Each day's study courses start with a Bible study. That is as it ought to be. Rev. A. E. Kreider, a scholarly and sincere Bible student, will lead the Retreaters into the rich treasures of God's Word, so that they might be good "stewards of the mysteries of God." With Martha Burkhalter leading the course in Missions, who can fail to catch her glowing missionary zeal? Her love for Christ and her concern for the unevangelized, needs to be multiplied manyfold. We feel certain that each one who attends the Retreat will be a more ardent supporter of mission work.

The music of the soul needs to be given adequate expression. Church music offers an excellent channel for this expression. One's imagination would be put to test should one try to contemplate the helpful reactions and improvements to church music from the course like Prof. Walter Hohman's "Being A Mennonite Today" by Rev. J. H. Janzen, is a combination of subject and leader that is sure to bring every Retreater to many high points in his religious life and thinking. Holding to Mennonite principles as Rev. Janzen does after the many tests he has gone through in Russia, will make this course live. We feel certain that everyone will be a better Christian and Mennonite who will take this course. The deep heart throbs of a man who has walked with God will come to the fore in the sunset services with Dr. J. H. Langenwalter as leader. The fact that this leader has been a constant Retreat leader is eloquent testimony of his fitness for the assignment.

The California Committee will supply the Camp director. His name is not announced, but from past experience, I can assure you that this individual who looks after the physical wellbeing of the Retreaters, will play no small part in making this Retreat worth while. This same group has suggested that Dr. John A. Hubbard, Los Angeles, bring two evening messages, and we can be well assured that his contribution will only enrich the whole Retreat experience. Aaron Jantzen, who has charge of the early morning hours of each day, has abilities sufficient for the task. His education and Christian service qualify him for this important part in the day's program.

The Place—Camp LaVerne, 55 miles east of Upland, is nestled amid 10,000 foot high mountains, whose sides are covered with mighty trees and a delightful lake at its center, will be a spot never to be forgotten. Inviting paths lead in various directions for those who like mountain hiking. Nature with its varied beauties, so different from the plains, will constantly remind the Retreater that God is a God of beauty as well as of might and strength. Surely you will want to attend this First General Conference Young People's Retreat. If, however, you cannot come, will you please remember the Retreat and the leaders in your prayers, asking God to enrich each one who attends.

THE MINISTER AND THE GREATER MINISTRY

A. J. Neuenschwander, Quakertown, Pa.

In the Old Testament the word Minister or Ministry occurs frequently, and in all but two exceptions it means a service rendered in the religious sphere. When the word is used in the New Testament, it always has a religious meaning. Ephesians 4:11-15, might well serve as a basic passage for our purpose to show the range and variety of offices that is covered by the term, Ministry. In I Cor. 11:28, Paul shows that different men have different gifts, but that all are to be used in building up the faith in the believers. In both of the passages cited God is the one who endows the gift to the individuals and sends them forth to minister.

In the church of today, we are not accustomed to call men by the various names, such as "apostles, prophets, teachers, workers of miracles, helps, governments, diversities of tongues," men who are called to preach are called Ministers. In the familiar parable of the talents, we learn that all men do not have the same gifts and that some have more than one gift or talent. This is amply demonstrated in the office of the ministry as seen today. Some men do have and use more than one talent in their office, while others seemingly exercise their talent in only one main field. Those who planned and assigned the subject, appear to be of the opinion that the office of the Minister today covers the different offices as mentioned in the New Testament; and that each minister ought to seek to enlarge his ministry, so that in some adequate manner to cover this wider field of service.

God's Word must be and remain the basis for the minister's messages. The Holy Spirit of God must needs be the source of power and inspiration for the minister, or else, no matter how enlarged, it will not have depth to acomplish its God given task.

It is not the intention of the writer in this paper to be critical to the point of minimizing the worth of the more limited ministry. If a man uses the talent that the Lord has given him to its fullest extent, no one has a right to say that it comes short of the ideal of the greater ministry. We need to be careful not to misjudge a ministry that seems narrow from a geographical point of view, because from a spiritual and moral point it may reach to the ends of the world.

The high and far-reaching goal, "unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ," requires a manysided emphasis in the ministry. We must constantly remind ourselves that this Gospel is for rich and poor, educated and unlearned, for every race and nation, and as such it must be made to appeal to all men. We might, therefore, name and outline briefly the different fields in which the Christian minister can enter with help and profit, "for the perfecting of the saints." If, in the pursuit of these worthwhile fields of endeavor, a man would overlook and neglect the spiritual care and nurture of the individuals near at hand, the wider ministry could hardly succeed to the full extent. To look after the spiritual welfare of the sheep at hand is a first task, only the wider field should not be neglected. Well can we apply the Master's words from Matt. 23:23, "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."

The greater ministry ought to include such fields for spiritual cultivation as: Apologetics, Church Extension, Christian Statesmanship, Christian Education, Evangelism, Missionary Enterprise, Social Service, Revivalism.

Apologetics is that branch of Christian theology which deals with the defense and proof of Christian doctrine and belief. In the early centuries of the Christian era men like Justin, Martyr and Irenaeus stoutly defended the Christian doctrines and belief against stoicism and other destructive sects. This great field of Christian thinking has been cultivated during most of the centuries since Justin. Today with the attempted eclecticism of some church and mission workers, there is real need to keep the Christian faith pure and unadulterated. This greater ministry requires a deep faith in, and understanding of the Christian tenets, also a wide range of knowledge of non-Christian philosophies and religions in order to clearly set forth to the Christian church, and to the world, the distinctions that are so vital. Certain men because of their natural endowments become leaders in this field, but the ordinary minister needs to instruct as well as warn his flock against these subtle dangers. This will require wide reading and keen analysis.

Opportunities for Church Extension present themselves in periods. The Colonial expansion offered an extraordinary opportunity to European churches for expansion. Francis Asbury, sent to America by John Wesley, the great Methodist leader, is an outstanding example of what can be accomplished in this field. The opening of the West during the Nineteenth Century and the settling in these wide areas of scattered church members, called forth extensive church extension work in all of our denominations. Rev. John Baer is perhaps the outstanding worker in this field in our General Conference. When a country becomes more thickly settled, church extension decreases to a considerable extent. Still new opportunities in this field present themselves and every Gospel minister needs to have heart and mind open to respond immediately whenever opportunity presents itself.

Christian Statesmanship opens a broad vista to the minister of vision. In his book, "Nationalism and Religion in America 1774-1789," Dr. E. F. Humphrey shows the far-reaching influence the church had on the Colonial Empire and how these characteristics were finally woven into the national life of the United States. Anyone who is acquainted with the Old Testament prophets knows how definitely they took a hand in the statesmanship of Israel. Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Amos stand out head and shoulders above the other Israelites in their interest and concern for the welfare of Israel. While Paul was an ambassador of God through Christ Jesus,—first, last, and always, —he nevertheless used his Roman citizenship frequently. The teachings of Jesus and Paul contain many fundamental principles of good citizenship. Any minister who seeks to proclaim the full New Testament and Old Testament teachings needs to be interested in and concerned about Christian Statesmanship.

This can cover a goodly number of subjects, such as Christian Citizenship, National, moral, and social reform problems such as prohibition, etc., International relations, Peace and War, Principles of Government and related subjects. Certainly no true minister would be guilty of playing politics. In fact, he needs to be and teach principles that are above partizanship. From the pulpit no one ought to be able to tell to which political party the minister hold allegiance, if any, or if he recently changed. Every minister ought to inspire his members to be better citizens because they are Christians. One can easily understand that every minister does not have the same capacity to grasp national and international problems. But this does not excuse him from showing genuine interest, and a willingness to enlarge the interest of his flock in them.

One of the vital elements of the greater ministry that needs emphasis in our Mennonite church is Christian Education. This does not mean that the weal or woe of a denomination depends only on her emphasis of Christian Education, but it does play a very important part in the growth and usefulness of a denomination. Before we go any further into this topic, permit me to make one point emphatic. Ministers who are interested in the far-reaching influence of the Gospel, should note that it is Christian Education that ought to receive a much greater impetus than it has in the past. Because of the system that is prevalent in our country that public taxes are to be used for public education, many adherents of the Christian religion for economy favor only public or tax supported education. Anyone who appreciates the worth of the Christian religion, ought to be willing to make some sacrifice in order to perpetuate and enlarge the field of Christian Education. When the State controls education, it is only natural that education is given direction, color and content as it suits the State. This direction, color and content is often unsympathetic and at times antagonistic to principles that are vital to real Christian practice; hence it devolves upon the Church and in a particular way upon the ministry to instruct the membership of the church on this essential matter.

At first thought it would seem that every Christian minister would be keenly interested in Evangelism, but such is not the case. There has been a tendency in the past century to delegate the evangelistic work to a special class of ministers. In some instances these individuals were so genuine in their efforts that only good results came from their work. It is, however, admitted among evangelists themselves that some have in the past left very undesirable situations because of certain temperamental peculiarities. Undue emphasis of finance in connection with evangelistic campaigns has caused many to look with disfavor on the professional evangelist. This situation has left an unsavory taste in the church, both lay and clergy, and as a result evangelism suffered. Then such men as Dr. Charles L. Gooddell and Dr. George W. Truett and others of equal spiritual fervor began to emphasize that each pastor ought to be his own evangelist, and many have followed in this suggestion. Others, perhaps because of a feeling of unfamiliarity, or not being ready to pay the price, have somewhat neglected this necessary work. It does require a great deal of effort, study and prayer to be one's own evangelist, but it is such a fertile and noteworthy field that many a minister who has hitherto hesitated to enter into this avenue of work needs to pay the price and enter into this rewarding service. The increase of this practice will have a tendency to diminish the number of less desirable evangelists, and it will at the same time have the unfailing result of strengthening the local ministry and the church. There will still be ample room for the worthy evangelist, who by his life and fruitful work will lend strength and inspiration for this vital work.

It might be argued that the missionary enterprise has always been an essential part of every Christian minister's interests. This is as it ought to be. It is a fact, however, one can find ministers who have a woefully narrow conception of the missionary enterprise. Some ministers have an interest in this phase of the Lord's work, but it is a warped and narrow conception. For this reason it is well that the ministry be constantly on guard lest this fruitful field be neglected. We cannot all be missionary statesmen like John R. Mott or Robert E. Speer. The fruitfulness of these men and others like J. Hudson Taylor, John G. Paton, Wilford T. Grenfell, ought to be a constant challenge to every minister to give proper emphasis to this phase of the Christian enterprise. The lay membership of our churches is bound to get some of the current opinion that is afloat that the Gospel is not as absolutely essential for man's salvation as was once considered to be. The minister must be able to show to his flock that if the Gospel is not true FOR ALL, it is not true AT ALL. In order to build up a strong missionary spirit, the truth of Acts 4:12 where we read, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," must be heralded far and wide with renewed conviction.

About a decade ago, Social Service was the main note at certain conferences. Even its present day advocates would agree that it was overemphasized. Today, with many other problems confronting us, many are, I am afraid, neglecting this noteworthy avenue of Christian service. Social Service did not receive the recognition due to it from many quarters, because of the liberal leanings of certain of its advocates. It seems that we are far enough removed from the time when it was overworked, and we have seen its worth as a Christian enterprise that the general ministry ought to awaken to its possibilities. Men are not saved by being given better homes or improved working conditions. But it must be admitted that if, and when, the Church rightly concerns herself about the hardships and burdens of the underprivileged, they do recognize the workings of the Master in those who call themselves by His name, and as a result they will more readily respond to His call. It is well for the minister to enter into this phase of the larger ministry.

It takes little or no effort to glide down stream, but one's mettle and muscle is tested if he desires to row his boat upstream. One can float downstream and be carried to the salty sea, but to reach the life-giving springs one must stem the current and even overcome it. The same truth holds in religious life. It is comparatively easy to glide with the times and to take things as they come. Revivalism can well be compared to the upstream course of spiritual life. Man is a creature of habit and ordinarily dislikes to leave the familiar beaten path. There have been times and seasons when the revival fires had died down to a faint flicker. The Church as an organism still continued, but she failed woefully in her Christ-given task. It took men and women of vital spiritual life to rekindle the revival flame and then the dormant seasons changed into seasons of fruitfulness. Charles Haddon Spurgeon is perhaps the best example of such a revivalism, that I can cite. He was not the professional evangelist type. He was a man who stayed for years in the same pulpit and made that warm and productive for Christ because of the regnant spirit of revivalism that was constantly flowing forth. His life and work have resulted in thousands of ministers seeking in their own way to light the revival fires by the grace and guidance of the Holy Spirit. Every minister should feel that this is a field that he should try to cultivate, because here the richest harvests can be gathered.

Time and space forbid treatment of such Christian Home Nurture, and related topics. These are fields of worth and are "white unto the harvest" waiting for development. Who will say with Isaiah, "Here am I, send me"?

In order that the ministry of today might enter into the greater ministry, there needs to be, in the mind of the writer, a recurrence of the experience Pietism as it broke forth over Europe two centuries after the Reformation. Spener and Franke were the two leaders of this blessed movement which resulted in a renewed Bible study by the masses, a revitalized preaching as directed by the Holy Spirit, and a great wave of consecration by the layety to live lives separated and consecrated for Christ. The influence of pietism was perpetuated in the Moravian Brethren. Count von Zinzendorf, the leader, did not desire to build a new denomination, but rather he desired that his friends form a great evangelizing agency which should as Dr. Newman says, "transcend the limits of denominationalism and be simply Christian."

If, and when, this renewal of spiritual life comes, and it can come at any time we want it bad enough, then the Christian ministry can build up the believers according to our text, Ephesians 4:11-15.

HOSPITAL WORK IN INDIA

Basna, via Riapur, C. P., India.

As we review the past year of hospital work, we can say with Samuel, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us," but we also feel that the Lord says to us, "There is yet much land to be possessed."

The past year there was an appreciable increase in the number of outpatients and in income, otherwise there was not much change in the number of patients and operations. There were 5100 outpatients and 4735 return visits. This includes patients on tour and in the dispensary recently opened in Basna. There were a total of 440 operations, of which 49 were cataract. Of the cataract operations 95% were successful. The income for the year was Rupees 1520. July was a record month with 720 new patients and 1090 return visits, an average of about sixty treatments daily.

Following is a classification of the operations performed the past two years, which might interest some.

Operations 1933 and 1934

Cataract, 95; Entropion, 18; Iridectomy, 22; Tarsectomy with mucous graft, 7; Corneal ulcers cauterized, 27; Expression, 7; For prolapse Ani, 6; Tonsillectomies, 7; Abdominal Tumors, 6; Other tumors, 97; Lithotomy (bladder stones), 12; Abscesses opened, 89; Abdomen tapped, 11; Debridement, 19; Removal of foreign bodies from ear and nose, 21; Hemorrhoidectomy, 8; Fracture and dislocation, 16; Bone operations, 7; Circumcision, 27; Obstretric, normal 18, abnormal 6; Teeth extracted, 182; Miscellaneous, 164.

THE CHURCH OFFERING

Again and again we hear church people who proudly call themselves "loyal," say that the church is "bleeding them to death," by offerings. A certain brother said that every time he goes to church they put the offering plate under his nose. It was discovered, however, that he only went to church once a month.

The giving in our conference averages a little over TEN DOLLARS a year for all purposes. If this is bleeding any one to death, the person must be somewhat anaemic. Following is a selected clipping that is stimulating:

Musings of a Collection Plate

By Charles F. Banning

Quite a crowd here this morning. Wonder how many pennies I'll get when the offering is taken. It's funny how many folks who will pay a dollar for lunch or two dollars for a seat at a theater will piously get off that joke about the widow's mite. I am going to organize a union among the collection baskets and have a union scale, "Nothing under a nickel." I had a talk with the other baskets in the church office this week. They did not get any more than I did. It does not seem to make much difference whether we have a large or a small crowd. We get about the same. Of course, we cannot tell what is in the envelopes, but the congregation averaged less than four cents apiece in the loose offering last Sunday. Where could a crowd go and get as much in an hour and pay so little for it? The young people in the evening service do a lot better. They averaged over five cents apiece last Sunday night. A collection basket sees some funny things. Last Sunday one man was badly scared. He could not find a dime for quite a while, and thought he was going to have to give a quarter. I heard one man tell the preacher how much he enjoyed the sermon. I hadn't the heart to tell the preacher how much that fellow puts in the plate each Sunday. A stranger came in one day, and when they passed the basket along the seat, no one put anything in it, so he thought he was not supposed to, and put his offering back into his pocket. He had a quarter in his hand, too. One basket has been sick all week. A man dropped in a five dollar bill last Sunday, and the basket hasn't recovered from the shock yet. Sometimes I wonder what children think of me and the church and the preacher when their parents pay ten cents apiece for cigars, fifty cents to go to Keith's, and then give me a nickel on Sunday. I am glad the pastor has the children march out before the offering. I wonder if he does that so the children will not see what their parents give when the offering is taken. I notice most of the new members use envelopes and pay regularly. It makes a basket feel good when every member of a family drops in his envelope every Sunday. I think I'll suggest to the preacher that he have a testimony meeting some Sunday and let the collection baskets give their testimony. Some folks who will not make a pledge, but put their offering in the loose collection, might vote against such a meeting. Here comes Harry Schell and the ushers. Our week's work will soon be over. As usual, I suppose one-tenth of the folks will put in nine-tenths of the offering. Salvation seems to be free for some folks, but rather expensive for others.

I AM GROWING OLD

Psalm 92:15

They tell me—I am growing old,
I know it, — without being told,
This shaky house, in which I stay,
Grows weak and weaker every day.
But I have got a "heavenly hold,"
And so I am NOT growing old!
My hair is getting gray and white,
And crowns this old "young head" all right!
My dim eyes cannot plainly see,
It is not like it used to be,—
Still in my Lord I put my trust,—
For though my eyesight may be lost,
The "Man of Sorrows" is "my Light,"
And makes my darkest moments bright.
Because He washed my sins away—
And I am happy night and day!—
The lines that in my face you see
At MY AGE do not bother me.
And if I'm shaky when I walk,
And not more fluently can talk,—
Still I am glad, and will not care,
Because I'm sure God HEARS my prayer!
My hearing, too, is getting weak,
Still I can hear the Master speak,—
When He extends His gracious call:
"Come unto Me! Come one and all!"
So, though the "outer man" decay,
The "inner man grows" day by day,—
And if—reflected—you should see
The image of my Lord—in me,—
So that His love through me is told,
I surely am not growing old!
My pilgrim's staff I'll soon lay down,
And change it for a heavenly crown,
And when my body lies at rest,
My joyous soul in heaven is blest;
So I proclaim with happy tongue:
"I'm NEVER OLD, but EVER YOUNG!"

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS ARE CHINESE PROBLEM

The question of the place of the conscientious objector in China is emerging. It has come under the spotlight by reason of a government order, recently issued, that from April to July 1935 all middle school students are to take military training in some place. There has been some uncertainty as to the relation of this order to the regular work. One small group of Christians in Shanghai discussed it but came to no decision. Some time since six members of the Friends' mission in West China protested against such training being introduced into the West China Union University in opposition to their principles and their agreement with the university. Later those Friends on the staff of the university resigned. Their resignations were accepted though they still teach. Only a small fraction of the Christians in China see this issue as clearly or as definitely as do these Friends. It is defended, even by some Christians, as being more a matter of character training and of political guidance rather than of militaristic regimentation as such. Perhaps so! Conscientious Chinese objectors are neither very numerous nor articulate. Hints here and there show, however, that there are some. Their position is even more difficult than that of students in the United States since in China both private and government schools are subject to the educational regulations of the state. Kwangsi is, it appears, willing to provide alternate service if and when sincere objectors appear. In two Christian institutions when graduating students failed to get the government stamp on their diplomas because of objection to military training the institution concerned gave them its own certificate. The issue is a live one, but not much open attention is being given to it in China. It seems likely to go by default, though there may be much discussion going on under the surface. Many of these Chinese people seem to be in a state of mind that makes them willing to follow any lead so it is a lead; which may easily become, of course, a prelude to fascism.—Christian Century.

CHURCHES KEPT EMPTY BY RADIO PROGRAMS

One of our leading Episcopal rectors found that during recent months his evening congregation had sadly declined. He made the rounds of his homes, asking why the people had stopped coming at night. What do you suppose he learned? In eight out of ten cases the people confessed that the attractive musical programs and witty speeches on the radio kept them at home. Inquiry made in several quarters leads us to believe that only a very few churches in Pittsburgh have evening congregations of any size. It is doubtful whether, on the whole, these congregations are as large as they were a year ago. Our friend, the rector, is quite sure the radio is to blame. But is this the whole story? What has happened to the evening service all over the country? Some wise pastors are devoting their evenings to their young people and perhaps, in the end, these ministers will have more to show for their efforts.—Selected.

FACTS ABOUT BIBLE DISTRIBUTION

As an illustration of the fact that there are still many homes in the United States without Bibles one of the workers of the American Bible Society reported that out of 7,646 families which he visited during 1933 he found 2,953 having no Bible—almost forty per cent. In a western state one family admitted that for four generations they had been without a Bible. When we remember that more than one-half of the world lives in Bibleless homes the necessity laid upon Christian forces for furnishing the Word of God is at once apparent.

The American Bible Society faces many publication problems in supplying Scriptures annually from 150 to 175 different languages. When Scriptures are needed for a remote tribe the edition will likely involve special technical processes. The demand for Penny Portions at times is so great that editions of a million or more are printed at one time. Frequently publication must be in two languages in parallel columns.

The erection and dedication during 1933 of new modern Bible Houses in Rio de Janeiro and Tokyo will aid the American Bible Society in increasing interest in Bible work in these two countries.

In crossing an altitude of 14,000 feet in Peru a colporteur of the American Bible Society, Don Pedro Diaz, suffered so much from exposure that his hands and face were swollen and blackened and his lips broken so that for a day or two he could scarcely open his mouth. "But," he reported, "I circulated the Word in many places which have never been visited by an evangelical missionary or colporteur and most of the others were only visited once by a colporteur more than thirty years ago."

2,969 volumes of Scriptures for the blind, furnished at the special price of twenty-five cents a volume, although costing from $2 to $8 a volume, were distributed from the Bible House in New York City last year in seven different embossed systems. The American Bible Society is in its 99th year of supplying embossed Scriptures to the Blind.

A growing interest in the Bible among the 25,000 Indians in the Pacific coast states has been reported to the American Bible Society by its Pacific agency. It has long been a question among these Indians as to whether the Bible was a real religious help to them. They recognized the Bible as the white man's Book and they feared it would destroy their old and cherished Indian culture; but they have come to believe that the Bible reaches a forward-looking religion and possesses the promise of life that they seek, so there has been a marked encouragement in the reading of it.

Most of the younger people read the Bible in English, but the older generation want the Scriptures in the language they understand. The American Bible Society has printed some part of the Bible in fifteen different Indian dialects spoken throughout America.

Topeka, Indiana, July 2, 1935. To Pastors and Religious Leaders: Some time ago a card was sent to you announcing our Young People's Retreat, which will be held at Shipshewana Lake, August 5-11th. Please take note that this Retreat will be held for one week only, opening on Monday and closing Sunday noon. There will be some who will find it possible to be away from their work for one week, whereas it would be impossible for them to attend if it were to cut into another week. We will try this plan for at least this year.

Registration will take place on Monday afternoon and the fee will be $2 (two dollars) for each Retreater, with an additional fee of 50c (fifty cents) for each Retreater for ground privileges. Persons rooming and boarding at the dormitory and hotel will not be required to pay this 50c fee. Board and room at the dormitory or hotel will be $7.50.

Most of the Retreaters have found it more practical to get a cottage, thus providing their own board and room. Cottages rent all the way from $12 to $25, depending on the size. Each group must have a competent chaperon if they wish to stay in a cottage. As soon as possible notify the undersigned as to the probable size of your group in order that the proper reservations may be made for you.

NINETY AND NINE

There were ninety and nine that safely lay
In the shelter of the fold,
But one was out on the hills away,
Far off from the gates of gold,
Away on the mountains wild and bare,
Away from the tender Shepherd's care.

But none of the ransomed ever knew
How deep were the waters crossed;
Nor how dark was the night that the Lord passed through,
Ere He found His sheep that was lost.
Out in the desert He heard its cry,
'Twas helpless and sick and ready to die.

GENERAL CONFERENCE RETREAT

Those who are interested in the spiritual growth of our small denomination will rejoice when they read the program for the FIRST General Conference Young People's Retreat, which is to be held at Camp LaVerne immediately following the 75th Anniversary Session of the General Conference at Upland, Calif. For more than ten years we have held retreats in some of our District Conferences, but this will be the FIRST General Conference Retreat.

To get a fair estimate of what such a retreat will mean to our denomination, we must know and appreciate what has been acomplished at our District Conference Retreats. Briefly these results may be summarized as follows:

1. Spiritual inspiration and the deepening of the spiritual life of hundreds of young people.

2. The teaching of our Mennonite principles in regard to War, Peace and Nonresistance which are quite often not emphasized sufficiently in certain congregations.

3. A greater knowledge of and deeper interest in the various enterprises of our denomination, such as missions, education, periodicals, and publication work, young people's activities. Meeting with leaders in these fields often brings young people into a vital and lasting relationship with one of these enterprises.

4. Helpful and often very interesting contacts with young people of other congregations which help us to understand each other better.

5. The creation of a spirit of unity and goodfellowship that will enable the young people of today to pull together when they become the leaders of tomorrow.

These are only a few of the results and many more might be mentioned without telling even a fraction of the good that has been done at Greenlane, Lake Shipshewana, Bethel College, Camp LaVerne, and the other places at which District Retreats have been held in the past. Now the time is ripe to bring these young people from the various District Conferences together at the Camp LaVerne Retreat for the whole General Conference. Perhaps if some of those who are leaders of our denomination today could have brought together as young people at some retreat say twenty, thirty, or even forty years ago, we might have a more tolerant attitude and less unnecessary friction at some sessions of our District and General Conferences.

A good many people fail to realize that some of the greatest problems that confront our denomination today can be traced directly or indirectly to the fact that as a denomination ours is probably one of the most loosely organized and most widely scattered for its size. To overcome some of these problems and secure greater unity of spirit and action in the future those who will be the leaders of tomorrow should get together now as often as possible and under such favorable conditions as those which will be found at Camp LaVerne. In the words of that familiar song, "The more we get together, the happier we'll be."

It should also be noted that the Retreat follows the historic 75th Anniversary session of the General Conference. It will be well for the young people and maybe some that are no longer so young in years, to retire from these sessions and at the Retreat take time to look ahead to the coming years in a spirit of prayerful consecration and rededication to the ideals of Christ and the great leaders who have through the years sought to express His love for a needy world by the various enterprises of our denomination. Can those who will lead the activities of our young people during the next three years do anything more worth while than to attend the Retreat and receive new strength and inspiration?

The Young People's Committee of the General Conference is to be congratulated for their vision in planning the Retreat. All who can possibly do so should plan to attend the Camp LaVerne Retreat instead of going to some other conference or convention not connected with our denomination. F. J. Wiens.

CHRISTIAN HOSPITALITY

A very fine example of Christian kindliness and hospitality is the invitation coming from the Rev. A. H. Leaman, in charge of our church in Chicago, offering to meet all the brethren coming in on the Pennsylvania at Englewood Station. From there his party will take us to our Chicago church, give us supper, and arrange a special service for us and then take us to the Santa Fe station in time for our train, leaving for Upland.

Such instances of Christian brotherliness show forth the difference in spirit of the Christian church and worldly organizations. Such a manifestation of love will do much to put us all into the spirit of Christian cooperation and love at our General Conference sessions. May God grant us this manner of love.

How Selfishness Reacts Upon Us

Genesis 27:1-3; 18-29; 32:9-11

One of the fundamental principles of Jesus' teachings is found in Mark 8:35, "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's the same shall find it." It seems like a paradox, but experience has proven it a fundamental truth of life. Unselfishness acts like a boomerang. The man who gives, will receive in large measure.

The law of stewardship and tithing is based on this law. A certain Christian had determined to tithe all her earnings, but when the first pay check came she thought she could not afford it. But when she learned that the board had cut her exactly 10%, she determined that she now would tithe. In the passing years she has found much joy in sharing with her Lord. She testifies that her money seems to go much farther. Dentist and doctor bills seem to be much less than they used to be. The Lord is blessing her.

Examples of selfishness abound on every hand. Jacob stole his brother's birthright and was forced to flee for his life. For over twenty years he lived in continual fear. It was not worth what it cost. It never is. The law of sowing and reaping ever holds true. A thing selfishly or dishonestly obtained will not prove a blessing in any way, shape, or form.

Living in a grasping and selfish world it is natural for the child to be selfish and unless he is taught to share and be unselfish in all of his attitudes, we will not have a character filled with Christian grace. The world and all worldly institutions are based too much on the power of force, self-assertion, and self-aggrandizement. Jesus taught and lived a different gospel, He taught the gospel of giving, "Greater love hath no man than this that a man give his life for his friends."

Questions

1. Is a child naturally selfish or unselfish? How shall we train the selfish child to become unselfish?
2. Why do we find so much selfishness in the world?
3. How can we best inculcate the spirit of unselfishness into all the walks of life?
4. What does Jesus teach on this topic?
5. Give a number of illustrations on the folly of selfishness.
6. What does selfishness do to us when we are selfish?
7. Can the nations of the world become one large family by living the Gospel of Christ? Does this cure hold the answer to our labor struggles?

Things Jesus Was Sure Of

Matthew 6:25-34; 10:29-31; John 8:29

Convictions born out of experience are very valuable and do much to bolster up life at its best, but stubbornness growing out of prejudice is utter selfishness. All the world admires an individual who has some convictions and is willing to stand by them no matter what the cost may be. No one has any love for the "wishy washy" being who is like a reed shaken in the wind. For that reason we like that man Paul when he says, "I know," and "I am persuaded." His firm convictions grew out of a rich experience.

There were certain things of which Jesus had a firm conviction. His whole program of the spiritual life consisted of convictions. Jesus early in His ministry felt that He could not resort to the spectacular and miraculous, but that the Kingdom must come through regenerated individuals. The motive power for success comes not by force and regeneration, but by a simple trust, barring worry and fear, together with a life which is lived in the spirit of unselfishness, meekness, and purity. There was nothing that He was more sure of than the love of God His heavenly Father, and concern He has for every human being.

Questions

1. What is the difference between convictions and prejudices?
2. How did Jesus come to have His convictions?
3. What is the relation between youth and old age in the number of things they are sure of?
4. What is the value in having foundational convictions?
5. What is the value in feeling God a mighty refuge in warding off storms and worries?
6. What are some of the things Jesus was sure of?
7. Of what should youth today be sure of?

How The Laws Of God Work For Our Good

Genesis 1:29-31; Romans 8:28

God, our Heavenly Father, is a God of order. When He made the world He did all things in order. He made man the crown of His creation and He would have our lives orderly. Strange, but true, all that the child of God experiences works out for his good. It is hard to believe. We are willing to believe that it is true in respect to the good things, but we question as to whether pain and sorrow minister to our good. But Paul wrote it and he knew more of the reverses of life than most of us are called upon to experience.

Recently a mother who had been widowed about six months prior, remarked how good God is being to her. She told how He is blessing her on every hand, the chickens have been laying so well, she had such good success in raising pullets, her crops are growing nicely, her farmer and neighbors are so helpful and kind. Over against that have we not all experienced that when most everything is going well with us there is some lurking evil to keep us humble and close to God? Let us thank Him and then wonder with Adoniram Judson as to how God is going to get us out of that mess this time. Yes, we love God's laws. He is good.

Questions

1. How do the natural laws operate to our good?
2. Do natural laws and the divine will conflict?
3. Do laws of the state and the home operate for our good or harm?
4. Can you name one law of the decalog that is not for the good of man?
5. Discuss the truth and implications of Romans 8:28.
6. How can we learn God's laws for our lives?

INTERMEDIATE WORKSHOP

How May We Enrich Our Friendships?

I John 1:7; Prov. 18:24

"The purchase price of a friend is to be one."

Pre-Prayer
May we be a true friend.

Questions and Thoughts

We cannot imagine anything so desolate or useless as a life without friendships. But the Master Friend tells us that we must count the cost if we would travel that way. There may be rough places which will hurt our feet and shadowed ways which will try our path. There are conditions which must be met, laws of growth which must be obeyed, responsibilities which must be accepted, if we would know true friendship. Friendship requires steady self-control and calls for a gay, sweet courage to meet disappointments strongly, bear heartaches bravely, and make sacrifices gallantly. Is the cost too great to pay? Or shall we go adventuring, sure that the treasures are worth infinitely more than any cost we can possibly be called on to pay; certain that we cannot go astray if we will take the Great Friend as our Guide!

If we have decided that friendship-treasures are worth whatever they may cost, the next thing is to ask ourselves what conditions we must meet if we are to have real and lasting friendships. What qualities must we bring to this most glorious of adventurings if we would win and keep true friends?

When you were little, did you ever play "Let's pretend"? It was fun. And it was a fair game, too, because you began it by saying, "Let's pretend," and so nobody ever thought you were really hurt or crying or angry, when it was just pretend. But suppose that now that you are older you should pretend that you were something different from what you really are, or make believe that you felt something that you do not really feel at all, without ever telling that you were just pretending? Would you be the kind of person who could have real friends, if you were like that? Read Romans 12:9 and I John 3:18.

Do you agree with Emerson when he says that there is nothing more fundamental to real friendship than sincerity?

Can you love anyone you cannot trust and of whose sincerity you are not sure? Did the Master Friend? Did He ever stop loving Judas? Can we ever really help anyone whom we do not love, and do the people we cannot quite trust perhaps need help more than anyone else? But can there ever be a full friendship, with its joyous giving of each to the other without such perfect love and trust as to cast out fear? How complete must my trust be if I am to know the real joy of friendship?

If I follow the Master Friend's way of loving, how long will I love my friends? Read John 13:1. How strong and steadfast must my love be if it meets the test the Master's great apostle put? Read the first three words of I Cor. 13:8.

Do you think that a girl who is an "Indian giver" in friendship can keep friends? Do you suppose that in the end she may even lose the power to win new friends?

Do you consider steadfastness desirable or an actually necessary characteristic of real friendship?

If we follow in the steps of the Great Friend of all the world, each new friendship will but add new richness and beauty to the old ones. "He who has a thousand friends has not one to spare."

A friendship that does not cost anything is not worth anything.

The reason we do not have more friends is because we do not want any more or do not know how to make them.

You can spoil a possible friendship by demanding too much for yourself, but not by demanding too much of yourself.

A friend who cannot bear kindly criticism cannot bear any of friendship's real responsibilities and privileges.

Do you want to retain old friends? Here are a few ways:

Keep your promises with them. Share a few real troubles with them. Do not expect them to be perfect any more than yourself. Write them a good letter every once in a while; Sunday afternoon is a good time. Keep a list of their birthdays and remember them.

Friendship can bear anything except insincerity. In that blighting atmosphere it withers and dies.

We need friends in adversity to comfort us. We need them in prosperity to show us how little prosperity is worth without them. We need them in everyday life to lighten its drudgery; we need them in our religion to prove to us the nearness of the brotherhood.

"What is the secret of your life"? someone once asked Charles Kingsley. "Tell me that I may make my life beautiful too." "I have a Friend," he answered.

"A friend loveth at all times." Prov. 17:17.

I Would Be True

Ps. 103:17, 18

Consecration Meeting

"I would be true, for there are those who trust me!
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.
I would be a friend to all, the foe, the friendless
I would be giving, and forget the gift;
I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up and laugh, and love, and lift."

A shining light comes from an even wick, through a clear and clean chimney, and is fed with plenty of oil. A shade of pink and gold does not increase the brightness of the light if underneath the chimney is dusky and the wick ragged and black. Neither does a light shine brightly through a black and smoky chimney. So our chimney needs to be polished with sincerity and the wick trimmed with truth if we want our light to shine. A pink shade of appearing better than we are can not increase the brightness of a dull light, nor does the smokiness of appearing worse than we are make us good lights. The clear, steady light of being what we seem, makes us lights fit for a candlestick or to be set on a hill.

Howard Arnold Walter was graduated from Princeton in 1905, he entered Hartford Theological Seminary, and after completing his work there he became a minister. "In 191 John R. Mott invited him to become Literary Secretary to Mohammedan students for the Y M. C. A. of India and Ceylon. He had a weak heart and the doctors told him that he would live but five years if he went to India. But his creed, as expressed in his hymn, contained the couplets:
'I would be strong, for there is much to suffer
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.'
Knowing his weakness he went to Lahare wrought a remarkable work among the students there, and lived a Christian life that was a real inspiration to hundreds."

When Mr. Walter was given permission to return to his home for Christmas, knowing that if he left his work it would suffer, and realizing that he was needed in his tasks, he refused the furlough. Instead of going home he wrote this poem, "I Would Be True," and sent it to his mother.

Great Modern Christians: Schweitzer

II Cor. 4:1-11

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

Pre-Prayer

That we may have open hearts and minds, and hear the Master speak to us, and be able to pray the prayer, "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt."

Doctor Albert Schweitzer is one of the most foremost missionaries in the world simply because he gives himself so willingly and so thoroughly to his task under the banner of Christ. He could be a leader in at least three other kinds of work, but the black man of Africa provides his field.

Schweitzer is a theologian and philosopher. He filled well his place as a teacher in the University of Strassburg, Germany, and made a mark as a writer. From boyhood he was a student of music, and particularly of the pipe organ, and is regarded as one of the world's best informed men on this subject. "At the age of thirty-eight he turned from the exquisite harmonies of the great organs of Westminster Abbey and Notre Dame to the production of heart melody in the lives of the backward people on the west coast of equatorial Africa."

He is one of the world's leading authorities on the musical compositions of Bach. But with all these achievements, when the call came to go to Africa, he began a rigorous course in medical training, and in the capacity of a doctor of medicine went out to Africa in 1913. He and his wife, a qualified nurse, began work near the River Ogowe in Equatorial Africa. The reason he chose this place was because he had been told that a doctor was badly needed there on account of the constantly spreading sleeping sickness.

"The actual expenses of the undertaking, however, I had to provide myself, and to that I devoted what I had earned by giving organ concerts, together with the profits from my book on Bach, which had appeared in German, French, and English. — — — When he left Europe, the undertaking was securely financed for two years, the expenses — apart from the journey out and back — being as I reckoned, about 15,000 francs a year, and this calculation proved to be very nearly correct."

"As I look back over the work of two months and a half, I can only say that a doctor is needed, terribly needed, here; that for a huge distance round the natives avail themselves of this help, and that with comparatively small means he can accomplish a quite disproportionate amount of good. The need is terrible."

"How shall I sum up the resulting experience of these four and a half years? On the whole it has confirmed my view of the considerations which drew me from the world of learning and art to the primeval forest? 'The natives who live in the bosom of nature are never so ill as we are, and do not feel pain so much.' That is what my friends used to say to me, to try to keep me at home, but I have come to see that such statements are not true. — — — Physical misery is great everywhere out here. Are we justified in shutting our eyes and ignoring it because our European newspapers tell us nothing about it? We civilized people have been spoilt. — — — Will each of my readers think what the last ten years of his family history would have been if they had been passed without medical or surgical help of any sort? It is time that we should wake from slumber and face our responsibilities."

"Believing it, as I do, to be my life's task to fight on behalf of the sick under far-off stars, I appeal to the sympathy which Jesus and religion generally call for, but at the same time I call to my help also our most fundamental ideas and reasonings. We ought to see the work that needs doing for the colored folk in their misery, not as a mere "good work," but as a duty that must not be shirked."

The call is just as great today. What are you doing about it? Have you considered the call of helping the needy in Africa, in person? For the last three years we have had a doctor on the field, the first one in the history of our field. Are you helping the Endeavorers to keep that work going or just riding along as an Endeavorer and not sharing in the great work? Truly, the harvest is great, but the laborers are few.

Topic.—Daring To Be Different

Daniel 3:1-30

"Dare to do right, dare to be true;
You have a work no other can do.
Do it so bravely, so nobly, so well,
That angels will hurry the good news to tell."

It is easy to do right when with others who do. If friends all go to Sunday School on Sunday, one wants to do the same. None of you would want to speak unkindly about people while with friends who always speak kindly. Many people who are sinful at heart act almost the same as Christians when with Christians. But how about doing right when those with whom we work or play laugh at us for it? A boy or girl who dares to be different even when others mock or tease, is truly brave. A young girl was once asked why she smoked. She answered, "Oh, everybody does it"! That was not true, and even if it had been, wrong is still wrong no matter how many people do it. Many a boy has started to do things that he knew were wrong just because others told him he wasn't a man unless he did them. Anyone can go with the crowd, but the brave boy or girl says "no" and means it when tempted to do wrong. That can not always be done if we try alone, but with God's help it can.

If we can't bear being laughed at, what woul we do if someone should threaten to kill us i we refused to sin?

A story is told of a group of Scotch children who many years ago were told by soldier that they would be shot unless they told wher their parents were hidden. Their parents wer Christians and would surely be killed if the were found. The children huddled together i fear, but would not tell. Finally the office ordered them to kneel to be shot. All but on knelt. He said, "I've done nothing wrong, I'l die standing up." The rifles were only loade with powder to frighten and not kill the children, but they did not know that and knelt t be shot rather than be untrue to their parent or to Christ. One little girl suggested that the sing, so the children stood and sang together "The Lord's My Shepherd, I'll Not Want." Th officer had learned that Psalm when a chil and he with the other soldiers hurried awa and left the children. God was pleased wit their faithfulness and had protected them.

Our lesson today is of three young men wh dared to be different. It would have been eas for them to kneel and worship the image whe everyone else did, but they were brave enoug to stand alone even though it might mea death. God took care of them, too. Read al about it in Daniel 3.

May you love and trust Christ so fully tha you, too, will dare to be different for His sake.

Plans for the Meeting

Tell in detail the story of the three faithfu young men. Several of the Juniors should b asked to tell of other Bible men and wome and those of later days who remained true t God in spite of persecution. Tell them something of trials of Christians today and enlis their interest and prayers for those who ar being especially tested.

Questions

1. Why is it important that saved people be diferent from unsaved?
2. Why does it often require courage to be "different"?
3. Name some temptations that come to boys and girls today.
4. What are some results of meeting temptation bravely?
5. Explain the promise in 1 Cor. 10:13.

Topic.—Keeping God's Day Holy

Ex. 35:2; Isa. 58:13, 14

(Consecration Meeting)

God is holy. A place where God lives is a holy place, and the day that is especially ruled by Him is a holy day. To be sure, we who love Him want Him to rule every day, but this one day He has chosen to call His own and we want to use it for Him in a way that is not possible other days. In fact, when He told people to keep this day holy, He told them too, that they should work on the other days.

Notice that although God tells people to rest on that day, He wants more than that. When Jesus lived on earth, He showed what God meant. He made a habit of going to God's home and of doing good. Since Jesus rose on the first day of the week, that day is called the Lord's Day and we who love Him want to keep it holy.

Many Christians are busy all of that day in the Lord's work. They sing, preach, visit hospitals, jails, or homes, telling people about Christ who loves them. Don't you think these people enjoy the day much more than those who are busy with picnics, ball games, shows, or other things where God does not rule?

Boys and girls must choose between keeping this day holy and using it for self. A Chinese preacher told this story to show the wrong of claiming the Lord's Day as our own. A man went to market, having seven copper coins. He met a beggar and gave him six of the coins. Instead of being thankful, the beggar stole the seventh as well. That seems very wicked, but is that any worse than taking for ourselves the one day that belongs to God when He has already given us six? No! That is His day and we want it to be a holy day, altogether used as He wants it to be.

Questions

1. How did Jesus spend the sabbath?
2. Why is a holy Lord's Day a happy one?
3. Mention some ways in which we can please God on His day.
4. How do people steal this one day from God?
5. Tell how God has punished some who did not keep His day holy.

Topic.—Story Hour: The Captive Maid

2 Kings 5:1-14

Our story today is of a little girl who was taken far from home into a strange land. So far the story sounds interesting. Any of you would love to take a journey to a far-away country if you could go with your parents or a good friend and come back when you wished. What a good time you would have getting ready, saying goodbye to your friends, then telling them all about your visit when you got home. But the girl of our story could not do that. There was no time to get ready. Soldiers from another land took her from her home back to their own country, not for a visit, but as a slave.

She proved herself a kind, thoughtful slave, for when her master became ill she was anxious to help. She told her mistress that she wished the sick man would go to the man of God in her own land, for God would heal him. Doctors had not been able to help, but the girl knew that nothing was too hard for God. The man went, and God did heal. The girl could not do much, but she did what she could and that was enough. God does not expect us to do more for Him than we are able, but He does have a right to expect that.

Plans for the Meeting

Someone who can tell the story well should tell it in his own words, then have the Juniors read it together from the Bible. Help them to see that even in most trying circumstances one who loves the Lord can be used by Him.

Questions

1. From what kind of home do you think the captive maid came?
2. Why do we believe she loved God?
3. What did she advise Naaman to do when he was sick?
4. Tell how he was healed.
5. What lessons can you learn from the story of the captive maid?

Sometimes just before the greatest victory things take on the worst appearance. It may seem as if everything is going the contrary, but it may only be the forerunner of a signal victory.—R.

David, The Great Hearted

Lesson Text.—I Sam. 26:5-12; II Sam. 1:23-27

Golden Text.—Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Phil. 2:4.

We now go in our third lesson from the time of the Judges and Ruth to the united kingdom of Israel. When Samuel was judge the people began to demand a king as the other nations had. They felt that they were not unified as they ought to be. Samuel was instrumental in anointing the first king of the united kingdom who was Saul. Saul was strongly built, tall, and physically well equipped for the duties of the kingdom. He was a great warrior and in his battles against the enemies he was very successful. But Saul was weak in the very quality in which God wanted a king to be strong. He was not religious at heart. He sometimes was emotionally impressed as is shown when he came among the prophets, but he moved entirely outside of religious circles. He was not interested in the leadership of the prophets. And so he failed and it became necessary for Samuel to seek another king. This time the quality should not be so much outward appearance as a heart condition. There are three ways in which the next king is introduced to Israel. In the first place Samuel goes to the home of Jesse in Bethlehem and seeks for a king among Jesse's sons. He finally selects the youngest, whose name is David, and anoints him. The second introduction to David is when he plays his harp before Saul when Saul is in depressed spirits. In the third place David visits the Israelite army and while there accepts the challenge of Goliath, the giant, to fight. David becomes king in 1010 B. C. and rules until 970 B. C. David's reign is very successful. The North and South of Israel is united, the borders of the kingdom are extended, and Jerusalem is captured from the Jebusites and becomes the political and religious center of the Hebrews. David is a conqueror, an organizer, and a strong monarch. The most important thing, however, about David is the fac that he is strongly religious. He cooperate with the prophetic movement in Israel. He i such a good king that after his death the He brews always looked forward to the coming o a second David. David however, had his weaknesses. He was very strong the first half of hi reign, but in the second half his wealth, fame prestige, and power deteriorated his character

Golden Text.—But let judgment run dow

In this lesson we leave the united kingdo of Solomon in 937 B. C., the kingdom was d vided into Israel of the North and Judah of th South. Each had its own line of kings, Isra having 19 kings and Judah 21. When we com to the time of Amos we are in the eighth ce tury about 784 B. C. and the king of Juda is Uzziah. The king of Israel is Jeroboam I Amos is a native of Anathoth which is in sout ern Judah, not far from Bethlehem. There a two things important in a study of the messag of Amos. One is the conditions of the kingdo and the other is the experience of the prophe

Both Israel and Judah, in the reign of the above kings was in a golden era of prosperity. Outwardly, everything looked well as it usually does in prosperity, but inwardly both Israel and Judah were corrupt politically, socially, and religiously. The priests of the northern kingdom did not condemn this corruption because they were a part of it. They were blind leaders of the blind. They substituted religious creed, formalism, and ceremony for purity of heart and life. Amos received a call while taking care of his sheep in southern Palestine. The Lord commanded him to go to northern Israel and cry out against the things of Israel. He attended a great religious festival at Bethel where he took the opportunity to remind the people of their sins and that unless they repented, destruction was coming upon them. This destruction was to come through the Assyrian army which was already at the door of Israel on the north. Amos is a prophet of social justice and inward righteousness. He condemns the economic injustices, the political chicanery, and the religious hypocrisy which was carried on. His message is an ethical one. He believes that unless the heart is right and the individual has high standards of moral, all substitutions are of no avail.

What time did Amos live?

What is the condition of Israel and Judah at the time of Amos?

What to your mind is the outstanding message of Amos?

Josiah

Lesson Text.—I Kings 23:1-5, 21-23

Golden Text.—Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and Him only shalt thou serve. Matt. 4:10.

The lesson for today takes us into a century nearer to the time of Jesus than to that of the time of the prophet Amos. Josiah was the king of Judah. Ammon was his father, Manasseh his grandfather, and Hezekiah his great-grandfather. Josiah ruled from 637 B. C. to 606 B. C. Hezekiah had been a good king and under the leadership of the prophet Isaiah idolatry had been checked and the people were taught the worship of the true God. But Manasseh was raised in the harem and was under the influence of Assyria. He was opposed to Jehovah worship and established many high places for the worship of Assyrian gods. The country was overrun with heathendom. Ammon, his son, only ruled two years, having been killed by conspirators. His son, Josiah, came to the throne when he was just a boy. Josiah came under the influence of the prophetic party and decided to reestablish Jehovah worship. One of the first acts of Josiah was to repair the temple and cleanse it. It had fallen into decay during the reigns of Manasseh and Ammon. While they were cleaning the temple Hilkiah, the high priest, found a book which he took to the Scribe Shaphan to read and interpret. They then brought the book to the king. When they read it they discovered that it was the book of the law. It is believed to have been the greater part of the book of Deuteronomy. When the king read the book he saw how far his people had drifted away from the laws of Jehovah. So he gathered the people together and he read to them out of the book of the law. This inspired the reformation in Josiah's reign which was the most far reaching of any reform. Josiah decreed that no one should worship anywhere but in the temple, thus putting away with the high places. In the second place he definitely destroyed idol worship throughout his terirtory. In the third place he ordered the passover should be kept in a very strict manner. Through these reforms Josiah centralized the religious activities of the people and encouraged the worship of Jehovah. The outstanding truth of this lesson is the fact that the most permanent revivals are those which are inspired by the reading of the Word of God.

Who was Josiah?

What was the condition of the kingdom of Judah when Josiah came to the throne?

What was the book that was found in the temple?

Why did it have such an effect on the life of the people?

How may Bible reading revival be brought about in the church in this day?

Sometimes the best inspiration is born of desperation and perspiration.

It is better to incur the wrath of man by our faith than the wrath of God by our unbelief.

JOTTINGS

The Washington Mennonite Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, held June 15 and 16, was a great success in number and enthusiasm. The church, having a seating capacity of 250, was packed at all sessions. The plaque, award in the peace oration contest, went to Miss Helen Stucky of Florence Acres. Miss Esther Jantz of Odessa, gave a comprehensive report of "the Peace Movements of the Past and Present." The Rev. M. J. Galle of Odessa gave an impressive talk to the children Sunday morning after which the efficiency of Sunday School equipment and workers was discussed. The forenoon session ended with the convention address by the Rev. P. R. Aeschliman of Colfax. Music was furnished by the Menno, the Onecha, and the Monroe Sunday Schools. Luncheon was served by the local church at the congregational Hall across the street to 225 at noon and 175 after the afternoon session. Four papers were read, each one followed by a round table discussion. They were: "How Inactive Church Members May Be Restored to the Church and Christian Activity," presented by Mrs. Albert Schwartz of Monroe; "Items of Responsibility of the Individual Not Able to be Delegated to Others were enumerated," by the Menno Sunday School; "Is the Present Division of the Christian Church into Denominations Desirable, and Should Mennonites Be United Into One Body," was given by the Onecha Sunday School; and 'The Christian Citizenship Duties," by Mrs. Kliewer of Newport. G. W. Roupe was the principle speaker of the evening.

Tabor College, a Mennonite institution at Hillsboro, Kansas, which has been closed, will again open its doors this fall. Prof. H. W. Lohrenz, the former president, will return to Hillsboro and continue his work in the college.

The Intermediate C. E. Society of the Ebenezer church near Bluffton, O., gave an interesting musical program in the Berne, Ind., church on the evening of June 23. Mrs. Chr. Gratz is superintendent of the society.

The C. E. Society of the South Church, Freeman, S. D., gave a practical demonstration of what interested young people may do for the comfort and neatness of their church. They scrubbed and gave the church a general cleaning at an appointed day.

Dan Schirmer, a young native Hopi and a graduate of Los Angeles Bible School, gave an address at the West Zion, Kans., church some days ago. He is giving his life to bringing the message of salvation to his people.

One of the largest Mennonite families, the Wedel family of Kansas and other states, held a reunion on the campus of Bethel College. More than 200 are said to have been present. A program of song and speeches plus a social period made the occasion an agreeable one.

The Mennonites of Kansas have for a number of years been sending garments into the Mennonite settlements of Canada, where they are sorely needed in that cold country. Recently a large shipment was forwarded. Rev. David Toews states that last winter about 300 families were helped with clothing, and yet 50 to 60 had to be turned away because the supply was exhausted.

Several protestations have been addressed to the Government and to the King of Belgians, on account of the arrest for the fourth time, after three previous sentences of imprisonment, of a Belgian subject, for conscientious objection. Two of these protestations came from the Dutch anti-militariat and pacifist organizations, one of which Kerk en Vrede (The Church and Peace) with some 8000 members, including pastors and evangelists, further demanded that the legal position of conscientious objectors in Beglium should be regulated by a law, as in Holland and in the Scandinavian countries.

It was an impressive scene in the Second Mennonite church of Beatrice, Nebraska, when an Children's Day seven mothers with their babies came forward for the consecration service. The Bible Vacation School of this church closed with a program on June 28. The enrollment of the school was thirty, and of these not quite half came from Mennonite families. The others were from the district in the neighborhood of the church. Many of these are regular members of the Sunday School.

The Three Week Daily Vacation Bible School, held at Bethel Church, Fortuna, Missouri, closed May 31. An instructive program was given Friday night, May 31, by the school. The program was centered on the work accomplished during the term. The school work was divided into four activities, namely, Bible Memory Work, Bible Instruction, Book Work, and Music. There were 55 pupils enrolled. Children from other communities besides the Mennonite Community attended. Rev. C. H. Dirks, pastor of the Bethel church, served both as superintendent and instructor. The other instructors were: Miss Pauline Hofstetter, Misses Melva, Nadine and LaVera Lehman, and Miss Susanna Aeschbacher.

The first Quarterly Conference of the ministers of the Eastern District Conference was one of the best attended on record. This is not a legislative meeting, but one arranged for mutual assistance and inspiration. At this session congregations were strongly urged to arrange for representation at the General Conference. It was also arranged that a committee be appointed to stand ready to assist churches in emergencies that might arise during the absence of a majority of the ministers at General Conference. The guests of the Conference were Professor Russell Lantz and Dr. C. H. Smith of Bluffton College, who with President Rosenberger of the College gave inspiring addresses.

Dr. C. Henry Smith in his address: "Mennonites and the Task of Christian Education," traced the past efforts and attainments and also showed the needs for the future. He feels that for the good of our denomination we ought to have a seminary of our own for the training of our ministers, missionaries, and other leaders. Dr. Smith feels that a Mennonite Seminary ought to be operated in cooperation with one of similar ideals. This would save undue expenses and still bring in great returns for our entire church.

"Hymns and Their Contribution to a Worship Service," was ably discussed by Prof. Russell A. Lantz. He emphasized the value of careful hymn selection for every worship service so that they fit in with the theme of the sermon. He further urged that every worshipper enter heartily into the spirit of the poem.

President A. S. Rosenberger, delivered an address on "Our College and Our Church." He emphasized four things: a) The need that Bluffton College be thoroughly Christian. b) The desire of the College to have and maintain a high scholastic status—Bluffton College equal to the best. c) The College aims to develop the best in the personality of each student—thus producing a fully rounded Christian life. e) As needs the following were mentioned: More students, sympathetic cooperation, more financial support, more prayers.

The Gospel Team enriched the evening program with four well rendered selections.

MARRIAGE

Reichenbach-Andrews.—On Sunday, June 9, at 12:15 o'clock, Miss Florence Reichenbach became the bride of Mr. Mark Andrews. The single ring ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. Edgar Toevs, of Pandora.

Lugibihl-Bucher, Bucher-Hilty. — The Ebenezer church of Bluffton, Ohio, was the scene of two beautiful church weddings, June 9. At four o'clock in the afternoon, Miss Mary Lugibihl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Lugibihl, became the bride of Mr. Vernon Bucher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Bucher.

At eight-thirty o'clock in the evening, Miss Mable Bucher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bucher, became the bride of Mr. Herbert Hilty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Hilty.

In the absence of Rev. Kliewer, pastor of the Ebenezer church, Rev. Edgar Toevs officiated.

POWER DEPENDS ON ELEVATION

In driving piles a machine is used by which a huge weight is lifted up and then made to fall upon the head of the pile. Of course, the higher the weight is lifted, the more powerful is the blow which it gives when it descends. Now, if we would tell upon our age and come down upon society with ponderous blows, we must see to it that we are uplifted as near to God as possible. All our power will depend upon the elevation of our spirits. Prayer, meditation, devotion, communion, are like a windlass to wind us up aloft; it is not lost time which we spend in such sacred exercises, for we are thus accumulating force so that when we come down to our actual labor for God we shall descend with an energy unknown to those to whom communion is unknown. —Spurgeon.

THE CONFERENCE OF THE CENTRAL CONFERENCE OF MENNONITES

The Conference of the Central Conference of Mennonites will be held at the Normal Community High School building, Normal, Illinois, on August 23 to 26. The program for this year is again planned so as to present the work, problems, and achievements of the various conference institutions and activities. Conference begins on Friday morning, August 23, with a conference sermon by the president, Rev. Allen Yoder. The theme throughout the conference will be "The Kingdom of God." Different phases of the kingdom will be discussed throughout various sessions of the conference. Some of the men to appear on the program are Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, president of Bluffton College, Rev. Alvin Becker, returned missionary from Africa; Rev. A. D. Graber, missionary on furlough from Belgian Congo; and Dr. J. E. Hartzler, who gives the closing address on "Thy Kingdom Come." Prof. Russel A. Lantz, director of music in Bluffton College, has been secured as song leader for the conference. The editor would suggest that all our congregations dedicate the morning service of August 18 for prayer for our conference. May the fellowship and inspiration received at our conference give the workers much courage and faith as they go forth for a new year's work. —Weaver.

MENNONITES IN RUSSIA AND AMERICA AS DESCRIBED BY WRITERS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Not Always Accurate, But Interesting

To a non-Mennonite, especially one who has not had the benefit of an intimate acquaintance with our people, it seems there are some things that are impressive and from such impressions they draw conclusions that are "wonderfully and fearfully made." With the beginning of Mennonite settlements in the United States and Canada, now more than a half century away, we have opportunity of checking up on the reactions of writers whose snap judgments in the end did not work out and whose superficial observations were biased by pre-conceived notions that were either altogether wrong or else unfriendly. In our library we have had occasion to select a few of such recordings at random and it has led the writer to quote some of them, if not always for our information, then for our amusement.

A work on Russia by Mackenzie, 1876, in which the colonists of South Russia are interestingly described in a sympathetic vein, gives the following:

"Altogether their lines have fallen in very pleasant places. In material and moral well being they stand as far above the majority of the ordinary German colonists as these latter do above their Russian neighbors. Even in the richest districts of Germany their prosperity would attract attention. To compare these rich, privileged, well educated farmers with the poor, heavily taxed peasantry and to draw from the comparison conclusions concerning the capabilities of the two races is a proceeding so palpably absurd that it requires no further comment. To the wearied traveler who has been living for some time in Russian villages, one of these Mennonite colonies seems an earthly paradise. In a little hollow, perhaps by the side of a water course, he suddenly comes on a long row of high roofed houses half concealed in trees. — — — The houses are large, well arranged, and kept in such thoroughly good repair that they always appear to be newly built. The rooms are plainly furnished without any pretentions to elegance, but scrupulously clean. Adjoining the house are the stables and byre which would not disgrace a model farm in England or Germany. In front is a spacious courtyard which has the appearance of being swept several times a day. — — — — The inhabitants are honest, frugal people, somewhat sluggish and indifferent to things lying beyond their own little world, but shrewd enough in all matters which they deem worthy of their attention. If you arrive among them as a stranger you may be a little chilled by the welcome you receive, for they are exclusive, distrustful, and do not like to associate with those who do not belong to their sect; but if you can converse with them in their mother tongue and talk about religious matters in an evangelical tone, you may easily overcome their stiffness and exclusiveness. Altogether such a village cannot be recommended for a lengthened sojourn, for the severe order and symmetry which everywhere prevails would soon prove intolerable to any one not having Dutch blood in his veins (Mennonites were originally Dutch), but as a temporary resting place during a pilgrimage on the Steppes, when the pilgrim is longing for a little cleanliness and comfort, it is very agreeable. Perhaps, therefore, in calling it a little earthly paradise, I ought to have added — for a Dutchman."

W. Fraser Rae, an American, in an account of Manitoba in 1881, having considerable to say about the new Russian Mennonite colonies in that Province, writes from the point of view of one who seems to know how to "damn with faint praise." Much he has to say is no doubt from common hotel gossip rather than from personal observation. He evidently supposes that the newcomers into western Canada were a sort of a primitive people who, while prosperous, were also given to squeezing the dollar until the eagle screamed. He says:

"They are thoroughly practical Christians; they hold that their duties to themselves and their neighbors consist in dressing plainly, being diligent in business, and rendering to every one his dues and no more. They are ready to help those who help themselves; but they will not lend a hand to keep the idle by nature in a state of blissful indolence. The men are farmers by choice. No drones are suffered to remain in the community. Every one in sound health is obliged to labor with his hands or pay the penalty of starving. A clergyman toils in the fields during the week and administers to the spiritual wants of his flock on Sunday. Nor is the schoolmaster exempt from manual labor during seed time and harvest; the rest of the year he is permitted to teach the children. The women have to labor as hard and as unremittingly as the men. No distinction is made when a field is to be weeded, a house plastered, seeds sown, or cattle tended. All who can use their hands are obliged to do so when the occasion arises."

"The Mennonites will not fight on any provocation. They will not take an oath whatever the consequences. They will not go to law if they can possibly help it, and they carry their independence to such an extent that each one acts as his own physician without thinking that he is chargeable with folly. They can the more easily dispense with drugs and doctors because they enjoy exceptionally good health. The country and climate suit them. I was told by those questioned on the subject that in Manitoba they had far less sickness, especially among children, than in South Russia. They are temperate; but they are not for water on principle. They relish a glass of whisky and still more a glass of brandy if they can enjoy it without payment. Their chief objection to strong liquors consists in having to pay for it. They also delight in a pipe if tobacco be supplied to them gratis — — — — Whereas, in Russia they looked down with contempt upon their ignorant neighbors, in Manitoba they recognize that their neighbors are better educated and far more advanced in the ways of the world than themselves. The agricultural implements which they saw in Canada were as much superior to those which they had used in Russia as a railroad train is to a stage coach.

They felt that the people who made and employed such improved ploughs, threshing machines, and harvesters must be infinitely their superiors. They showed their tact and good sense, not only in recognizing this, but also in buying the novel implements of agriculture wherewith to cultivate the soil. — — — They are morbidly suspicious of persons who do not belong to their body, and, when dealing with strangers, they drive bargains. — — — They deem it to be no reproach to be indifferent to literature other than school books, hymn books, and the Bible, and never look at a newspaper. They are utterly heedless of the affairs of the world, so long as they can reap their crops and make a profit by selling their produce. If they learn what is the market price of what they have to sell, they have learned all the current information which they care to possess."

"Even the charity of the Mennonites has its dark side. The poorer brethren are assisted by the richer, but the richer take care lest the poorer should be so well paid as to grow independent and make their own terms. Rich Mennonites are thoroughly convinced of the advantage of employing cheap labor."

A correspondent of the New York Sun, September 21, 1880, Frank Wilkenson, in a lengthy article could have had no appreciation of the wealth Mennonites brought to Kansas when they introduced the wheat that brought millions into the state and so made it a great and wealthy Commonwealth. He certainly was not in sympathy with the peace principles that have characterized Mennonites all during their history. The article gives evidence of being propaganda in opposition to the part railroads were having in the development of that state. His concluding paragraphs give us an idea of the tenor of the article:

"From what I saw and was told by these people, I judge the success of the Mennonites in Kansas to have been greatly overrated. The facts are, if a German Mennonite brought sufficient money with him to pay for his land and start promptly on his farming operations, he has generally held his own, may even have made a little money; very seldom lost any. Without money when he started life in his new home and forced to mortgage, he is growing poorer. The Poles and Bohemians had nothing when they came here. They have it yet.

"As a race the Mennonites are frugal, industrious, and law-abiding. They are not bright, intelligent people. They are not any more successful in their farming operations than their American neighbors. They have no intention of becoming citizens of this Republic.

"The story of the success of these people in Kansas that has been widely published is, in my opinion, a skillfully devised lie, told in the interest of railroad companies. That pleasant little paragraph of the tale which says that Mennonites do not care for grasshoppers (meaning locusts probably), being used to them and that they quickly dispose of them, is a very silly lie, the truth being that since 1855 the Mennonite settlements in Russia have not been troubled with locusts. That year they came from Turkey and destroyed the crops, just as they destroyed the crops in our western states when they migrated from the Rocky Mountains to the Southwest.

"I do not think the Mennonites are desirable immigrants, nor will they be citizens in the full meaning of the word. In a Republic all men should share equally the benefits of the Government and they should equally endure the hardships and, if necessary, meet the dangers encountered on the battlefield in protecting the Government. I have no faith in a privileged class that enjoys the protection of the law of a nation and declines to defend the nation."

THE FUTURE OF THE MENNONITE CHURCH

H. P. Peters, Newton, Kansas

The future of any small denomination, like our own Mennonite denomination, depends, to its largest extent, on whether it can inspire or interest its young people to move out from the old base into a new place and form a new community or congregation. Members of the larger denominations, whenever they leave their home church, can easily find connection with a congregation of their own faith; but the Mennonites can not. At present the Mennonite church has a fine group of young people, as fine as we can find anywhere. But of what benefit can they be to the church if, after they have taken life's responsibilities into their own hand, they have to scatter all over the United States?

It is the main object of this article to point out the three main difficulties confronting the Mennonite young people in regrouping themselves into new Mennonite communities. First, there is no suitable place; second, financial difficulties; and third, lack of cooperation.

In the first place it would be exceedingly difficult to find a suitable place where a larger group of Mennonite young people would agree upon to farm. It is generally conceded that the United States has no more frontier. In fact many believe that the frontier line has been extended to far into territory which should never have been broken up for farming. Then, such a place should have a chance for a few business men and profesional men. It might be a place where grain and livestock farming has to be abandoned and truck and fruit farming substituted.

Then, second, is the financial difficulty. Those who need most to move out, can the least afford to go to a new place. And we can have no new Mennonite community with only small renters, day laborers, mud mixers, carpenters, truck drivers, and others. Such men are more or less transient and cannot take much interest in community life. No, the majority of the people in a new community must be property owners, who are planning to make the new community their permanent home.

And, last but not least of the difficulties is the lack of cooperation in material things. We Mennonites are a group who have always fostered independent thinking and interpretation. In addition to this, we are living in a country where this independent spirit is very much encouraged. This manysided interdependent European village life has no place in this country. It was tried in some places, but soon proved to be a failure. "Everybody for himself," is the American slogan. Today there is little sympathy and mutual helpfulness with the poor beginner. Those who have a large size farm, plenty help, and well equipped with modern machinery can much easier rent and finally buy an additional piece of land to their large farm than a poor beginner, who is not so well equipped. The result is that the large farms are becoming larger and larger, and the small are finally absorbed by the large farms. Or, some large farms, which parents with the help of their children have acquired, are divided up among their children and have to support the retired parents and their worried children, with little chance of the children ever acquiring an additional piece of land.

You talk about these conditions to some of the young men and they will admit that it is easier to rent a farm outside of Mennonite communities than within. A good brother in western Kansas, who renewed his pledge for Bethel College, but who could never afford to send any of his children to Bethel College, said, "I love my church and my people, but this condition of our big farmers absorbing so much land is crowding out our poor beginners."

The consequence of these conditions is that young Mennonite people are leaving Mennonite communities. Here is a good Mennonite farmer who has seven sons. One married son has a good position with Uncle Sam in Washington, D. C. Another married son lives on his wife's home estate, which some day will be sold and divided up. One son is on his way to try his luck in Alaska. Another son is working out in the State of Washington. Two sons are renting father's farm, with father paying most of the expenses. One son is running a chicken ranch on his father's farm. A brother of this farmer was asked to sign a pledge for Bethel College. He said, "I would like to, but I have to help my own children. One son has been trying to farm all alone near Amarillo, Texas, hundreds of miles away from home. In this time of depression and drought he could not raise any crops, and we have to help him. One daughter, a trained nurse, is working in California; but her employer cannot pay her, and so we have to help her. Another married daughter is more or less dependent on our help." One good farmer has nine sons, but he says he cannot do as much as pay their expenses through high school. "If I help one, I have to help all of them. Except during their last high school year when they need a little extra money, I help them a little on the promise that they'll pay it back to me." Another farmer in western Kansas said, "I have three sons, all of age. One is married and tried to farm for himself, but in these dry years is blown up. They are all dependent on me now as ever before." In another small Mennonite community all torn up by strife and discontent, a brother told the writer that in their congregation there had recently been fifteen marriages outside the church.

Some of our laymen are more alarmed about this present situation than our leaders. Said a brother recently, "What will we do? Our young people will have to stay alone." A little over a year ago a young married man said in a small gathering of friends, "I know at least ten young men who would like to get married if they only knew of a place where to go." In Hutchinson, Kansas, there are about forty young ladies working in private homes for a living. They are mostly from the Mennonite communities of Buhler and Inman. No doubt, in Wichita there are more. These young ladies are not planning to work in private homes all their lives, but will establish their own homes as soon as possible, even if they have to join some other church.

Some of these poor renters, after they have been pushed from farm to farm and finally forced to sell out and move to one of the larger towns with no definite plan, are almost a despair as to church attendance. Rev. John Plenert, who is working with these people in Hutchinson, says, that he has almost to apologize when asking some of these people to attend a Mennonite church. Who can blame them? They intended to be loyal to the Mennonite church in the first place, but after they had to move from place to place and were finally forced to sell out and move to town in order to make a living, who can blame them if they become cold and indifferent to the Mennonite church?

Young men are not confined to neighboring towns in order to find a job. No, after harvest in Kansas they go for harvest in Nebraska, then to South Dakota and North Dakota, and even into Canada. Then late in fall they go to the State of Washington to pick apples. They are not out just for a sight-seeing trip, but ever on the lookout for a permanent job, and wherever they'll find one, some of them will stay, get married, and forget that they have been Mennonites. What business has the church to ask these scattered young people to support Mennonite institutions, when they were almost forced out of Mennonite communities?

What can we do about it? Well, there is no short cut panacea for this problem. In the first place we should do away with this petty little clanishness between the congregations. It keeps the young people from getting the denominational viewpoint. The outstanding need of the Mennonite church is new, prospering, and self-supporting communities. This is a task which should be taken up by at least a whole district conference; but this clanishness of the different nationalities and different social standards keeps the young people from moving out in large numbers. Then there is the clanishness caused by the difference in financial success.

In the second place, there is this general mistrust that new communities cannot be found and hence some parents are trying very desperately and at high cost to acquire a little homestead for their children to save them the trouble to move out and the trouble which they have gone through. To me it seems a great mistake. Boys who are used to farm on a big scale at home are supposed to be content on a small place for themselves as a retired farmer, and with little chance to buy more land. Experience has proved that in many cases they have failed and gone broke. While for the same amount for which they bought a small tract of land in an old community, they could have bought two or three times as much land in a new community. In addition, this method has made land prices unusually high in old communities, thus forcing more and more poor people out of the comumnity.

If we had the denominational viewpoint that we should have, those who are planning to buy real estate just for an investment, would buy a farm in a new prospective, community and rent it to a poor Mennonite family, and in this way save a Mennonite family for the church. The life and growth of a church depends just as much on holding and conserving what it already has, as on acquiring new members.

Maybe the writer has taken the Western District Conference too much as a type. I believe Mennonite congregations in other states are more isolated from each other than in Kansas, and their problem is still more acute. The situation which I have tried to describe is a kind of strained situation in old Mennonite communities. It is not so outspoken, but nevertheless, it is there.

Brother C. E. Krehbiel, who has plenty of experience of working among the Mennonites in der Zerstreuung in Wichita, divides the Mennonites into three groups: First, the group who tries to get away from all church connection; second, the group who prefers to join some other church; and third, the group who would remain Mennonites.

Why should Mennonites, when away from the home base, avoid each other rather than get together and worship together? When we look into the congregations on Sundays, we find them full of young people of the teen-age.

In ten or fifteen years they will have to shoulder life's responsibilities and with no outlet in sight. The consequence will be a general exodus of young Mennonites into an unknown country. The future of the Mennonite church depends to its largest extent upon whether it will turn about face and pay more attention to establish new Mennonite communities.

RETREAT IN CALIFORNIA

A General Conference Young People's Retreat will be held immediately following the General Conference at Upland, California. This Retreat is sponsored by the General Conference Young People's Committee and by the California Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Executive committees. The value of such a Young People's Conference cannot be really expressed, but only those that can attend really derive the blessings that come from such an event.

I feel that the Young People's Conference is a wonderful opportunity for the youth of the Mennonites. It gives them a chance to get away from the turmoil of life and meditate upon the things that make life nobler and more valuable; in fact, upon those things that have not only passing or temporal value, but eternal value. We live in an age where speed counts. Our automobiles travel a hundred miles an hour in extreme cases. Yes, we live in a world which lures the youth to follow its pace. So many travel sixty, seventy, or perhaps more miles an hour, and when they get there they have nothing to do. But let us travel nobly. Let us as young people "take time to be holy" and thus try and make it possible to attend the Young People's Retreat of the General Conference. If this should be impossible, why not help to send a representative from our Endeavor Society, from our Sunday School, or perhaps from our church, who could receive the benefit and blessings, and who could bring back the inspiration received. Such an influence would be indeed wholesome to our churches and congregations. I believe that such endeavors like a "Retreat" are needed to interest our youth in things that are above the commonplace things of everyday life. Contact with good leaders and with associate members from the different communities and states broadens their outlook of life. Let us do our part in making the Young People's Retreat of the General Conference a blessing to us by attending it or by helping others to attend. Rev. Phil. A. Wedel,

Eden Church, Moundridge, Kans.

LETTER FROM BELGIAN CONGO

Charlesville, Africa,
June 7, 1935.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in our Lord:

Greetings to you in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ! "Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance. In thy name shall they rejoice all the day: and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted." Psalms 89:15-16.

We wish to express our joy with the Psalmist and say, "Rejoice, for we know the joyful sound of the Lord our God, and we know His glorious righteousness which He spreads throughout the world."

The Lord has been very gracious to us and has blessed us with innumerable blessings. He has kept us in wonderful health and has brought our long looked for co-workers to Charlesville.

On March 19, 1935, we took the A. D. Grabers, our former co-workers of this station, to the river steamer at Port Francqui. They have by this time, we hope and pray, arrived safely in America for their term of furlough.

On Easter Sunday we had a glorious time together with our native Christians when we observed the Lord's Supper. The Thursday evening before that we had a prayer meeting. Then on Friday morning the compound children gave a short play, illustrating what the cross should mean to the Christian. On Easter morning we had a sunrise service at the native church. Then at ten o'clock that morning Russell gave a sermon on the text, "The conferences we have with our Lord," after which we gathered around the Lord's table in remembrance of our Lord and Savior Who had risen that day, many years ago, to give us "Life Eternal."

On April 23, 1935, our new co-workers arrived on the station and we rejoice and thank the Lord with them for being so gracious as to bring them here safely, that we may enjoy laboring together here for Him. The fields are white unto harvest, but the laborers are few, so we certainly are thankful for the new workers in our midst once more.

Sunday morning, May 12, was a new dawning for the women of Charlesville (native name Djoko Punda), when we celebrated Mother's Day. Most all of the Christian women had some part in the service. This was something very new, because women here in Africa, sad to say, are not allowed to speak in public at all. They are kept in submission very much by their husbands. The women enjoyed taking part in the program very much, and they also portrayed much interest in preparing and giving their talks. The entire program, music directing and all, was conducted by the Christian women. In a meeting of the women a short time before that I had explained to them about wearing flowers in remembrance of their mothers, and to my glad surprise that Sunday most all of the women that took part had either a white or a colored flower on them.

May 28, Russell went on his first itinerary trip. He had a hammock chair made for him from what we call coty, which is a strong, vine-like tree and is on the order of wooden rope when it is prepared to make a chair. The natives use this to tie everything that needs tying. Russell was in the path constantly from Tuesday morning until Saturday evening. The grass was very high most everywhere they went, and they had to follow just a native path at that. Many places they went through deep-swampy ground also. During this time they covered over 18 villages, and in their meetings which they held, nine came out one evening, declaring themselves on the Lord's side. Much of the territory they covered is new ground, and many asked them the question, "Who is God"? When a person hears a native ask that question it makes one realize more and more that new workers and more funds are needed so that the people may know our Lord and Savior.

In closing, we plead that you will remember this work here in your prayers, and that some among your group may volunteer to be a witness for their Lord here in this needy land. Hoping to hear from various of you folks from time to time, and remembering you in our prayers, we remain,

Yours in His service,
Russell, Helen, and Carolyn Schnell.

THE OVERCOMING LIFE

Mrs. Wm. B. Weaver, Danvers, Ill.

The Christian has a continual warfare, the flesh lusting against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh, and we either overcome sin through Christ, or when we reject Christ, sin overcomes us. It is impossible to overcome the flesh and the devil in our own strength: everything human fails. As soon as we take our eyes off God we fail. Some strong Bible characters have failed when they tried to stand in their own strength. Jesus was a complete victor, and if we can say like Paul, "Nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me," then we have Him that said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth" And it is with that power that we meet all our enemies. We have this treasure in earthen vessels that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us. We are entirely dependent on God. The Lord shall deliver us from every evil work, and will preserve me unto His heavenly kingdom.

Then said Jesus unto those Jews which believed on Him, if ye continue in my word then are ye My disciples indeed: and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. Abide in me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me. I am the vine, ye are the branches; he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me you can do nothing. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

"Whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified them he also glorified."

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Jesus Christ, our Lord. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."

"Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. That we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they be in wait to deceive: Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints. Thou therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. Endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. If we suffer, we shall also reign with him; if we deny him, he also will deny us."

"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God."

"Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried: and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life. He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death. To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, he that overcometh, and keepeth my words to the end, to him will I give power over the nations. He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment: Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcome, and am set down with my father in his throne. He that overcometh shall inherit all things: and I shall be his God, and he shall be my son."

CORRESPONDENCE

Pratum, Oregon. Dear Readers of the Mennonite:— The balmy summer days are here once more, and with them always comes the busy season. The summer so far has been cool, with some rather warm days, but rather dry for Oregon, where it is supposed to rain thirteen months out of the year. This remark has often been repeated, and especially from the Eastern people that come out west on a visit. Well, that is not the case this year.

So far we had many visitors in our group, and we are looking forward for many more, as the conference is out this way.

On March 31, Rev. J. C. Peters from Walnut Grove, Minn., was our visiting servant and we did enjoy to listen to the message which he gave us. Also Rev. A. A. Classen was with us several times. On June 9, he gave us his farewell message, as he is leaving for Freeman, South Dakota.

On April 28, the W. U. Men's Glee Club of Salem gave us a concert in songs, which was much enjoyed. This glee club has toured throughout the State of Washington.

On Easter Sunday five new members were received into the church, four by letter and one by baptism.

Some Sundays our church is full to overflowing. On Mother's Day we had 272 for Sunday School, and several families came only for the service.

Our church choir went to Dallas to present the Easter cantata. A large group of people was there to listen to the beautiful Easter cantata.

The Oregon Sunday School convention was held this year on July 7, at the Grace Mennonite church at Albany. Rev. P. A. Kliewer of Bluffton, Ohio, was the main speaker at this convention.

The young ladies of our church have again returned to us from their distant school. They have attended the Bible Institute of Los Angeles. They surely love their school work there and are planning to return this fall. Some more are also going to join this happy group of girls. What a wonderful opportunity for them to be in the Lord's work and to learn how to be busy servants in His vineyard!

Rufus M. Franz, oldest son of our pastor, is attending the George B. Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn. He received a free scholarship from that college. He will return again this fall to take up his school at Dallas.

There is very little sickness in this community, for which we are truly thankful. God has wonderfully blessed us so far this year. He has promised never to leave nor forsake us, no matter how trying times are.

Mrs. Adam Hofstetter, Corr.

Perkasie, Pa. "I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing." Ez. 34:26.

"Is it a season of drought? Then that is the season for showers. Is it a season of great heaviness and black clouds? Then that is the season for showers." "As thy day so shall thy strength be."

"All kinds of blessings God will send. All God's blessings go together like links in a golden chain. Look up today, O parched plant, and open thy leaves and flowers for a heavenly watering."—Spurgeon.

It is more than a year since any correspondence has appeared from the Perkasie congregation. I find the news articles from the various congregations of much interest and many may be beneficial in a constructive way.

June is the season for strawberries and roses here, and we have had both in great abundance. We have had some real summer temperature, and plenty of refreshing showers. At this writing cool weather again prevails. It is hard to describe the economic situation. There is work and good pay for some, while others, the quite young and the older folks, and those who lack in aptitude and ability, find it a difficult task to earn enough to be self-supporting. N. R. A. never was obeyed to the letter; it helped many and harmed others.

Our small congregation of approximately twenty-five members worships together in a quiet, but regular way. We continually find cause to regret that the Mennonite families who move to this town from other congregations, do not work nor worship with us, but stand aloof or attend churches of other denominations here. It appears that young people especially go where there is a crowd. " Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

We were as a congregation called on to mourn the departure of three of our members during the past year. In the fall, Henry F. Myers was called home. He was a charter member of this congregation and remained faithful and willing to do what he could. Later Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Delp passed; both died at the Frederick Home for the Aged.

At the Christmas season our Sunday School presented the usual Christmas service. We were blessed in having the returned missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Boehr, with us. Rev. Boehr gave an interesting account of Christmas in China. Rev. and Mrs. Boehr and the two older sons, John and Richard, sang several Christmas hymns in Chinese in four parts.

On February 17, Rev. Boehr was again with us and we were favored with the account of his capture by bandits and being held as a prisoner for ten days, and eventually his safe return. Another treat came when Rev. Boehr sang the 23rd Psalm in Chinese and his son, John, accompanied him on a Chinese flute.

Our spring observance of the holy communion came on Easter day; the attendance of members was not good.

Mother's Day was observed for the first time with a special service in connection with the Sunday School hour. The program was in charge of Mrs. Mildred Myers Swartz, leader of the Junior C. E. The program consisted of readings, recitations, music, and a playlet. At the close the mothers were presented with bouquets of violets.

Another special day was observed when the Sunday School and church joined in observing Children's Day on June 16th. While the Sunday School attendance has been very small this spring, by putting forth extra effort an interesting and instructive program was presented. Singing by the Junior girls deserves mention, as also a temperance playlet, "A Wise Choice," in costumes, which taught a needed truth to young and old. We were favored in having as performers two young radio artists, Richard and Harold Gilbert, who played as banjo duets, "The Old Rugged Cross," and other numbers.

So the workers toil in this vineyard, but more workers are needed and we crave a part in your thoughts and prayers, and hope that visiting brethren might not consider this field too small for a visit, as these helpful visits are perhaps more needed and more appreciated in small churches than in the large churches.

Fannie S. Landis, Corr.

Butterfield, Minnesota, June 30, 1935. To the Editor and the Readers of the Mennonite and Christian Evangel: During the last three months we have had quite a number of visitors in church, which we always appreciate.

April 7, our brother, Jacob Rupp, from Pillager, Minn., was with us and after Sunday School he gave us a short encouraging talk. Rev. D. J. Dick then had charge of the morning services.

April 16, our annual auction sale took place in the church basement. The articles of the Ladies' Sewing Society were sold, which brought close to one hundred dollars. The same evening a supper was given. The proceeds went toward the payment of the new English church books, which were purchased recently.

April 28, we enjoyed listening to Rev. J. F. Janzen from Waterloo, Ontario, who delivered a sermon in the evening.

April 30, Mrs. Michael Ewy was laid to rest. She had passed away a few days previous. Her death was caused by cancer. She suffered much, yet she stood it bravely and was ready to go. Rev. P. J. Friesen spoke in German and Rev. L. H. Linscheid in English. A mixed quartet sang two songs which were selected by the deceased.

On May 5, the Freeman, S. D., male quartet together with Mr. Walter Goering, was in charge of the morning services, which was very much appreciated.

On May 8, William E. Hopkins, a retired missionary from India, gave an interesting talk about the heathen, and on June 9th he was here again in the evening; sixteen of the church members dressed in the Indian costumes, and he gave us a whole evening of service.

May 19, Rev. D. J. Dick served us with a sermon in the evening.

On June 2, Rev. and Mrs. L. H. Linscheid and family, accompanied by Mrs. Theodore Linscheid, left for Freeman, S. D., where Mrs. Linscheid and children stayed. The rest went on to attend the Henderson, Nebraska, conference.

On June 9, Rev. Henry Rhan gave the sermon in the morning, as Rev. L. H. Linscheid was not able to do so.

June 27, at eight o'clock in the evening, occurred the wedding of Selma Linscheid to Harvey Nelson. It was a church wedding. They were married by the bride's brother, Rev. L. H. Linscheid, after which a supper was given to all in the church basement. The bride has been an active nurse in the Mountain Lake Bethel Hospital for many years. May the Lord bless their married life!

At the present time we are again having, as usual, Summer Bible School, with three teachers, namely Clifford Miller, Delbert Kuehl, and Mary Eliz. Sundt.

On June 30, in the afternoon the church was filled with people to surprise Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Linscheid on their fortieth wedding anniversary. A program had been arranged for the purpose. Rev. P. J. Friesen spoke in German, and Rev. L. H. Linscheid in English, after which all partook of a lunch in the basement. In the evening Rev. P. P. Wedel from Moundridge, Kansas, delivered a sermon.

We are indeed thankful to our Lord this year for the wonderful weather He gives us, always enough rain, and everything is so nice and green. We expect a good crop if the Lord will protect it.

Mrs. Gust. Miller, Corr.

First Mennonite Congregation of Newton, Kansas. Dear Readers of the Mennonite and the Christian Evangel: May the peace of God through Christ Jesus dwell in your hearts!

On April 7th, Prof. Voth of Bethel College preached in the forenoon, and in the evening Rev. J. M. Suderman of Buhler. On April 19, Good Friday, Bro. C. van der Smissen preached in both languages. On April 28, Rev. P. R. Lange, from the M. B. Ebenezer congregation, Buhler, Kansas, preached. On May 5th, in the evening, Missionary Voth from India, now Newton, preached. May 12, Rev. A. J. Dick from Elbing preached a Mother's Day sermon in English, and a Hospital Day sermon in German. In the afternoon and evening the combined choirs of the First Christian Church and of our church gave the oratorio "The Last Judgment," by Spohr. It was very good.

May 14, was the thirty-third anniversary of the Deaconess and Hospital Society. Missionary Voth preached in the forenoon on love, and Dr. E. Kaufman preached in the afternoon. Both sermons were very suitable. In the afternoon the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Deaconess Hospital and Home for Aged celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. The reports of the hospital, the home, and the auxiliary were very interesting. The auxiliary served dinner and supper in the basement of the church. The Sisters sang a beautiful hymn. The meetings were very well attended.

On Ascension Day, Rev. H. T. Unruh from Halstead preached in both languages. Sunday June 2, after a short sermon our pastor read the confession of faith, the nine catechumens sitting in front. They confessed their faith and expressed the desire to be baptized.

On June 3, an electric pipeless pipe organ was shown in our church, and it made wonderful music, being by far cheaper and better than a pipe organ if it holds out, as they claim it does. The price is only $1250. It is fully strong enough for our church.

On Pentecost nine young people, five gentlemen and four ladies, were baptized and received into the congregation after a very appropriate heart to heart sermon from our pastor, Bro. J. E. Entz. The vested choir led the catechumens, singing, into the church. They sang a beautiful cantata before the sermon and a hymn before the baptism. All was so solemn and appropriate.

On Thursday evening, June 13, Rev. A. H. Unruh from Canada held the prayer meeting and the teachers' meeting in a very interesting, efficient and blessed way. If it had been known that he would lead, many more would have come, but his coming was quite unexpected and was only known a few hours before the meeting.

On Sunday, June 16, Rev. P. H. Unruh from Alexanderwohl held two very suitable and efficient preparatory sermons for the Lord's supper in German and in English. On June 23 we celebrated the Lord's supper, our pastor preaching.

On Thursday evening was the last prayer meeting, finishing the epistle to the Philippians, The first week in September we hope to begin considering the epistle to the Colossians.

Saturday evening, June 29, the Wheaton College Crusaders gave a program in our church.

Anchor Mennonite Church, Gibson City, Ill. Members of our Sunday School enjoyed a picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Birkey, July 4th. Everyone reported having had a very nice time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Unzicker and children Lyle and Farice, spent Sunday, July 7, at the home of Mrs. Unzicker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Baughman, Caznovia, Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. George Schertz and son, Jesse, and Ida Troyer worshiped with us and visited at the home of Lizzie Slan and Earl Schertz, June 23.

Rev. E. Augspurger and wife visited at the home of his brother, Rev. and Mrs. Aaron Augspurger, June 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Roth from Bloomington and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Roth from Chamagin worshiped with us June 23, and visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Schertz and sons, Wilbur and Dale.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Hoffman and little daughter Joybelle and baby son, John Paul, of Carlock worshiped with us and visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shippert.

Mrs. P. A. Schertz and son, Dale, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Roth, June 30, at Champagin, Illinois.

Our Sunday School reorganized June 30. A. E. Schertz was elected superintendent, Carl Young, chorister, and Mrs. Carl Young, pianist. Yvonne Unzicker was elected as secretary. It certainly behooves us all to try to live closer to God so we will glorify Him more this year in our Sunday School than we have in the past. Rev. Roy Unzicker also was voted back by the church to give us the message again this year. We pray for the Holy Spirit to guide him in all his ways.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Young and children, Mildred, Harold, Richard, and Dorothy, spent Sunday, July 7, visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Goodrich at Hoopston, Illinois.

Rev. and Mrs. Roy Unzicker and daughter Yvonne and Velda spent Thursday, July 11, at the Flanagan Park, where the ministers held their picnic.

A workman that needeth not be ashamed is one who is not afraid to have the Master come and inspect his work. In hearty devotion to it, in thoroughness and skill, he presents himself approved to him who employs him. God's workers are to give diligence to present themselves approved to Him; to have their work worthy of Him unto all well pleasing. They are to be as workmen that need not to be ashamed. A workman is one who knows his work, who gives himself wholly to it, who is known as a working man, who takes delight in doing his work well. Such every minister, every Christian worker, is to be—a workman that makes a study of it to invite and expect the Master's approval.—Murray.

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters therof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof . . . . Be still and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth."

—Psalm 46.

EASTERN DISTRICT RETREAT

Saturday Evening at Retreat

A large group of young people are gathered on the bank of the little stream which represents the Sea of Galilee. Rev. A. S. Rosenberger is standing on the raft which represents Simon's boat and delivers a fine message on the parables of Jesus. I believe that each Retreater was really carried back to the shores of Galilee when Christ taught the multitudes from Simon's boat.

Following this delightful sunset service, the group scrambled to the Recreation Hall because of a storm which was quickly approaching the camp. Here we enjoyed a fine drama, "The Pentecost of Youth," presented by the young people of the Swamp charges. The challenge which this drama presented to the Retreaters was a beautiful setting for the impressive communion service.

The communion service was in charge of Rev. A. M. Fretz. The Retreaters formed four semi-circles around the altar and four ministers assisted Rev. Fretz. The Retreaters took communion in unison.

Following this beautiful service, the groups went to their respective cabins and closed the day with a short devotional service.

And Saturday at Retreat was over.

Missions

Mrs. Pannebecker led the mission class through an interesting and educational study of China, one of the largest and oldest nations of the world, and yet so little influenced by the others. As she told us today through our contact with each other the world does not seem so large as we once thought, for after all nations are like a big family learning from each other by fighting, mingling, and helping one onother which all tends to bring about a closer feeling and a more vital relationship.

Through her training and experiences in the Chinese field she brought before us a vivid picture of the history, geography, religions, customs, and traditions of China carried down through the ages by this great mass of people who worship their idols and spirits through fear instead of a religion of love as the Christian missionaries are trying to bring to them by a threefold program of evangelistic, educational, and medical training.

We who have always lived in America can hardly realize the hardships, sorrows, and the many perplexing problems that face these people when we are confronted with the real facts as presented by Mrs. Pannebecker. Teaching Christianity and helping the Chinese face their many problems is by no means a small task for our missionaries who are so few in number and with so large a field that we wonder how they have been able to accomplish the wonderful work they have.

I am sure the time spent in that class was certainly worth while and we left with a deeper feeling of responsibility and respect for our missionaries and the Chinese people and with a prayer in our hearts that this great work may be carried on so that all may learn to know our God of love.

Ancient Wisdom For Present-day Problems

Proverbs 16:8, 32; 6:16-19

Some people are so worldly wise and so modern that they feel quite positive that the past can teach them nothing. How badly fooled they are, to close their eyes to the vast wealth of wisdom the past has in store for them. There are some things which never change, such as God, man with his sinful tendencies, the grace and mercy of God, the Bible as the Book of the ages, and the eternal principles of God.

There is no more rewarding study than to read througth the entire Book of Proverbs, and note the various truths which are just as true for us today as they were in the day when the author wrote them. The program committee, or the leader if he arranges the program, might find it helpful and interesting to ask five or six people to seek out five proverbs which they like best and speak briefly upon them.

The author of Proverbs had a warm faith in God. He found that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge." Only fools despise wisdom and instruction. He exhorts every man to "trust in the Lord" with all his strength. The "path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." The heart is considered the center of all of life, thus all motives should be pure, for as a man thinketh so is he.

Practically all the evils that man is and has always been heir to when he lives a life of the flesh, receive consideration: the allurements of sin in general, the wicked, adulterous woman, pride, false balance, trusting in riches and others. In a number of instances one can see a foregleam of the principles enunciated by Jesus, as is evidenced in such Proverbs as 10:12; 11:24; and 11:2.8

Some proverbs which may be used as the basis of talks are: 1:7; 2:2-6; 3:5; 3:11; 4:18; 4:23; 6:16; 11:1; 11:2; 11:14; 14:34; 15:1; 15:16; 16:32; and others. This may be one of your most helpful services, plan to make it such. The Book of the Ages has riches untold that fade not away.

Finish What You Start

Luke 9:62; James 1:5-8

Christian Endeavor discussions should be of interest not only to the Endeavorers, but the editor of this department believes it helpful for older people to attend their services and participate occasionally when asked to do so. But let older people remember that this is a service belonging primarily to the young people. It is not to be a service where older people preach at the younger people. This topic here under discussion is of true worth to both young and old.

Questions

1. What is involved in Jesus' parable concerning the builder who did not first count the cost?
2. Why is it so very important that a right beginning be made?
3. Why do some people never get started?
4. What is the harm in not finishing what has been begun?
5. How may we acquire the habit of always finishing what we have begun?
6. How may we know whether we have finished the task assigned to us? Did Jesus finish His task here on earth?
7. How much is expected of us?
8. How may we find strength to carry to completion a task which seems humanly impossible?

An old saying is "Well begun, half done," but remember, to merely begin things and not finishing them, spells failure and shallowness, if not laziness. There are too many shiftless people who get tired when the "going" is hard. Jesus taught the parable of the seed sown in shallow soil as well as the story of the builder who did not count the cost· If we think our tasks are difficult and are just about ready to give up in despair, let us think upon Jesus' tasks when the multitudes followed Him no longer, when His enemies trailed Him, seeking an excuse to kill Him, and when even His most intimate friends denied Him, betrayed Him, and followed from afar when He went to Calvary. How hopeless His task must have seemed. And yet He must have had faith in His task and in His methods, believing that time would bring its rewards. No human being can carry through to completion a truly great task without the aid of a power greater than his own. We cannot live the Sermon on the Mount nor win the crown without bearing the cross daily.

There are vast multitudes who because of social and economic conditions do not have the courage to start any task. They have been idle so long that they will not care to ever work again. They are indeed a pitiable group. There is another group, and the world has always had them who are strong for starting things, but who soon grow tired and quit. While the crowd is watching them they seem to have much enthusiasm, but when they come to the dead pull then they become discouraged and are ready to quit. It soon becomes a habit to them and they will find it hard to ever complete a single task. It is a habit and can be overcome by ever permitting yourself to fail, and if fail you must, be assured that you have given every ounce of energy within your power and leave the rest to God. Even in small, seemingly insignificant things make it a rule to do well what you have begun to do. The Master will then give His "Well Done." "Give of your best to the Master and the best will come back to you."

What Makes Up A Good Time?

Amos 6:1-6; Luke 24:32

It does not pay to "have a good time" at the expense of an uneasy conscience the next morning.

Pre-Prayer

That we may ever use our time, our talent, and our life in a way that will count for the most in helping to further Christ's cause here on earth.

Questions

1. What do I think of when I hear the words "good time"?
2. Are there different meanings for these words?
3. To the saved and consecrated Christian, what makes up a good time?
4. To the unsaved, what makes up a good time?
5. Is time spent in service for others well spent?
6. Is time spent in service for God well spent?

Study

Amos 6:1-6. There are many people today whose idea of a good time is revelry and personal indulgence. Some folks seem not to be happy unless they are eating. Others cannot conceive of sociability without drinking or gambling. Among young people there is a tendency to imitate their elders in such pursuits. Some young people put things which are open to question into the heart of their social programs.

Luke 24:32. The other type of good time is described in this passage. This was the sharing of a great personality and power, producing far more of a thrill than an hour or two of revelry. 1 Cor. 15 and 16; Prov. 19:15; 23:29-32; 20:1; 23:5; Luke 7:36-50; Eph. 6:7; Luke 10:25-37.

The Lord Jesus in Matt. 16:24, 25 points the way to real happiness and noble achievement. How complete was Jesus' dedication of Himself to self-denying service for others! He went about doing good. His every thought was for the well being of others. And finally, after a flawless life of helpfulness for others, He died an atoning death for you and for me,—for the sins of the world. Nothing could swerve Him from His course, nor deter Him in doing the will of His Father.

Would you make your time count for most? Would you deepen your Christian character and have constant, ever increasing joy? Then, die daily, to help; think less of self and more of others! Then, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who * * took upon him the form of a servant" (Phil 2:5-7).

The need for clean, consecrated, Spirit filled and surrendered Christians in the service of God was never greater. Read John 4:35. Let us be swift to obey His command (Matt. 9:38). There is no service in all the world to be compared with the service of God. Livingstone, the missionary in Africa, said: "If God called you to be a missionary, don't shrivel up into being a king"! If we give ourselves to sinful pleasure, then we are sure to experience bitter disappointment, sooner or later, for "Sinful pleasures are like poppies spread,

You seize the flower, the bloom is shed;
Or like the snow falls into the river:
A moment white, then gone forever."

Our good times—for and by Christian young people—(1) should produce recreation and enjoyment; (2) should produce delight from sharing the personalities and friendships of other persons; (3) should be free from any practices harmful to the physical or spiritual well-being of the participants; and (4) should be of such a nature that all the young people present can have the same enjoyment.

One person's answer to, "What makes up a good time"? is, "Sincere, earnest, self-sacrificing service for God and man." What is your answer?

Can Sinful Pleasure Satisfy?

Consider Nero, who had so far exhausted all the arts of pleasure that he offered prizes to any one who would devise new methods of enjoyment. See him as he sits on his splendid throne, the emperor of Rome. The ceilings of his banquet hall are arranged to shower fragrant perfumes upon the revelers. His crown is worth half a million dollars. He never wears the same garment twice — resplendent and costly though it may be. Pleasures to glut are his. But he is peevish, gloomy, at heart miserably unhappy. He is unsatisfied, because he is unsaved. He dies a suicide.

Now consider Paul, who lies in one of Nero's lonely dungeons, "the prisoner of the Lord." A chain binds him to a Roman soldier. The scars on his back still speak of "five times * * forty stripes, save one." The lines on his face tell of peril unparalleled. The executioner's ax is in preparation for its deadly work, and the end is in view. But is he sad and disconsolate? A thousand times, no! He writes under the shadow of the executioner's ax, "Rejoice * * and again I say, rejoice"! He is happy, he is satisfied, because he is saved.

How People Make Their Living

II Thess. 3:6-13

"Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men." Prov. 22:29.

Pre-Prayer

That we may prepare our lives so that we may make a living and in an honest and Christ-like way.

Our subject is one that is most timely. One of the most serious problems of our day is the enforced idleness of millions of people who want to work, people who are willing to work, people who must earn, somehow, a living for themselves and their families. With this problem, the brains of the nation and of the world are struggling in an effort to find some way out.

Apart from that unfortunate, idle element in every community, who would gladly work if work was to be had, there is another group of idle people, who eke out an existence, a sponge like existence, upon others, who would not work even if they had an opportunity to do so. In a beehive they would be called the drones. Whatever they have, they acquire it dishonestly: in gambling and in playing other games of chance, and in preying upon the public—robbing, cheating, and swindling. This class exerts a hurtful influence upon others. Dishonesty is condemned in the Bible: Prov. 11:1; Prov. 21:6.

In every community there is that honest, upright, God-fearing and man-serving group of men and women who earn their living in keeping with the Bible formula, Gen. 3:19. With their hands and intellects they give themselves to honest, helpful labor. May their tribe increase!

One of the greatest blessings which life affords is the blessing of work. Jesus said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." He Himself was a tireless toiler and followed in the steps of the first Adam, and earned His living in the sweat of His face. Whatever our hands find to do, let us do it with all our might, as servants of God, and in whatever sphere He may have placed us, or may yet choose to place us, let us be faithful.

Topic.—Hymn Study: "Tell Me the Stories of Jesus," by W. H. Parker

Luke 18:15-17; Matt. 21:8-17

Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John are filled with stories of Jesus, stories that tell of His wonderful life and work. We think first of the story that we know so well, the one of His birth. No other baby ever came as He did. Prophets had long told that He would come and both Matthew and Luke tell of His birth in Bethlehem. Angels sang of it and wise men came from far away to see.

John tells of the calling of the first disciples. Jesus had been baptized, then later came back to where John the Baptist was preaching and baptizing. When John saw Him, he called out, "Behold the Lamb of God!" Two disciples who heard him followed Jesus. They asked Jesus where He lived, and He invited them to come and see. They went and stayed with Him that day. We do not know what any of them said while there, but we do know that afterward Andrew, one of the two, hurried to tell his brother that they had found Christ.

We are glad that Jesus invites us, too, to come and get acquainted with Him. He has not changed, but says to us, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." When we come to Him we learn, as Andrew did, that He is indeed God's own Son, Christ the Savior.

Going with Jesus through His life, we find Him doing many wonderful things. We like to think of Him going about doing good. He has been called "the Great Physician" because He cured so many people that doctors could not help. No sickness was too bad for Him to cure. Then you will remember that He even made some people alive after they had died. That reminds us that He has promised to do the same for all of us who love Him. He does not cause people to live again and come back to their families as He did then, but they live in heaven with Him.

We think of the time He quieted the storm and of the times when He fed many who were hungry. As we think of His life, all of these works come to our minds quickly, but notice what He said in Luke 4:43. He was glad to help others, but He had a greater work than healing. He must preach because He came to save rather than heal. In Luke 19:10 we read, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Finally we come to the story that tells the real reason for His coming—that of His death. We must never forget that He died not because His enemies were stronger than He, but because He loved us and there was no other way to save us from sin. We can not understand it all, but the Bible tells us and we know it is true.

We dare not stop there, but always want to go to the story of His resurrection, His going back to heaven, and His promise to come again.

Plans for the Meeting

Have the Juniors tell as many stories of Jesus as time will permit. It will be best to assign stories in advance. Otherwise some may be keenly disappointed if they find that many have chosen the same story. Have someone sing the song assigned for study. You may also use "Tell Me the Story of Jesus," by Fanny Crosby.

Questions

1. Why do we love the stories of Jesus?
2. Why should we study these stories?
3. How is Jesus' love shown in the lesson today?
4. Mention some stories showing His power.

Topic.—Why Do We Go To Church?

Isa. 2:3; Luke 4:16

What would be your answer if you were asked why you go to church? Many of you go every Sunday because mother and father have taken you there ever since you were small. It has become a habit and the day would not seem like Sunday if you didn't go. We know this is a habit that pleases God, for the Bible says of Jesus that He went to God's house, "as his custom was." The apostles too formed a habit of going to God's house on His day. Some boys and girls do not really care to go to church, but go because their parents say they shall. This was true of a boy named Ralph. He had always been expected to go to church and Sunday school regularly and thought he would have quite a vacation when his mother told him that because of his father's work they must move to a town that had no church. It did not take long to see the difference. People in the new town were rough and all said and did things that he knew were not right. He just could not feel at home with any of them and was as happy as could be when his father decided to try to get a missionary to come to start a church and Sunday school.

Some people go to church to meet friends. While that is not the best reason, it is good, for there, while meeting worth while people, we hear of Christ, the very best friend.

Many of us can say that we go to church because we enjoy it. We can truly say that we "serve the Lord with gladness; come before his presence with singing." We enjoy going especially because there we meet and worship God.

As we meet with God, we learn of Christ and His word. A minister once visited an infidel who did not want to be spoken to about God. The minister asked if he might ask just one question. Then he said that he must preach that evening and asked, "What shall I preach about"? The unbeliever thought a long time, then, as tears rolled down his cheeks, he said, "Preach the Christ of the Bible! Nothing else will help"! Then he, too, was willing to listen as the minister told him of Christ. It is good to obey our parents and form a habit of going to church; it is good to meet friends there; it is good to enjoy the service, but none of these are worth while unless we meet God and study His word there.

Another very good reason for going to church is that we may help others. The great work of the church is to get people to know and to love the Lord Jesus Christ. As we go, we may be able to get another to go to hear or we may find someone there that we can help.

Last of all, we need to remember that God wants us to go. It is so easy on these fine summer days to get into the car and go off for a picnic, but hear what the Word has to say in Heb. 10:25, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is." You may do one of three things. You may listen to Satan as he tempts you to make Sunday a holiday instead of a Lord's Day, you may go to church just because you must, or you may be eager to go to worship God, to study His Word and to help others. Which shall it be?

Plans for the Meeting

Draw a picture of a church on the blackboard. Make a number of paths leading to the church and on each path write a reason for attending services.

Questions

1. Why is church going a good habit?
2. Why is the Christian glad to go to church?
3. What do you think the best reason for going to church?
4. How may we help others by our church attendance?
5. What kind of town would yours become if there were no churches?

Daniel

(Temperance and Health)

Lesson Text—Daniel 1:8-20

Golden Text.—Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you which ye have of God. 1 Cor. 6:19.

The character which we are to study for this Sunday lived at the time of the captivity of the Hebrews in Babylonia. The first breakdown of the southern kingdom came in 597 when the Babylonians carried off to their homeland several thousand of the very best young men of Judah. Among these was Daniel. The first part of the book of Daniel is a discussion of his faithfulness in the midst of heathen surroundings. The book of Daniel is not a book of prophecy as is sometimes supposed, but it is an apocalyptic book, written during the time of the severe persecution of the Hebrew people by Antiochus of Syria in 168 B. C. The author of Daniel is attempting to bring courage and hope to the Hebrews who are going through a great scourging. An interpreter of the book of Daniel should first study carefully the reign of Antiochus and his persecution of the Jews. The book of Daniel is the noblest product of this bitter experience and can only be understood as it is read in the light of this tragedy. The author uses Daniel as an illustration of a man that was true and faithful although he went through the bitterest persecution. The significance of the whole book of Daniel lies in the thought that throughout all history, even its darkest hours, runs a divine purpose and that faith in God will bring the dawn.

Although Daniel is to be studied in our lesson as an illustration of a young man that is temperate, yet his temperance was a product of his religious experience. He purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the king's meat nor the wine, because Daniel kept clear his vision of God and he was motivated by a dominating purpose. He kept clearly in mind the goal of life. There are often many devices and remedies offered to get people to be temperate and to abstain from tobacco and intoxicating liquors. There is only one permanent solution for these evils. The individual needs to live in the fellowship of God and as Isaiah of old, God will cleanse his lips and his life. An individual that has a consuming purpose and loses his life in a great cause or for the welfare of others has not much bother with temptations of tobacco or strong drink. It is such individuals who will have the courage of their convictions and although they must stand alone they will stand for the right. As we read the rest of the life of Daniel we discover that Daniel was not only blessed as a young man for his stand, but it prepared him to face the tasks and responsibilities of later life. Perhaps one of the most difficult things for young people as well as older ones is to go against the common practices and prevailing social customs. Many young people engage in smoking and drinking because they feel it becomes necessary in order to be congenial in society.

Who was Daniel?

What is the purpose of the book of Daniel?

What was the secret of success in the life of Daniel?

Is Jesus practical when He says, "He that loseth his life shall save it"?

Martha

Lesson Text.—Luke 10:38-42; John 11:17-28

Golden Text.—Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

In this lesson we leave the Old Testament and study a character of the New Testament. It is quite as interesting to study Jesus' attitude towards Martha as it is to study Martha herself. Jesus is known by many names which are to portray different phases of His character. We find Jesus as a man of authority, a ruler, a master, a shepherd. He scathingly denounces the Scribes and Pharisees. He drives the money changers in the temple. He stills the storm on the Sea of Galilee. He drives devils out of people's lives. But on the other hand this same Jesus of might and power and authority is also presented as a friend. We find Him today in the seclusion of a private home. It was where He loved to be and go. He is in the home of Mary and Martha and Lazarus. The account in Luke tells us that Martha received Jesus into her home. There were two attitudes they could take towards their guest. One was to entertain Him, to try in every possible way to supply His bodily desires and the other was to listen to Him and be a receiver of blessings which came from Him. Martha seemed to be interested primarily in the first. Mary in the second. This represents two types of people. The one, Martha, cumbered with many cares, and the other, Mary, sitting at the feet of Jesus. A person in visiting is sometimes disappointed in the great amount of time which is consumed by the host and hostess in attempting to satisfy the physical desires of their guests. Some women can not stay for church service and enjoy a spiritual meal because they are so deeply concerned and anxious about providing the material meal for the guests. Jesus' criticism of Martha was not that she was getting the meal or that she was concerned about feeding, but rather that she became over anxious and made it primary in her life. It does become necessary to provide for the bodily needs of our guests, but after all the primary thing is the visit, the friendship and the fellowship. The truth of this lesson is first things first. A home often becomes simply a dwelling place for human beings because of the absorption of the members in the home in material things. We are so busy these days and over anxious about our material interests that we lose the great permanent values of true friendship and love.

What was Jesus' interest in people in the day in which He lived?

What is the difference between Mary and Martha?

How may good things crowd out the best?

What kind of a home attracts Jesus?

What was Jesus' interest in home life?

A kind word spoken for Christ may create a wider vibration in eternity than the grandest sermon by the greatest preacher.—C. Gowand.

MY PURPOSE

To be a little kindlier with the passing of each day;
To leave but happy memories as I go along my way;
To use possessions that are mine in service full and free,
To sacrifice the trivial things for larger good to be;
To give of love in lavish way that friendships true may live;
To be less quick to criticize, more ready to forgive;
To use such talents as I have that happiness may grow,
To take the bitter with the sweet, assured 'tis better so;
To be quite free from self-intent, whate'er the task I do,
To help the world's faith stronger grow, to all that's good and true;
To keep my faith in God and right, no matter how things run,
God grant to me the strength of heart, of motive and of will,
To do my part, and falter not, this purpose to fulfill.

JOTTINGS

Prof. Unruh of Freeman College, Freeman, S. D., has secured a leave of absence from the college in order to continue his studies. He will attend the University of Texas. His address will be 202 E. 32nd St., Austin, Texas.

The unprecedented spectacle of a dramatic demonstration against war by the Northfield Missionary Conference, East Northfield, Mass., was hailed as an omen of profound significance in the religious crusade for a warless world in the form of a parade consisting of twenty units, including missionaries, students, Salvation Army, and others. Two thousand people made the following pledge: "Because I cannot reconcile the Way of Christ with the practice of war, I pledge myself before God to work for the abolition of war as a method for settling international disputes and to insist upon the use of all governments of the machinery of peace to maintain international justice and good will."

A movement to secure national observance of Memorial Day, May 30, as an occasion for homage to the "heroes of peace" as well as of war, has been started by a group of distinguished clergymen and laymen, members of the Memorial Day Extension Commission. An appeal has been sent the governors and mayors suggesting that the issue of special Memorial Day proclamations in which citizens would be summoned to pay homage to the heroes of peace—scientists, educators, writers, philannthropists, statesmen, industrial pioneers, etc., as well as the heroes of war.

During the absence of the pastor of the First Church, Philadelphia, Rev. Carl Landes, who will attend the General Conference, Dr. Irwin Bauman, head of the Sociology Department of Bluffton College, will preach.

The beginning of the second week of Daily Bible School, the Immanuel Mennonite Church of Los Angeles, Calif., had 211 registered pupils. The term is for four weeks. There are sevcn teachers. While the public schools were in session the church held weekly Bible class for boys and girls. Here the average attendance was sixty from January to June.

The Seventh Annual Junior Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern District Conference was held May 30, at the West Swamp, Pa., Mennonite church. The session opened with a bugle call to worship by one of the juniors and consisted of various kinds of music, the dramatization of "The Call of Samuel," and a Bible drill. Souderton was awarded the banner for having 100 percent present. The society having the largest number present was the West Swamp society, the host to the convention. The speaker was Mrs. Boehr, one of our China missionaries. Her address specially interested the juniors. The convention had the largest attendance in the history of these meetings, 175 juniors being present.

The pastor and secretary of the First Mennonite Church of Aberdeen, Idaho, Rev. J. E. Kaufman and Alfred Wedel, join in an invitation to visitors to General Conference to pay a visit to the congregation on their way home. The congregation is distantly located from other Mennonite settlements, and feels the need of fellowship with others of the faith. Guests coming through Colorado and Wyoming follow Route 3 on to American Falls, Idaho, then cross the bridge of the American Falls Dam. Turn north 14 miles to Aberdeen on Roosevelt Highway. Guests touring via Yellowstone National Park follow Route 91 to Blackfoot, Idaho, then turn west on Roosevelt Highway to Aberdeen. It is a short day's trip from the Park.

EDITORIAL

Railroad literature is designed to serve practical purposes and, its object being gained, it generally becomes so much waste paper. However, a personal interest may be attached to some of it if one associates it with particular events. From a pile of old papers we rescued a circular printed on red paper, announcing the laying of the cornerstone of Bethel College and offering special rates from the East. That there were visitors to that event from the East we know, but we have been unable to find out how many there were. This scrap of paper has to us an important historical bearing since the beginning of Bethel College marked a great advance for Mennonites, particularly General Conference Mennonites.

We were going west by the Santa Fe. A railroad guide interested us, and all the more so because among the items concerning places on the route was one describing Newton, Kansas, and giving an account of the Mennonites in Kansas. It may be that thousands would read such a notice with but slight interest, but to us and those who were with us it had considerable significance since we were Mennonites.

There lies before us a special folder gotten out by the Santa Fe Railroad for the benefit of those who were interested in attending the General Conference held in Reedley, California, during the summer of 1917. The pamphlet is richly illustrated with scenes along the road and in and about Reedley. No doubt, among the treasured mementos of that Conference which was wrought with so much anxiety, some of the visitors are preserving, will be this interesting piece of railroad literature. Let us hope that memories of the 1935 Conference in California will be more than those we discover in local prints in the years to come.

Recently there were brought to the notice of the writer several pictures lately taken of an interesting little German Mennonite church in Gog, Germany. The exterior is small but substantial, and the interior portrays a personality such as only age, neatness, and good taste can show. Services are still being conducted in this building, but only two families, of what once was a considerable number, remain and they are in danger of extinction. Krefelt, the nearby town, has a large Mennonite congregation, and Pastor Kremer of this church occasionally serves the little group in Gog.

It is interesting to note that from this church the ancestor of the writer, Jacob Gottschalk, came to America, leaving some of his descendants in Germany. This was about the year 1797. Today there are thousands of his descendants in this country, while in Germany there remain but two. Until some years ago the Gottschalks were active in the Mennonite church in Germany, but the likelihood is that the name will disappear with the passing of these two descendants. G.

It sometimes happens that articles intended for The Mennonite and Christian Evangel are mailed directly to the printer, or to the Mennonite Book Concern, instead of being sent directly to the editors. No doubt the writers have the impression that by doing so their communications will get into print earlier. For the information of those who have this impression we would remark that nothing is printed except the editors of the departments in which it is to appear authorize the publication. We appreciate the sense of importance attached to material that should have immediate attention, but it should be appreciated that an editor is responsible for whatever is printed in his paper and that he must see and approve of everything for which he is answerable both to the readers and to the Board under which he works. G.

Older people sometimes make the remark that Sunday night services that were once marked by large attendances are things gone by, perhaps never to return. They see in the various interests that attract people away from the house of God a sign of the carelessness of the age. Today where they have not abandoned the night services, they can only depend on a corporal's guard to support them. We wish we were in a position to deny the truth of their observations, but every Sunday night we have the thing demonstrated before our eyes — that is if we happen to be attending the night service. Thousands of pastors all over the country feel that they must go through the motions of services when their only audiences are few people and many empty pews. There are many things to be considered in the light of this situation. The Sabbath has been robbed of its sanctity by the movies and the sports. The appeal of such things to the non-church member is strong while in times past the church was a social center, where church member and non-church member came together. That gave the minister an opportunity to appeal to the unconverted from the pulpit. The unconverted must be reached otherwise now, if they are to be reached at all. The pulpit message of today must, to a large extent, be confined to the edification of the saints. And the "saints" do need edification. If sinners are to be won it must be by consecrated lives and personal work in daily life. Early Christianity largely showed its growth in that way. Why not try more of that kind of primitive Christianity? It may be that the churches did not sufficiently realize, and still do not realize, that the word of God and the message of salvation must not wait for sinners to come and seek it, but must be brought to them wherever they are and, if they are not to be found in the churches, they will be found all around where churches and Christians happen to be. A CONTEST

(By J. H. Janzen, Waterloo)

It was at a little place in the wide open prairies of the Canadian Northwest where we gathered around the Word of God in a barn. The barn was decorated with green branches and prairie flowers, and we sat on the rough benches, made of unplaned boards, in reverent silence, awaiting the opening of the service. Down in the stable underneath the barn the hens made a desperate ado about the eggs they had laid, and above, under the roof, the sparrows were engaged in an endless quarrel about their housing problems. These birds are very much like human beings: Food, housing, and multiplying means everything to them, and they are willing to spend the whole day noisily chirping and cackling about it.

Before the song leader could announce the opening hymn, a hen entered the barn, strode forward, and began an indignant cackling about her newly laid egg and about the nonsense of what we were about to commence here. Just imagine, to hold a religious meeting in a barn, enlarging on abstract themes in this room designated to practical work and achievement. She stood there before me as if scoring me earnestly for what I was about to do.

"What means all your philosophy and even theology? What are you wasting all that eulogy for? Do you really mean to hide away by that the fact that you are unable to lay an egg? And who cares for the things which you have to say? I say, non!"

But at this point some rude fellow caught the hen roughly by her neck, almost choking her, and threw her out of the barn, after which she started an indignant lamenting in the courtyard, and she had to be driven away before we could start our service in due reverence.

The cackling in the stable and the chirping under the roof continued, but I pulled all my strength together and overcried the noisy company. I had to speak to a rather big crowd of prairie farmers of whom every one had his own problems, and expected from me the solution of them, and I spoke of Him, who is the sole but all-sufficient solution and answer to all our questions.

Circumstances under which I had to conduct the service were poor, and I did not feel so very keen about the results of my work, but I trusted that God would bless my humble efforts and that thereby the word sown into the hearts of the people would bear fruit,—even if I had been unable to lay an egg.

The next day I departed, moving on on my journey. At the railroad station I met one of my listeners of yesterday, who was here to see his little daughter off who was returning to the city where she was employed by some wealthy people, doing housework. The faces of the father and the little girl were radiant in spite of the parting that took place at the moment.

When the train was moving, I started a conversation with the little girl, and this is what I learned: She was fourteen years old, and earned $5.00 monthly, of which she had to pay 50c railroad fare for a monthly trip home to see her folks and to have her clothes mended and put in order. The remaining $4.50 she gave to her parents. Her father was out of work. Mother had her hands full, taking care of the household, of two smaller children, a girl and a boy, and a sick daughter, who was under treatment in some distant sanatorium. So the little Agatha really was the sole wage earner of the family, and what she earned amounted to $4.50 a month. Somebody ought to be ashamed of this, but I do not know who.

I asked how the older sister had contracted the disease for which she had been confined to the sanatorium.

"Oh," Agatha told me, "she always was of poor health, but when the house of the people for whom she worked, burned to the ground she tried to save whatever she could, thereby she became ill and had to quit work, was confined to the bed, and finally to the sanatorium."

Little Agatha did not look so very strong herself, but her little pale face was bright and smiling.

"How can you be so calm and even smile"? I asked her.

"Did you not say yesterday that our good Lord Jesus Christ is everywhere and knows everything? That He understands everything and has an answer to all our questions and a comfort for all our sorrows? That same Lord is going with me right now, and my heart is filled with joy, and I fear not."

I felt a little humiliated. Had not this child understood more of what I had said than I myself? But I was also encouraged. Had not the Word of God already done more good than I had believed it would?

Yes, I will keep on preaching the Word in season and out of season, and leave the egg-laying and the housing and multiplying problems to the hens and the sparrows, and also the chirping and cackling about it.

REVIVAL MEETINGS

(By H. J. Brown)

In our China mission field both missionaries and Chinese Christians feel that it is for the good of the Christian work to have outside evangelists come and conduct meetings in our churches; but to get a proper man for this work is no easy task. The list of evangelists at large in China is very short. Most of them have a long waiting list, and prefer to go to large places. Wang Ming Tao has our invitation for three or four years already, but even after waiting that long, our prospects of getting him are slim. Chia Yü Ming visited us once, and his meetings brought great blessings. Rev. Wang of Tsao Chowfu held a series of meetings in Tung Ming last summer which were very helpful to the church there. This year he was invited to hold an eight-day series of meetings in the city church of Kai Chow. He is an earnest man and in expounding the scriptures he gives many present day experiences and illustrations. His applications were practical and we appreciated his talks very much.

A week later Rev. Wang of Kaifeng visited our field and held meetings in four churches. The Kai Chow Eastsubunbs church was the last one to be visited. He belongs to the China Inland Mission and his work is entirely independent. He is a gifted man, and he was a great blessing to every church where he went. He is not noisy, but calm and speaks very distinctly. There is power behind the man.

In Tamingfu the Nazarene Mission had invited Rev. Sung (Dr.) for eight days meetings. He is a well known man. He graduated from Columbia University and then studied theology, but in all those so-called Christian schools he found it very hard to have his spiritual needs met under Christless teachers. He finally fought the battle to a finish on his knees behind locked doors. Then he left these spiritually dead institutions and went back to China to preach the Gospel to his own people. On his way back all his diplomas went over board the steamer. He wanted nothing but Christ. He is very lively in his meetings. He acts more than two Billy Sundays taken together. But since his dialect differs quite a little from that of ours here in the north, the dramatic presentations help the people to understand him.

The League of Christian Churches met in Kaifeng, Honan, from May 9-15, besides the regular league meetings. There were revival meetings in four places. Speakers known through the whole land were present. Leland Wang from the South, who is known even in America, and is connected with foreign missions in Borneo and other islands of the sea; Wang Ming Tao, whose home is in Peiping, but who has a large evangelistic field in all North China and Manchuria; Chia Yü Ming, the chairman of the League of Christian Churches, who has a Girls' Bible School in Nanking, but uses much time for the spreading of the Gospel, very gentle but forceful in his presentation; Galle Grahm, a missionary born and raised on the field, who has the language well and is an ardent worker; C. W. Traxel, who began his missionary career here in our field before our mission was organized, also beloved as an evangelist. Wang Ming Tao was not quite so much appreciated, because he used rather rough language, but who knows but that his meetings brought equally as good results. Praise God for all of them!

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

In speaking of the second coming of Christ it is essential to base our statements on Scripture and let Scripture speak for itself. "For all Scripture is given of God and is profitable for doctrine, for proof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness."

The Bible speaks not only of the birth of Christ, His suffering and death, His resurrection and ascension, but also of His literal return for the church and final judgment before the White Throne. We have a real gospel of salvation, likewise of His return.

Three great comings are foretold in the Word of God, that Christ should come has been fulfilled at His birth, that the Holy Spirit should come was fulfilled at Pentecost, and that He is to return or to come again for which we are to watch and wait "till He comes."

The return of the Lord to this earth is taught by the New Testament as clearly as any other doctrine in it, "I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven."

The Bible mentions and refers to Christ's coming more than three hundred times. The men divinely inspired who wrote these prophecies are the very men who tell us of the return of the Lord.

Daniel tells the meaning of the stone, which the king saw in his dream was cut out of the mountains, without hands, and broke to pieces, the iron, the brass, the silver, the clay, gold, etc. "The dream is certain and the interpretation thereof is sure," says Daniel. All but the closing part of that prophecy is fulfilled. Now only remains for this stone to smite the image and break it to pieces till it becomes like the dust of the summer threshing-floor and become a great mountain and fill the whole earth.

The Bible also speaks of how and when the Lord will return. "At an hour ye think not." "The falling away" must first come and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, who opposed and exalteth himself above all that is God. "Then shall the wicked (Antichrist) be revealed whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth and destroy with the brightness of his coming." "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." "The Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not." "It is not for you to know the time or the season, which the Father hath put in his own power." "I will come again and receive you unto myself."

We are also told how He comes. "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." He will come personally. "Look at me, handle me; for a Spirit has not flesh and bones as ye see me have." "Now I am risen from the dead and am going up to heaven." "He is gone," say the angels, "but he will come again, just as he went."

An angel announced His birth to the virgin. Angels sang His advent. An angel told the women of His resurrection. Two angels told the disciples of His coming again. The same testimony in all these cases.

He will come again, but we do not just know when. "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no not the angel of heaven, but my Father only." "The Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not." It is not for you to know the time or season which the Father hath put in His own power. Christ said, "I will come again and receive you unto myself."

He indicates no time, but He says "watch." Simeon and Hannah waited and watched for His first coming, and were not disappointed. Likewise should the church of today "watch" and "wait" for His second coming. Will she be deceived?

The first thing He is to do when He comes is to take the church, His body, His bride, out of the world. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God and the dead in Christ shall rise first." "Then we, which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord." What a comfort for the church!

He will come Himself to take His church home. The coming of the Lord to take the church into the air is not the coming for the final judgment before the White Throne. The deliverance of the church is one thing, judgment another. Christ will save His church by taking it out of the world. "Are not ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming"? "Your whole spirit and soul and body be presented blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show forth the Lord's death till He come."

The world is to grow worse and worse and at length there will be a separation. "Two women grinding at a mill; one taken, the other left."

The church is to be transplanted out of the world. The Bible gives us two examples what is to be done with all His true believers. Enoch is the representative of the first dispensation, Elijah of the second, and Christ, the Savior Himself, of the third dispensation, who entered heaven before death and became the first fruits of them that slept.

It is not first the waiting of judgment before the White Throne, but first comes the translation of the transfigured church and then possibly the millennium, when Christ Himself will reign a thousand years.

The world is constantly nearing its entire ruin, but God's mercy is no failure. Mankind is a failure as long as it remains on its own way, but the Son of God has come from heaven to save humanity from sin through His death. We can only be saved if we accept His plan of salvation.

The Bible does not say that the whole world will be brought to the feet of Jesus Christ in this dispensation.

"Simeon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for His name." He is waiting until His Gentile bride is completed. Until the elect are all gathered out." "The Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in the hour that he is not aware of."

When Christ will return He will find room in Bethlehem and will be welcomed in Jerusalem. He will reveal Himself as Joseph revealed himself to his brethren. He will say to the Jews, "I am Jesus," and they will reply, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." And the Jews will be that nation that shall be born in one day. "They shall see him whom they have pierced."

"There shall come in the last days scoffers, saying, where is the promise of his coming"? "For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation."

The Lord's day will come as a thief in the night. All who have died in the Lord are to be with Him when He descends from His Father's throne into the air. There will be an interval of time between the meeting His saints in the air and His coming to execute judgment upon the ungodly, to chain Satan in the bottomless pit for a thousand years and to establish the millennial reign in great power and glory. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death has no power and shall reign with him a thousand years. But the rest of the dead live not again until the thousand years were passed; this is the first resurrection."

Christ is to reign a thousand years before the final judgment before the Great White Throne, when Satan shall be cast into the lake of fire, and thus shall be a new heaven and a new earth.

The Lord was here and He went away, but He promised He will come again. They did not watch and wait in vain for His first coming. Will it be in vain to wait for His second coming?

The final judgment before the "White Throne." "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and heaven fled away, and there found no place for them." "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works." "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." And the judgment for Satan will? "And the devil that deceiveth them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever." No second chance.

And there will be a new heaven and earth. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sin."

"Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

"I say unto you, watch." "Behold, I come as a thief." "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garment lest he walk naked and they see his shame." J. J. Friesen.

REV. DAVID GOERZ

By One Who Knew Him Well

Biographies of men who have contributed something worth while to the world; who have left it better when they closed their eyes in death, than it was when they entered it, are not written primarily for information, but rather for the purpose of encouraging others in their endeavor to serve. They are written, also, to perpetuate the memories of such who in the face of adversities and harsh criticisms did not swerve from their God-appointed paths. Keeping these objectives in mind, the following brief biography is written of one of the many outstanding men of our conference—Rev. David Goerz. May these lines encourage such who are busy in the work of the Master.

His Early Life

David Goerz was born on the second day of June, 1849, in Neu-Bereslav, near the Sea of Azov, South Russia. He was the eighth of twelve children, only three of which reached maturity. His parents were Heinrich and Agnes Goerz. David must have manifested certain qualities in his childhood which prompted his mother to express the wish that her son might become either a teacher or a preacher. Her fond wish was more than granted. He was not only a successful pedagogue and a forceful preacher, but also an organizer coupled with keen business ability. He was a born leader. He had the rare gift of clarifying befogged problems. Those who have had the privilege to sit with him in committee meetings, or have heard him in District and General Conferences, can testify to his ability to bring light into obscure problems. In debate he was a formidable opponent.

His education began in "Die Gemeindeschule." in Neu-Bereslav, and later on he continued his studies in Gnadenfeld and Orloff on the Molotschna. In the latter village, where his brother Abraham lived, and whom he had the joy to visit for the last time on his return trip from India, David Goerz developed a useful and far reaching ministry. David's parents were not rich and hence he had to earn part of his school expenses. That he was an outstanding student is evident from the fact that at the age of sixteen he was called to the secretaryship in the office of Mr. Cornies, who was the owner of a large estate. Enough is known of Mr. Cornies his punctuality and exactness, that no man of ordinary caliber could have held this position for any length of time. David did. So well did he manage the office with its multitudinous duties that he was given additional work as a tutor. How he managed to discharge all these duties to the satisfaction of such a man as Mr. Cornies only those can understand who, in later years, saw Mr. Goerz at work. It is quite probable, however, that Mr. Goerz soon realized that the office was not altogether his life work, and that he gradually entered the teaching profession. He taught in Berdjansk and also tutored the children of Mr. Peter Janzen, Consul at Berdjansk.

At the age of eighteen, he went through that wonderful experience, to which he frequently referred from the pulpit—a genuine conversion. No one who had access to the "Inner Circle," as the writer had, could doubt the reality of this experience. Whether he found much spiritual food in the church of which he was a member, is not definitely known.

His Home Life

On June 29, 1870, Mr. Goerz married Miss Helen van Riesen of Gnadenfeld, and three years later the young couple emigrated to America, landing in New York on November 4. A few days later they arrived in Summerfield, Illinois. Here he again followed his profession as teacher in a German parochial school. They remained in Summerfield two years and then, like others, believing that the West offered opportunities for active men and women, they moved to Halstead, Kansas, arriving there on November 1, 1875. This was their home until they made Newton their permanent home. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Goerz: John H., Katie, Rudolph, Helen, Robert, Emma, Orlando, Arthur, and Willard. All but Arthur, who died in 1893, and John, who died in Philadelphia on May 8, 1930, are still living.

As a pedagogue, he loved and understood youth and entered into their sports as well as into their problems and difficulties. Those who sought his advice went away feeling that in him they had an understanding friend. His home was, therefore, the rendezvous of many aspiring young people. That he had a keen sense of humor need hardly be added, but he was not known to "swap stories" to any extent.

The Goerz family was musical. Mr. Goerz had a rich tenor voice which his sons, John and Orlando, inherited. John frequently sang in Glee Clubs in some of our larger cities. Mr. Goerz was particularly fond of chorals found in the Gesangbuch mit Noten, and to hear him read one of them made one feel that he entered into the mood of the composer. He loved his home, but because of his active life and varied interests, he traveled extensively and was necessarily often absent from it.

David Goerz As A Student

David Goerz was a student during his entire life. With him a diploma did not mean the end of education. He read extensively, and, being blessed with a retentive memory, he was able to make use of much of what he read. His sermons frequently contained quotations from some book which he had made his own. Naturally, he confined his reading mainly to German literature, but, although he never attended a school in America, he nevertheless had a good command of the English language. He was fond of poetry and history. The writer has been in his home when he would read aloud to young people from some interesting book, and he COULD read. His note book was always at hand into which he would jot down important passages which he feared he might possibly forget. No wonder he could hold the attention of his audience when in the pulpit. As a student he did not confine his reading to biography, history, theology, etc., but he busied himself with sciences as well. At the age of 18, he studied surveying which in later years proved to be an economical advantage for Bethel College. Some of the present buildings on the campus in Newton have been located by him. His motto was: "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

David Goerz As A Business Man And An Organizer

It seems almost inconsistent to speak of a preacher and teacher as also being a business man. Of course, a capable preacher is supposed to be an organizer also, but a business man? That does not seem quite appropriate. But David Goerz was a business man of no mean ability. One of his biographers calls him, "An astute business manager and farsighted financier." This is pre-eminently true of him. We need only refer briefly to some of his business activities.

In Halstead he opened his first book store and was its manager. He called into being "Zur Heimat" and was its editor until 1881, when this paper was taken over by the General Conference and the name changed to Bundes-Bote. During this period he became agent for a number of steamship lines. He was sent to New York as secretary for the Board of Guardians to welcome and assist Mennonite immigrants from Russia. His work was to help them through the customs, exchange their money, procure railroad transportation, and in fact see to the safe conveyance of the immigrants to their new western homes. He served this Board for 16 years, which in itself is a recommendation of his business ability. In 1900 he was sent to India as representative of the Emergency Relief Committee, entrusting huge quantities of grain and much money into his hands for the famine sufferers of India. Some of this grain and cash was distributed in the district where our Conference is now working. To show his farsightedness and executive ability, much could be said, but space forbids. He called into existence the Mennonite Mutual Fire Insurance Company, one of the strongest, if not the strongest, insurance company in the State of Kansas.

As an organizer, he had few equals. Bethel College stands as a monument to his untiring energy and love for His God, his denomination, and its youth. This institution did not come into being as many like institutions have. No individual gave a mentionable sum of money for the proposed college building. Practically all needed funds had to be collected from friends of higher education, all of whom were people of moderate means. This involved much, very much traveling, continued solicitation, much worry and loss of sleep. Besides this he had to meet and answer his opponents of whom there were not a few. Even during the construction of the first building, funds were occasionally so low that building operations had to be temporarily suspended. In fact, they were so low, mistrust and perhaps envy so fierce and persistent that a fiasco seemed inevitable. Fortunately, aside from a strong faith in God, in his denomination, and in the ultimate victory of his mission, he had many staunch friends. On one occasion, so the story goes, when it seemed that progress with the building of Bethel College was no longer possible, and the promoters were about ready to acknowledge defeat, Mr. Goerz received new strength and courage when Preacher Heinrich Richert rose to his feet and said, "Brethren, if we leave this building (Bethel College) uncompleted, then we are erecting for our posterity a monument of genuine Mennonite folly (Dummheit)." Bethel College was completed and dedicated to the service of mankind. He loved it with his whole being. Bethel was often on his lips and in his prayers. For many years he was the business manager of the school and one of its directors until his death.

The first Mennonite Teachers' Conference was organized by him in 1877, and here was passed the resolution to call into being the Western District Conference. He also helped to prepare the German Hymn Book now used in the German speaking churches. Then came another great faith venture. As early as 1890, David Goerz read a paper before the General Conference in which he warmly advocated deaconess work as a branch of Home Missions. At the next conference further steps in that direction were taken. The General Conference gave instructions to the Board of Home Missions to further the cause, especially since several candidates seemed ready to enter this work. But the Bethel Hospital and Deaconess Home came into actual existence some years later. Mr. Goerz promised the Lord, that if He would prosper his journey to India and bring him safely back to his loved ones, he would dedicate his life to the erection of an institution for the sick. God took him at his word, and he returned from India via Russia and immediately his prolific brain got busy. As a result of much prayer, untiring energy and farsighted planning there stands in Newton a Hospital and a Deaconess Home that rank well with any denominational hospital in the State of Kansas. In the year 1903, the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society was organized and on June 11, 1908, amid general rejoicing and thanksgiving, the hospital was dedicated to the Lord to be used for His service. Sister Frieda Kaufman, Sister Catherine Voth, and Sister Ida Epp were ordained and installed into full service. Perhaps among the warmest friends that Mr. Goerz had, who were at the same time loyal supporters of the college and the hospital, were Mr. and Mrs. Warkentin. Mr. Warkentin was, when on his Palestinian tour, accidentally shot and killed by a Persian Prince. Mr. Goerz, the warm friend of the family, brought the body of his friend home, which is now resting in the mausoleum in the Newton cemetery.

ALL MENNONITE YOUNG PEOPLE'S RETREAT

Shipshewana Lake, Shipshewana, Indiana

The Mennonite Young People's Retreat, held annually at Shipshewana Lake, opened this year August 5, with a registration of seventy-seven full time registrations, others coming in later, making the total registration eighty-one.

The Monday evening social was conducted very ably by Miss Elva Schrock, with the assistance of the Nappanee group. This social created an atmosphere of friendship and good will and also a serious minded attitude which was maintained throughout the Retreat.

Each morning the rising bell rang at six and the breakfast bell at seven. At eight o'clock the group gathered each morning in the tabernacle for a thirty-minute morning watch, conducted by one of the Retreat leaders. 8:30 to 9:15 o'clock was the first class period with the fololwing courses and leaders: Rev. I. R. Detweiler: "Message of Jesus for Days Ahead," Rev. W. B. Weaver, "Parables of Jesus," Prof. Wilbur Miller, "Studies in School Justice."

9:20-9:50 was the daily chapel, conducted by the Retreaters. 9:50-10:30 was the musical hour, in charge of Mr. Harold Reusser, a course in the Psalms taught by Rev. Smucker for those who did not take the music course. 10:40-11:25 was the second class period in which the classes of the first period were repeated. Lunch was served at 12 o'clock.

From 1 to 2 o'clock was quiet hour each day, observed by the Retreaters in their respective cottages. 2 to 5 was recreation period in charge of Mr. Wilbur Miller. It was decided by the group to spend the first part of this period in chorus singing, then a short time in the learning of new games, and the balance of the recreational period in playing familiar games and swimming and boating.

Dinner was served at 5:45, and it may be said that all meals were served by the retreaters in their respective cottages with the exception of several, who took their meals in the hotel.

The sunset service at 6:30 each evening was conducted at the shore of the lake by Rev. Smucker. Again this year, as in other years, the sunset service was one of the most impressive services of the Retreat.

The program following the Sunset service, held in the tabernacle, consisted of lectures given by retreat leaders, one retreater, and a musical program directed by Mr. Reusser.

On Wednesday and Thursday evening from 8:30 to 10:00, a social tournament, arranged by Mr. Miller, was greatly enjoyed by the retreaters and proved to be a real help for retreaters to get acquainted. Most of the retreaters learned at least fifty names. Miss Mary Smucker received a prize at the Saturday night wiener roast for having learned seventy-five names out of a total registration of eighty-one.

With a very impressive worship service on Sunday morning the Retreat closed. The Retreaters, faculty members, and friends joined hands and sang, "Blest be the tie that binds," leaving an impression that will ever be held dear in our memories.

THE CH'ANG YUAN MISSION

As most of you already know, our work in Ch'ang Yuan has been much hindered because of the flood conditions. Consequently, most of the work was carried on inside the city. Because of the many refugees eating in the soup kitchen, we never lacked an audience at the services and if anything special was on, for instance a wedding, tickets had to be given out to prevent the hall from being overcrowded. We long felt the need of doing work in the country, but we questioned the wisdom of starting more work since we were afraid the unhealthy condition of the city would require us to move if the flood continued. The low places in the city were all filled with water which has seepd through the city wall and the first warm winds of spring brought the smell of stagnant water into our yards. In the temple soup kitchen many had died and were not properly buried in back of the temple, increasing the danger of living there.

We finally wrote to two workers to come and help us begin work in a large market place just outside of the flooded area. Only one of them came, and he soon began preaching in this place. There were so many who came to listen that the evangelist had to preach from morning until night, which was rather hard on his throat, and a few weeks later he had quite a serious infection or abscess on one side of his neck which required an operation. After two months this evangelist has still not been able to return to his work.

During the spring we prayed that the Lord would have mercy on our field, and to send help so that the Yellow River Dyke could be closed, although, humanly speaking, it looked almost impossible. When we left Ch'ang Yuan in the last part of March, even the magistrate feared that the dyke could not be repaired, but within the next month the break was closed up and later traffic could go through the south and east gates on dry ground.

Now that we can go ahead with the work we are confronted with another difficulty, that is getting workers. We are at the southern end of the field with not much local help and to get workers from the northern end is quite difficult. The expense of moving is more than most workers can bear personally. We hope and pray that the Lord will give us only those who have a real desire to preach the Gospel and bring glory to His name. Sincerely, Martha Ewert.

Ch'ang Yuan, Hopei, China.

RELIEF NOTES

(Conducted by O. O. Miller and A. Warkentin)

The passing of Bro. Levi Mumaw, Secretary-Treasurer of the Mennonite Central Committee since July 28, 1920 (on which date the committee was organized), brings the first break in the personnel of its executive committee. The June 22, 1935, executive session held in Philadelphia, seems to have been the first one held at which Bro. Mumaw was not present. The major portion of responsibility and work connected with the home end of these cooperative Russian Mennonite Relief activities have been carried by him. The multitudes around the world who have in one way or another been reached by the M. C. C.'s arm of help and cheer will grieve at his passing. The committee will certainly miss his sane, steady, counsel. We thank God for the service and life He enabled him to give and rejoice that we can remember our brother's life as having been dedicated to His praise and service.

1935 reports from the Paraguay Colony indicate crop yields much below 1934. A cotton acreage double that of the previous year failed to bring a total harvest as big. Since this year's crop had not yet been marketed, the net cash income to the colony is not yet known. The oil producing crops have also been very short, as well as feed for pigs—the combination causing a real shortage in fats. General colony health conditions, however, continue good. Among the present more urgent colony problems are those of a depreciated currency and consequent unfavorable exchange, brought about by the disastrous Chaco war, final settlement of price and terms of the land on which the colony has settled, and the need for better housing and equipment for schools and industry, and a resident physician and surgeon. The M. C. C. tries to maintain close touch with these problems and to assist in their more satisfactory solution.

The most pressing present need confronting our U. S. cooperating groups, however, has to do with the small group of Russian brethren still detained in Germany, and cared for there through Bro. B. H. Unruh in a Mennonite Home. Groups in Canada, Holland, and Prussia as well as South Germany are also helping in this need. A small debt totaling about $3000.00 has accumulated in connection with operating the Home. Home expenses of about $175.00 continue until the institution can be closed, plans for which are under way. The M. C. C. has presented this need to the various cooperating committees and has assured Bro. Unruh of its active interest until the need is met. Contributions should be sent to the regular Relief Treasurers.

The reports from Russia contradict each other. In some parts of the country famine still prevails, in others the conditions have changed to the better. Some had to pay back the money which had been sent to them from foreign countries, others were allowed to keep it and express their great appreciation for the help. The little groups of refugees in China live in deplorable conditions. The M. C. C. is trying to get into direct contact with them in order to assist them in their need and effort to be united with their brethren in other countries.

O. O. Miller, Akron, Pa., who has assisted Bro. Mumaw for some years in the secretary's office, has been chosen to succeed him as secretary-treasurer.

CORRESPONDENCE

Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, July 22, 1935. Greetings to all the Readers of the Mennonite and Christian Evangel!

I have read of the many activities of the various Mennonite churches. Our church, too, has many activities.

We have services every Sunday morning and every other Sunday evening, C. E. every Sunday, choir practice under the leadership of Miss Mabel Amstutz on Monday, and Teachers' Meeting on Thursday nights.

During the absence of our pastor, Rev. P. A. Kliewer, who with his family is on a three months' vacation and who will also attend the General Conference at California, we have had different ministers in charge of our services. Each one has been giving us an inspiring message.

A three weeks' D. V. B. S. was held in our church in June. There were nine teachers, Misses Sevila Bixel, Esther Amstutz, Vera Amstutz, Ruth Moser, Charlotte Basinger, Magdalene Neuenschwander, Lenola Nusbaum, Mrs. Harold Burkholder, and Rev. Steiner, pastor of the Defenseless Mennonite church. The work was supervised by Misses Wilma Burkholder and Sevila Bixel. The enrollment was 167. The average attendance was very good. A wonderful spirit of cooperation was shown between the parents, the pupils, the teachers as well as those in charge during the entire three weeks. At the close of the school a program was given by the children.

Some time ago the Intermediate C. E. from Berne gave a program at our church. Our Intermediate C. E. gave a return program some time later. Our Intermediate C. E. also gave a program at Beaver Dam, O., on July 7, and on July 14th the young people from the First Mennonite church of Bluffton furnished the program at our church.

On June 30, the community male chorus of about thirty-five voices rendered a program at Salem church, Dalton, Ohio, in the afternoon, and at Oak Grove church at Smithville in the evening.

Our Gospel Team meets once a month for their time of study and Christian fellowship. The entire evening is spent in singing, prayer service, testimony, study, and special music. Our president for this year is Miss Minerva Hilty. The Gospel Team groups help in giving programs in the Lima Rescue Mission and also in the Lima Mennonite Mission.

Four of our young people are planning to enter the Moody Bible Institute this fall, besides the one who is already a student there. We who have received many great blessings and helps and have learned to know God in a wonderful way, while at M. B. I., know what is awaiting those who have yielded to God's calling. I am sure that they will never be sorry for the step that they are taking. May the Lord's richest blessing be showered upon them as well as all others who are taking such step. Corr.

Normal Church Notes, Normal, Illinois. The evening of July 30, twelve members of the Young Ladies' S. S. Class visited one of their members who was recently married, Mrs. F. C. Pease, formerly Miss Edith Litwiller, at Latham, Ill. They remembered her with a gift.

July 26, the Young Married People's S. S. class, taught by Mr. N. O. Hoover, held its regular monthly meeting with a treasure hunt at the home of Miss Iva Schwartz; assistant hostess, Mrs. Eldon Rupp.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Augspurger, Mrs. Henry Deuler, and granddaughter, Kathryn Lehe, attended the funeral of their brother, Rev. David Augspurger, at Goodland, Ind.

Anchor Mennonite Church, Gibson City, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. George Schertz and family and Mr. and Mrs. Loyal Augspurger and three children visited at the homes of Rev. and Mrs. Aaron Augspurger and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Young and family, July 21.

Our Sunday School opened Missionary Day and Cradle Roll Day combined with a program July 21. We feel sure that those who took part received a rich blessing and that our Lord was glorified.

Mr. Julius Unzicker of Foosland received word of his sister, Mrs. Amelia Sommers, passing from her earthly home into her heavenly home, July 22. Those from near Fisher who attended the funeral were: Mr. Julius Unzicker and son Arthur, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Unzicker and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Unzicker and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Unzicker, and Rev. and Mrs. Roy Unzicker and son Glen, and Mrs. John Garber of Gibson City.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Roth of Bloomington and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Roth of Champagin visited at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Schertz, August 4.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Schertz and sons, Wilbur and Dale, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Roth visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claris Roth of Gridley, Sunday, July 28.

Miss Frieda Garber who has been attending summer school at Normal for the past eight weeks, returned home Friday, August 9.

Mr. Val. Birky from Hudson and daughter, Miss Erma Birky, who returned home from Africa a few months ago, and Mr. Birky's sister, Miss Katie Birky from California, visited at the home of their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. John Naffsiger, of Foosland over the week-end of July 28-30.

Miss Erma Birky told some of her experiences in Africa at the East Bend Amish church both Sunday morning and evening. On Monday they visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Garber of Gibson City.

Recent Happenings at the First Mennonite Church of Philadelphia. It was a pleasure to see Christian Endeavorers from out of town and some from the Middlewest worship with us Sunday morning of the Christian Endeavor Convention week. It was also an inspiration to have Rev. Unruh, a trustee of the United Christian Endeavor Society and pastor of the Halstead, Kansas, Mennonite church, preach for us on Convention Sunday.

Another inspiring meeting in connection with the Christian Endeavor Convention was the Mennonite Rally held Wednesday afternoon at our church, at which a goodly number of delegates to the convention and local people participated.

Our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor participated in the parade on Saturday afternoon, which was enjoyed by those participating and the whole parade was impressive in a large way.

The church is represented at the General Conference, which will assemble August 2, by Rev. and Mrs. Landis and Joseph B. Bechtel and Mrs. Bechtel.

In June, Rev. C. J. Landis reminded the congregation that his resignation, offered January 1935, but extended at the request of the congregation for one year, would become effective at the end of 1935.

We have a committee at work, planning to celebrate the seventieth anniversary of our church, will take place the week, including Sundays, of October 6-13.

A successful daily vacation Bible school closed July 19, with a total enrollment of fifty-nine, and an average attendance of forty-three. It was conducted under the supervison of Rev. Landis.

During the absence of Rev. Landis at the conference, the pulpit in our church is supplied by Dr. Irwin W. Bauman of Bluffton College.

JUBILATION

"Bless the Lord, O my soul: And all that is within me bless his holy name.

Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits.

Who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases;

Who redeemeth thy life from destruction, who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies;

Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's."

—Psalm 103:1-5.

THANKSGIVING

A Jubilee Conference should be primarily a continuous session of thanksgiving. As this copy is sent to the printer, the General Conference of Menonites of North America is in session at Upland, California. It is proving itself to be a real Jubilee Conference. For a conference to live seventy-five years and to be able to report a steady, continual growth through three quarters of a century, surely must mean that God is using and blessing that organization.

Seventy-five years ago there were some men like John Oberholtzer and Christian Showalter, who saw visions and dreamed dreams. Being practically ousted from their mother conference, like good Mennonites they sought how they might do far their Lord and Master what they believed Divine Revelation bade them do and at the same time win to their program those who had driven them out.

In the year 1860 there were three geographical centers of interest, namely Milford Square, Pennsylvania, West Point, Iowa, and Wadsworth, Ohio. The editor of this Young People's Department had the honor of growing to manhood in the first named place. If I may be permitted to speak personally, I deem it a real honor that I was privileged to be a member of the Rev. A. B. Shelly's last catechetical class. Father Shelly has often been called the Father of Missions because he had such an active interest in that work. My mother well remembers the Rev. John Oberholtzer and some of his work.

These pioneers have builded well. We have come to our Diamond Jubilee. Praise the Lord, we are taking new hope—our Boards are all "out of the red,"—let us take new courage and go ahead. Surely we Mennonites have a real mission in the world or God would not have preserved us these more than four centuries. We have a great spiritual heritage. I am proud of the fact that I am a Mennonite. Our task is to discern that which is truly Mennonite and be courageous enough to cast aside that which is mere chaff, a mere excresence, the result of ignorance and fear of persecution. Let us take courage, for we must do things "in such a day as this."

EASTERN DISTRICT RETREAT

Bible Study Course

Taught by Rev. Howard Nyce

The subject of the course was "The Spirit-filled Life." This study was very truly inspirational. Many precious and valuable truths of God's Word were revealed to us. Those who had the opportunity of taking this course, I know have been helped in the development of their spiritual life.

The course was divided into five class periods. Every class was opened with prayer by one of the students. In our first class we took up the subject, "The Spirit-filled Life, How Obtained"? For this discussion we used John 3, and were also taken to a number of other Scripture passages, showing the necessity of the new birth to obtain the spiritual life.

The second class period we studied "Christian Life in the Home," using Luke 10:38-42 as our main Scripture basis. In this study it was pointed out to us that the Christian life should first be manifested in the home, that we should put God first in the family life and in everything.

Meditation and prayer which are the greatest helps to our Christian life, were taken up in our third period. The Scripture passages were Matt. 6:5-8 and 2 Tim. 3:16, 17. The importance of our devotional life was stressed. It was stated that a life devoted to Christ is the secret of a true devotional life. To learn to pray is to learn to live. To love Him is to live His Word.

The fourth period we studied Law Observance. This was based on Rom. 13:1-7. The discussion centered around the Christian's attitude toward law observance.

The last period was given over to the study of Christian World Peace, the greatest question in the world today. According to our study of certain Scripture passages a Christian should be much concerned about world peace. First there must be peace between God and man himself, through Jesus the Savior and Prince of Peace. Prophecy and future developments were discussed. Peacemakers are soulwinners.

The different portions of Scripture that were taken up in the course were very clearly explained and discussed. I feel confident that all of those who listened under this instructor have received just as great a blessing from it as I have. Verda Unruh, Bowmansville.

The Music Course

What a wonderful time each Retreater had who attended the music course conducted by Prof. Russell Lantz of Bluffton College. The music course was one of the high lights of this year's Retreat and was attended by many of the Retreaters. Prof. Lantz greatly stressed the fact that each individual should strive to make the world a more beautiful place in which to live, and one way to accomplish this is through music; the study, the appreciation, and the use of good music. Much of our time was devoted to the discussion of hymns; under what conditions most hymns were written, what comprises a good hymn, and the types of hymns to be used in our worship service. The good old-fashioned hymns will ever live, says Prof. Lantz, because of their continued use and helpfulnes. Hymns for the worship service should be picked with just as much care and thought as any other thing in the service, because for most of us that is the only contribution to the service and it is our only means of expressing our praise and worship to God in the service. The hymns should be just as beautiful, just as fine, and just as uplifting as any sermon. Mae Markley, Zieglerville, Pa.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

The Courage of Jesus

Matthew 23:16-24; 26:36-39

This is another good topic, let us drink deeply of it and let us think subjectively and make practical applications: Jesus surely was courageous. It does not require brute force and the toting of a gun to be courageous. Jesus communed much with His heavenly Father and then with a clear insight of the principles envolved. He courageously forged ahead, irrespective of what men would do to Him. He had faith in His gospel, in the gospel He was, and He knew what His Father would eventually make those same principles to bear much fruit.

To no group did Jesus ever speak more scathingly than to the Scribes and Pharisees. He called them "blind guides, which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel." How often we Mennonites have done that very thing! We have mistaken as Mennonitism the matter of clothing and have left the Sermon on the Mount go by the way. We have stressed some of our pet doctrines as though they were the full gospel and we did not practice charity. We judged others and became hateful toward those who differed from us. Jesus believed that the right would eventually triumph and to this end He was willing to labor and die.

Our Mennonite faith and doctrine is an attempt to live a simple life of faith according to the teachings in the Gospels. We believe that to be a member of the Christian church we must be an experiential individual believer. We believe "yes" means "yes," and "no" means "no." No emphasis is necessary to truth. Love for our fellowmen is more successful in winning an enemy than hate and brute force. Christians should be different from those whose whole motive in life is worldly—truly we will be in the world, but we should not be too much of it. Neither dare we be too exclusive or we cannot be salt or light.

Do we have the courage to do all these things no matter what the cost may be? We should—Jesus did. Is the Gospel of the New Testament to us an individual experience? Is our speech untainted by unnecessary emphasis and is our word thoroughly trustworthy? Do we believe that to love a fellowman is more Christian and more patriotic than to kill him, and are we willing to withstand public sentiment and go even to Leavenworth, if need be, rather than to take up arms to kill? It is not enough to be passive, we must be actively passive, we must go the way of the cross and love men and nations into the Kingdom, and make it easier for them to be Christian. Jesus did that—Zacchaeus just had to change.

Questions

1. What is courage?
2. Are courage and valor synonymous?
3. In what did Jesus' courage consist?
4. In your mind, what are some of Jesus' most courageous stands?
5. What is the need for courage today?
6. Why should we think through our answer to war in times of peace?
7. In what ways do you think Jesus bids us be courageous today?
8. How can we become more courageous?

"Fear never won a battle."

Defeating Discouragement

Psalm 42:1-11

Who has never experienced discouragement? Have you ever felt that life hardly seemed worth while, that nobody cared for you? Have you sometimes felt that others had better chances in life than you, so that you pitied yourself? That is a bad sickness. A diagnosis and the cure need to be found before the disease is of long standing.

The Psalmist knew what it means to be cast down—he, too, at times had lost all hope and wondered whether there was a God and whether He cared. But when he came to his best self he saw God as an unfailing rock.

It is so easy to feel one's self abused or inferior, but God has given to each man a task with some talents. Most of us are two talent people, or perchance only one, but our Master expects us to use that which has been given us. Let us ever remember, God expects of you your best, not somebody else's best. Chances are they in turn may covet some gift or talent you possess.

The secret to this fuller life is to be found in a sweet fellowship with the Christ and a life of service toward our fellowmen. We will then forget to pity self. The true Christian philosophy of life bids us to have faith in God, faith in our fellowmen, and faith in ourselves.

Question

1. What are some causes of discouragement?
2. What will discouragement do to us?
3. What is the danger of pitying one's self?
4. What is the difference between being dissatisfied with one's achievements and being utterly discouraged?
5. Can you find any periods in Jesus' life when He was discouraged?
6. What is the cure for a bad case of discouragement?

INTERMEDIATE WORKSHOP

What Is The Purpose Of Work?

Rom. 12:7; 13:8

Consecration Meeting

"Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

Pre-Prayer

That we may find our work in the world and do it in a way that is pleasing unto God.

Common sense, the Bible, the whole line of human experience, and the physical demands of one's body support the theory that every person should perform work.

1. One person's labor will produce the necessities and comforts of life for others, particularly for those who are dependent upon him. The father gladly toils for his children, the husband for his wife.

2. Labor produces commodities which advance the welfare of the race. The best inventions and the manufature of practical devices have come because many persons worked.

3. The goal of the Christian religion is to establish a perfect kingdom, where all will dwell together in happiness and comfort, where sin will no longer ravage humanity, and where Christ will reign.

4. Man is at his best when his mind and hand are developing. Labor increases man's skill and he becomes expert in things which had been foreign to him.

The Bible teaches that, "By grace are you saved through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:8, 9). Hence, it is very clear that we are not saved by works, or anything we do, but rather by what Christ has already done for us when He died for our sins on the cross. After we are saved, however, everything we do because the love of Christ constrains us, will, one day, receive His, "Well done, good and faithful service."

It is of highest importance, therefore, that we shall learn all we can about the motive back of our service. The motive underlying our service determines whether our service will, at the end of life's journey, receive Christ's approving smile, or whether it will belong to the kind of service which the Bible speaks of as "wood, hay, stubble" (I Cor. 3:12), and will be burned up.

Every song that floats from your lips in the spirit of love; every word of comfort to the sorrowing; every loving warning and admonition to the wayward; every prayer that goes up out of the love of your heart for a friend in need; every word of cheer and solace to the despondent one; every bit of suffering from criticism and misrepresentation borne in the spirit of love; every mite of silver and gold given for the love of the Master and His suffering ones; —every such deed of love, however insignificant it may seem to you, will meet you at the throne of reward and go with you in your shining train of influence and love all through the countless millenniums of eternity. And does there come a time when your voice of love is silent, your hand of love motionless, your human heart of love no longer throbs, and men say, "He is dead"? Then shall come a voice from heaven, saying, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord * * * and their works do follow them." Would you build not for time, but for a deathless eternity? Then build in love, upon the foundation of Christ Jesus.

Questions

1. What is wrong kind of service?
2. How can we test whether our service is of the wrong kind?
3. At what age should youth begin in doing service?
4. Can responsibilities be inflicted upon youth too young?
5. What is the right kind of work?
6. Should our work be always that which will receive honor of men?

Great Modern Christians: Sam Higginbottom

Gen. 41:46-57

"I can do all things through Christ which strengthened me."

No better example of the new character of Christian missions is found than that which relates to agriculture and the development of sources of food in many countries where that has always been a problem. The pioneer agricultural missionary in India is Sam Higginbottom.

After finishing his college work at Wooster, Ohio, he entered a medical college, and on graduating, he applied for work to the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. He was accepted, and sent to India. After learning the language, he was put in charge of a refuge for lepers. These unfortunate ones appealed greatly to his big heart, and with the compassion of Jesus, who commanded His disciples to "heal the sick" and to "cleanse the lepers," he administered to their comfort, and through his healing ministry their pain was alleviated and some cures effected.

A large part of the population of India are pathetically ignorant, and their civilization is very backward. Mr. Higginbottom gave himself without reserve to learning the true condition of the people of India. Observing that a large part of the natives are always hungry, he believed that a more abundant crop yield would follow in the wake of the introduction of modern farming methods. The natives in plowing, barely scratched the surface of the soil. Their plows, by the way, could be called plows only by the wildest stretch of imagination. One of his services for India was the introduction of modern farming implements. Believing that God uses to best advantage prepared men, Dr. Higginbottom asked the mission board for a leave of absence from his duties in India, in order to attend the University of Michigan where he planned to take a full course in agriculture. This was done, and on returning to India, he established an agricultural college and began work. First he trained the natives in the matter of preparing the soil. and then he imparted information in the matter of planting the crops and growing and harvesting them. Then he began to teach the use of modern farm machinery: the tractor, plows, harrows, threshing machines, etc.

Nor did Dr. Higginbottom's practical service for India end with the introduction of modern farm methods. Looking in the direction of improving the native stock of poultry and livestock and cattle, he imported the best breeds from America. At first the natives would not have the new way of farming and other apparent interferences with their customs, and primitive ways of doing things, but when they began to see the increase in crop yield through the employment of the new methods of farming, they readily followed the wise leadership of Dr. Higginbottom, and now he is acclaimed as India's benefactor. Some one asked him if it was safe to work among the lepers. "Yes," he replied, "it is safer to work among the lepers if it is my job, than to work anywhere else." Dr. Higginbottom will not expose himself to the perils of dodging the dangers that God has called him into. The heroism of his undertakings for the people of India is a matter of challenge to all who have the welfare of mankind at hand, and who yearn to see the people of India and other lands brought to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. At the throne of reward, as Christ's faithful ones will stand in His presence, surely Dr. Sam Higginbottom will hear the Master's "well done" for his faithful and Christly service for God's children of India.

Dr. Higginbottom's native home is Cleveland, Ohio, where a sister resided. He is a fine platform speaker, and his addresses are inspirational and creative of missionary zeal.

Topic.—Keeping God's Name Sacred

Exod. 20:7; Jas. 5:12

(Consecration Meeting)

When Moses was leading the children of Israel from Egypt to Canaan, God called him into a mountain to give him some instructions for the people. Among other things, God gave ten rules for living which we call the Ten Commandments. One of these rules is, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." When God says that one will not be held guiltless, He means that one must surely be punished. When Jesus preached the Sermon on the Mount He said, "Swear not at all."

God's name should always be spoken reverently, never spoken lightly as in swearing. Then we know that it is an awful sin in God's sight or He would not speak of it as He does.

The fact that He asks us to keep His name holy should be all the reason we need. Further than that we should keep it holy, or sacred, because He is holy (Rev. 15:4), He is love (1 Jno. 4:8), He is almighty and knows all things (Job 36:5), He is everywhere (Psa. 139:7-12). What a wonderful God He is! As we think how He is grieved when His name is used wrongly, surely we shall determine to always keep it sacred and to help others to do so. Many people who use God's name in vain have formed the habit so that they often speak it without knowing what they have said. A reminder may cause them to see how greatly they are displeasing God.

Plans for the Meeting

Spend much of the time today exalting God the Father in song and spoken word in order to help the Juniors to give Him the reverence due His name. A right acquaintance and relationship with God leave no room for the wrong use of His name.

Questions

1. Why should God's name be kept sacred?
2. What does God say of one who takes His name in vain?
3. Why is swearing such an awful sin?
4. Why will a Christian not swear?

5. How can we help others to use God's name rightly?

Topic.—Sharing With Others

Acts 20:35; Gal. 6:10

As you read the topic today, some of you are thinking, "What have I to share? I am not rich." Do you have two good hands and two feet? Do you know how to smile? If so, can't you see that you do have something to share? Of course, we should share our money with those in need, but we need not stop there. Hands and feet can be used to help others. A smile often helps someone to forget trouble or to stop being cross.

Kind words and sympathy help just as much and often mean more than money. I shall never forget a little boy who was always ready to sympathize. When any one in the home was sick or sad, he was quick to see it and to think of some way to help. Sometimes it was with a kind word, again it would be a little hand laid on an aching head, or perhaps he would help with some work without being told.

I read of one girl who shared her birthday. Her little friend was born on February 29, so only had a birthday every four years. Little Rita felt sorry for her, so when her birthday came she shared her party and gifts with Helen. Rita told her mother afterward that this was the best birthday she ever had. Somehow things do seem better when shared.

You can share your friends. Sometimes one sees boys or girls, especially girls, who want their friends all to themselves. Try sharing them and see how much happier you will be.

Perhaps you can share your home by inviting someone who does not have a happy one to visit you. Then think of how you can share your time. Instead of using it just to please yourself, find someone who would be glad to have you spend time with them, helping or cheering them. You may not need to look farther than your own home.

By all means, do not fail to share God's Word with those around you. Tell them about it and invite them to go with you to Sunday School, Junior C. E., or church service.

In Acts 20:35 we are told to share with those in need, and Gal. 6:10 reminds us that we should especially help other Christians.

A poem called "Others" speaks of praying and working for others and ends with this verse:

"Others, Lord, yes, others,
Let this my motto be,
Help me to live for others,
That I may live like Thee."

Won't you take this for your motto?

Plans for the Meeting

Have prepared a box with an opening through which slip of paper can be passed. Have the Juniors bring on these pieces of paper names of things they can share. These should be placed in the box before the meeting. After the box is opened, have the Juniors read and comment on the suggestions found in it.

Questions

1. What rule for sharing is found in 1 Cor. 16:2?
2. How does sharing become a blessing to the one who shares?
3. Explain "It is more blessed to give than to receive."
4. What kind of person is he who never shares good things?
5. How can you share Christ with others?

Work for Juniors

Do we love our gentle Savior?
We must labor while 'tis day,
Work for Jesus, work for Jesus,
Till the sunlight fade away,
Bird and bee and sparkling fountain
Each their cheerful work pursue,
Oh, how pleasant to remember
There is something we can do!

We can drop a word of kindness,
And perhaps that word may be
Like an acorn by the wayside,
Growing up a stately tree;
Wretched homes of want and sorrow
When our tearful eyes behold,
We can bring the helpless children
To our Savior's precious fold.

While we sing to those around us
Of our glorious home above,
We may lead a careless wanderer
To a Savior's pardoning love.
We can help to send the Gospel
O'er the ocean far away;
If we love our gentle Savior,
We must labor while 'tis day.

Barnabas

(A consecrated Man of Means)

Lesson Text.—Acts 4:36, 37; 11:19-30

Golden Text.—For he was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith. Acts 11:24.

One of the interesting phases of early church history is the rapid expansion of the church from a small group of Jewish Christians at Jerusalem to a large gentile church spread over the extant of the Roman empire. In this expansion certain men stand out as leaders of the expansion. One of these was Barnabas. Barnabas was a native of the island of Cyprus. He came to Jerusalem soon after the Pentecostal experience and brought the money he received from the selling of his land. It came as a result of the spirit of fellowship and sharing which was manifested in the early church.

The first important expansion of the church came when the church appointed seven helpers to care for the material needs of the church. Two of these, who also became evangelists, were Stephen and Philip. These men represented the Grecian Jews. Stephen spent much of his time in discussions in the synagogues with Dispersion Jews concerning Christ. His preaching and discussions aroused so much opposition that finally he was stoned to death.

This persecution and death of Stephen caused a dispersion of the early Christians. Some of these which were scattered abroad went to Antioch and a church of Jews and gentiles was started. The Jerusalem church, hearing of this new venture at Antioch, sent Barnabas to take charge of the work. Barnabas was a good man for the place. He was earnest, devout, serious, and energetic. On the other hand, he was well adapted for the place because he had been raised in a similar environment as the Antioch church. He, however, realized that the work was too large for one man, especially a man his age, so he sought for help. He went and got Paul who was at Tarsus. There are several characteristics of Barnabas here that need emphasis. In the first place he knew his abilities and his limitations. He was willing to assume leadership and make large sacrifices for the cause. On the other hand he knew as an older man when to select a younger man to assume the leadership instead of him. One of the tragedies in Christian leadership is that older men insist on exercising leadership and authority when they should retire and, as Barnabas, seek for Paul, a younger man. It takes Christian love and humility for a man to say, "I must decrease and he must increase."

Who was Barnabas?

What does it suggest when he sold his land and gave the money to the church?

Was Barnabas a layman or a preacher?

What contribution can be made by consecrated wealthy laymen today in our church?

What spirit is manifested in Barnabas willingness to get Paul?

Paul

Lesson Text.—Acts 20:33-35; Phil. 4:4-13

Golden Text.—I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak. Acts 20:35.

The lesson material for our discussion of Paul records the incident where on his third missionary journey he came along the coast of Asia Minor to Miletus. While here he called the Ephesian elders together for a farewell service before he leaves for Jerusalem. Paul realized that great opposition awaited him at Jerusalem. Since our lesson is a study of Paul rather than any portion of Scripture it might be well to consider briefly who Paul was and what he had done up to this point. Paul, whose Hebrew name was Saul, was raised in Tarsus of Cecilia. Here he came in contact with three influences that affected his life. First he is a Hebrew. He was raised in a godly Hebrew home. This influence can be felt throughout his life and ministry. In the second place he lived in a Greek city and these influences gave him a language which he could use throughout the whole empire. In the third place he is a free born Roman citizen. This was a great advantage to him in his Christian work and in the severe persecutions carried on against him by his enemies. Saul as a young man went to Jerusalem and received his training at the feet of Gamaliel, a great Hebrew teacher. Saul carried on a vigorous campaign of persecution against the Christians. One day while on his way to Damascus to persecute and kill Christians there, he met the resurrected Christ and Saul, the Hebrew, became Paul, the Christian. The transition was so sudden that it took Paul fourteen years to adjust himself to the new experience.

It was at the end of these fourteen years that Barnabas came to Tarsus and brought Paul to Antioch. After a few years here, Paul conducted three missionary campaigns throughout Asia Minor and eastern Europe. Paul at last was taken a prisoner to Rome, where he was finally beheaded.

Paul was a great missionary, an indefatigable worker, a writer, and teacher. He consecrated every ability and power he had to Christ. Throughout his life and ministry he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. Paul is largely responsible for breaking the Jewish limitations which gave Christianity its freedom to develop from a Jewish Christian church to a gentile Christianity.

How did Paul's training equip him for a Christian missionary?

What contribution did Paul make to the development of Christianity?

How do you account for the success of Paul as a missionary?

EASTERN DISTRICT RETREAT

The Life of Menno Simon

Taught by Dr. C. Henry Smith

In the opening period Dr. Smith spoke of the traditional background and sacraments observed in the Catholic churches and how their people took these seriously as though magic were connected with them. Also, the commercialization of places connected with the Catholic and Christian churches. Catholics are the most conservative sect, Lutherans next, followed by Reformeds and Anabaptists or Mennonites.

The Anabaptist movement started at Zuerich with Zwingli and the first question was infant baptism. Zwingli debated this and looked for mention of it in the New Testament, but could not find it, finally rejected same and started adult baptism.

Menno Simon was born in 1496 in a Dutch village named Witmarsum. He lived the life of an ordinary priest. He was different from the average priest, for he had an open mind and a tender conscience. He was gradually converted from the Catholic faith. He left the Catholic faith in 1536. Menno Simon accepted the principles of the Anabaptists with the broadening of same. He was the most luminous writer of the Anabaptists. His principles were: Adult Baptism, Opposition to Capital Punishment, Denial of the Oath, Opposed to War, Separation of State and Church, Opposed to Holding Public Office. Love was the outstanding factor and he took the Sermon on the Mount as the basis of his faith.

Mennonites are very thrifty, successful in business, head of large concerns, frugal, live a simple life, but are not so successful in the field of arts, poetry, and music. There are 25 divisions in the Mennonite church and we are often called queer, due probably to some of the principles for which we stand and our industriousness.

In the past our young people have been persecuted for refusing to take arms or complete non-participation and if, in the future, we are called to stand firm on our principles, we will again be persecuted, probably more severely than heretofore; and the chances for migration to other countries are very small, due to the democracy of most nations.

At our closing period on Sunday afternoon, Prof. Russel A. Lantz told us some of his experiences in the World War, as a Conscientious Objector, and his imprisonment at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. This was a challenge to stand firm on our convictions and the price we will undoubtedly pay.

Dr. Smith has visited the places of the beginnings of our faith and church. This helped to make it real to us, for his interesting fashion of description could not help but thrill us. After these lectures you could not help but think of the rich traditional background of our church and what we owe our God and fellowmen through the sacrifices of our forefathers.

—Mae Latshaw.

JOTTINGS

An example of loyalty to institutions established by the Mennonite church is set by the First Church of Philadelphia. From the time of the Wadsworth School, the first institution of higher learning founded by the Mennonites of America, this congregation has always called to its ministry men who received their training in Mennonite schools.

It is interesting to note that descendants of some of the early Mennonite families have become famous in public life.

The present mistress of the White House, Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, and her distinguished relative, the late President Theodore Roosevelt, include in their ancestry the name of Jan Lukens, one of the pioneer settlers of Germantown.

Samuel W. Pennypacker, famous as a lawyer, judge, historian, and governor of Pennsylvania, was a descendant of Matthias Pennypacker, one of the early Germantown ministers, of whom it is recorded that he had the longest will and the biggest funeral in Colonial Pennsylvania.

Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh, educator, writer, governor of Pennsylvania, and the biographer of Christoper Dock, traced his ancestry on his mother's side through a Mennonite family line.

David Rittenhouse, grandson of William Rittenhouse, the first Mennonite minister in America and also America's first paper maker, was famous as a scientist, a member of the Committee of Safety during he period of the Revolutionary War, founder, with his riend Benjamin Franklin, of the American Philosophical Society, the world's most famous organization of he kind, surveyor, mathematician, and first Mint Master under the United States. As an astronomer he was famous for his observation of the transit of Venus from the platform from which the Declaration f Independence was afterward read to a public assembly.

Dr. J. E. Hartzler, former president of Witmarsum eminary, after having served a year as professor of heology and philosophy in the American University t Beirut, Syria, has returned to his home in Bluffton, Ohio. Mrs. Hartzler spent the year with her husand in Syria. Dr. Hartzler has not yet announced lans for the future.

Dr. J. E. Langenwalter of Wichita, Kansas, was a ecent visitor to Bluffton, Ohio, which was his home uring his service on the faculty of Bluffton College. e preached in the Bluffton Mennonite church.

Dr. Ernest Franz of Berne, Ind., while vacationing California, in cooperation with Dr. H. J. Krehbiel of eedley, Calif., spent the time in building a replica of he first Mennonite church erected at Germantown in 708. On the site of the original building the stone meeting house erected to succeed continues to be used as a house of worship. It was erected in 1770 and around it was fought the Battle of Germantown during the American Revolution. On the spot General Agnew, one of the British officers, was shot from his horse by a sniper immediately after the battle. The Germantown Historical Society has erected a marker on the church yard wall, marking the spot where the General fell. In the church yard there is also a marker erected in honor of William Rittenhouse, the first Mennonite minister contributed by the State of Pennsylvania.

Former students and instructors in Witmarsum Seminary, Bluffton, Ohio, held a gathering at the home of Rev. Paul E. Whitmer of Pandora, Ohio, in honor of Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Kreider, who will leave Bluffton to enter the faculty of Bethel College, Newton, Kansas, this fall.

While Rev. Carl Landes, of the First Church, Philadelphia, is on an extended vacation, including attendance at the General Conference, Dr. Irvin Bauman of the Bluffton College faculty, will preach in his place.

Rev. and Mrs. Albert Claassen, of Milwaukee, Oregon, wish their friends to note that after the meeting of General Conference their address will be Freeman, South Dakota, Rev. Claassen having accepted a call to the pastorate in that place.

Among the visitors to the great C. E. Convention in Philadelphia from the Saucon, Pa., church were: Rev. E. S. Shelly, Laura Nolf, Sara Kait, Kathryn Hohe, Mrs. E. S. Shelly, and Andrew R. Shelly. A special Echo Meeting was held in the Saucon church. A special feature of the meeting was the re-enactment of the colorful exercise presented by approximately 600 juniors in the Convention Hall.

The Mennonite church of Berne, Indiana, expects to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the first Mennonite church in Adams County, in 1938. As this will be the year in which the next General Conference is to be held, the Berne church has extended an invitation to the Conference to hold the 1938 session in the Berne church.

Speakers participating in the Mennonite Young People's Retreat held at Shipshewana Lake, August 5-11, were booked as follows: Rev. I. R. Detweiler, Bluffton College; Rev. W. B. Weaver, Danvers, Ill.; Prof. W. Miller, Columbus, O.; Rev. J. N. Smucker, Smithville, O., chairman of the Retreat; Earl Salzman, Topeka, Ill.

The time will come when all luxury and pomp and show will come to an end, and only the real elements of character will abide.

DEATHS

Elias Gratz, son of Christian and Catherine (Steiner) Gratz, was born in Allen County, Ohio, March 3, 1861. He departed from this life June 28, 1935, reaching the age of 74 years, 3 months, and 25 days. On April 15, 1881, upon his confession of faith, he was baptized and received as a member of the St. John Mennonite church, of which he remained a faithful member until the time of his death. In 1889 he was united in marriage with Catherine Scheaublin. This happy union was blessed with ten children, three having preceded their parents in death. On January 13, 1931, Mrs. Gratz preceded her husband in death.

Funeral services which were held in the St. John church on Sunday afternoon, were in charge of Rev. Toevs, Mr. Gratz's pastor. The funeral was largely attended. Interment took place at the St. John cemetery, Pandora, Ohio.

(Preliminary Report; Official Minutes to appear in pamphlet later.—Secretary.)

1. Daily Meetings: 8-8:30 Prayer; 9-11:30; 2-4:30, and evening 7:30-9:00.

2. Since the minutes of the last session are in print and available to all delegates present, who are not familiar with them, Resolved to dispense with the further reading of them, and that they be adopted in their entirety as printed.

3. Report of Executive Committee accepted for discussion.

4. Resolved: That the Conference by rising show its appreciation of the long and efficient service rendered by Bro. J. W. Kliewer as member of the Board of Foreign Missions.

5. Resolved: That the Plan for Systematic Giving be received for discussion and, if found acceptable, that it be submitted to the churches for a referendum vote before final adoption.

6. Resolved: That the Minutes and Reports of this session be printed and distributed free (two for each vote), and that the churches be requested to send in to the Conference Treasurer a free-will offering to cover expenses.

7. The Women's Mission Societies of the Conference are a very active and greatly appreciated force in carrying on the conference work. They have been holding their business meeting on an afternoon while the Conference was in regular session, but find this unsatisfactory as they must thus miss part of the session. Resolved: That at the next session of Conference, if suitable arrangement can be made, the Business Committee provide a place for the Women's Mission Society business meeting on the regular conference program, allowing about 2½ hours for same.

8. Action on Rec. 5 was postponed by resolution till the Trustees and Sanatorium Committee would report. (See Res. 77.)

9. Resolved: That the report of the Executive Committee be adopted.

10. Resolved: That our ministers, editors, and teachers give themselves diligently to the question of our over-division and attempt to see the problem through the eyes of our common Lord and Master and build up in the minds of our people the right attitude towards the members of other branches of the denomination.

11. Resolved: That we put ourselves on record as favoring organic union with the Central Conference of Mennonites.

12. Resolved: That the Comity Committee be discontinued and that a new committee of five be elected whose name shall be the Church Unity Committee.

13. Resolved: That this Conference make provision whereby a Conference of churches may be received into our fellowship, rather than limiting it to individual churches.

14. Resolved: To adopt the report of the Comity Committee.

15. Time extended fifteen minutes.

16. Resolved: To adopt the report of and recommendation of the Placement Committee.

17. Resolved: To adopt the report and recommendation of the Committee on Revision of the Ministers' Manual and to refer the same to the Board of Publication. Before this was adopted, an amendment as follows carried: Resolved, to add at the close of No. 4 (probably should be No. 3?—Sec'y) page two, the words "according to the Scriptures."

18. Resolved: That the Conference send a word of sympathy to Rev. A. J. Dyck of Inman, Kans., who is now in the hospital.

19. Resolved: That we adopt the report of the Committee on Privileges, and that privileges be granted in accordance with the Constitution.

20. Books recommended by the Board of Foreign Missions: 1. The Preacher and His Missionary Message; 2. Christ and Human Suffering; 3. Uncle John Vassar; 4. Samuel Hebich of India; 5. Marie Christopher's Sieg, translated; 6. The New Christian; 7. Heroes of the Cross; 8. Forty Mission Stories.

21. Resolved: That the native churches on our mission fields be accepted as members of the General Conference in accord with the Constitution. (Recommendation "B" had been acted on, so was passed now.)

22. Resolved: That the special collections for a second bungalow at Basna, India, be continued, but that we do not build before the money is practically in sight.

23. Resolved: That the former resolution, that once a year in every church a special collection be held for our Pension Fund over and above the regular mission collections, be not forgotten.

24. Resolved: That Rec. "F" (concerning a full time secretary) be referred back to the Board of Foreign Missions with the request that they in conjunction with other Boards of the General Conference work out a plan to employ a secretary on full time representing the different boards, and to report to this session not later than Wednesday . (See Res. 47.)

25. Resolved: To adopt the Revised Rules and Regulations attached to the report of the Board of Foreign Missions.

THE MENNONITE POSITION ON NON-RESISTANCE

(By Rev. Jacob B. Wiens, Waterloo)

Translated from the German by J. H. Janzen, Waterloo

In these times many things are being uprooted; we stand at the threshold of a new era. Powers have been unchained and at work since 1914, which were unknown until then. They shake the cosmic system, human hearts are filled with fear, and we look into the future with anxiety. At present, when the change of attitude toward old-established conceptions is in full sway, even approved things dwindle to nothing in the existing melting pot and new moulds arise, giving to the world and to humanity a new character. Even gold has lost its importance as a standard of values.

This change of attitude is not confined to political and economical matters only; it affects even our spiritual and religious life. We notice a changed attitude in belief and philosophy of life, which is of far reaching significance. At present the Word of God is attacked by furious criticism. This is natural because it intends not a change of systems, but a change of mind. That criticism is inclined to shake the very foundations of our faith. World history and the history of mankind teaches us that people sink and finally drown if they forsake the eternal foundation of God's Word. We therefore join all the more with determination in the words of the poet:

If Thy Word should be discarded,
Then our faith would also fail.
Riches can be disregarded,
May, O God, Thy Word prevail.

Christ foresaw much greater revolutions and catastrophies than those of our age. He said, that heaven and earth shall pass away, and the apostle Peter says that they will pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall be dissolved by intense heat, and the earth and the works that are therein shall be burned up. But one thing shall never pass away, and that is the Word of God.

As our faith, likewise the Mennonite principle of non-resistance is founded on the Word of God. In this soil our confession is rooted and gives us strength to live and to die. From this soil our confession has brought forth fruit which should not be underestimated. We can say this with a clear conscience, without boasting unduly, because we regard this not as our own merit, but as the Grace of God.

At present our people stand again in the midst of the raging sea of nations, and timid souls already see our little boat rocking and in danger of being drowned, especially since some of our own brethren are engaged in drilling holes in the bottom of the frail vessel. Let us, therefore, seriously examine our position and answer the questions: Does our dogma of non-resistance still fit into the present day picture of the world? Have we still spiritual life and therefore a right to exist? Has our principle of non-resistance still that embryo of life from which it can develop and grow into perfection?

The world looks upon us and sifts us. And we have to be ready always to give an answer to every man that asks us a reason concerning the hope that is in us (1 Peter 3:15).

Our principle of faith is based on a threefold foundation:

1) The Word of God; 2) History; 3) Our own experience.

I.

We take the commandment of God, "Thou shalt not kill," literally, without any turning and twisting, without oppressing our conscience. We see by the Scriptures that Christ took the stand of non-resistance in life and conduct, in suffering and death. The whole Scripture breathes the Spirit of Love, as this is expressed in a lofty, artistic form in 1 Corinthians, chapter 13. The apostles themselves, who first would call fire from heaven upon their adversaries, and who carried their sword very loosely in their scabbards, were changed by the Spirit of God and would rather suffer than inflict sufferings upon others. To us it is unthinkable that a son of peace would be able not only to inflict wounds without hesitation, but even to kill his fellow men. Becoming resistant, a disciple of Jesus necessarily must come into very serious conflicts with his conscience.

II.

Church History teaches us that the church did leave its first love, and that consequently the revelations of God diminished, the eyes of the Christians were dulled, and thereby their conceptions confused and their deeds uncertain. Crafty explanations were employed to fill the gap, and thereby faith lost its purity. Colored faith replaced sincerity. But at all times the Word of God aroused the conscience of men and women and led them from darkness to and women and led them from darkness to light.

One of the mightiest spiritual movements, a real awakening from night to bright daylight occurred in the Middle Ages when Luther freed the Word of God from bondage. At the same time the principles that lived formerly in the Waldensians, and which we would be inclined to call "Mennonite," were awakened anew. With the activities of Menno came the time in which our Confession of Faith began to show its influence in World History, and to preach peace by word and conduct. Bloody persecutions followed, but they only ordained and sanctified our forefathers for their mission. God acknowledged their testimony and gave them, in spite of misery and death, progress and prosperity. Today Mennonites are found in every land on earth. This is of important significance.

III.

One can become a Christian only by having a personal experience of God. Likewise one can only by personal experience become a conscious member of the Mennonite church. To be filled with the love of Christ is a personal experience.

We refuse to bear arms because we are deeply convinced of the fact that revenge, hatred, enmity and war are contradictory to the will of God. War is sin. And we do not want to participate in other people's sins.

The experience which our people obtained during the World War has made them the more certain and steadfast. But the principle of non-resistance becomes valid only after it has been tested. In that respect, perhaps the so-called Russian Mennonites have an advantage over others, as they have been through the horrors of war, not only the World War that was fought over general issues, but also the Civil War in which the most intimate personal interests were attacked. At that time everything was tested by fire.

We might as well anticipate that all privileges will fall down with the outburst of the next war. Then everybody will have to be faithful to his own convictions, and to take the consequences. Therefore it is most important that our young people should be enlightened and brought up in a way that they should be open to the experience of peace, and solid at the hour of great decisions.

Taking in consideration the seriousness of the situation, our conference should immediately go to work, present the seriousness to the churches, and find means and ways to strengthen the faithfulness of all of us to the principle of non-resistance, thereby averting the great sorrow of apostasy from our churches and our people.

These are only a few thoughts of all that may be said about our position on non-resistance. I have compiled and recorded these thoughts merely to stimulate the further thinking and acting on the matter.

"And let the favour of the Lord, our God, be upon us; and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it."

RADIO MESSAGE

Given by D. D. Eitzen, August 11, 1935, in connection with the Silver Anniversary of the Immanuel Mennonite Church, 656 E. 79th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

(Published by request)

Mark 1:1 reads, "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God." The beginning of the GOSPEL—what an announcement to the world of the first century — and what an announcement to the world today!

This gospel of Jesus Christ—which is not good advice, but good news—this good news of salvation to all men—has a three-fold emphasis: The past aspect of the gospel as described in "God so loved." The present tense of the gospel as contained in 1 John 3:2, "Now are we the sons of God," and the future tense as suggested in the completion of that statement, "and it doth not yet appear what we shall be." How symmetrical and complete is this gospel of Jesus Christ!

Unfortunately we often present it as unsymmetrical and lopsided by overemphasizing one aspect at the expense of the other. It is so easy to sin by an underemphasis of the present tense of the Gospel. John says, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." NOW—we are SONS—Sons of God." Is it possible that the future aspect of that verse—namely, "it doth not yet appear what we shall be"—that "lively hope"—is dependent upon our living as sons of God now?

Paul in his letter to the Romans (8:17) suggests this more strongly, "IF children, THEN heirs." This heirship then depends upon our being children—consciously so. The prodigal son was a son even while herding swine, but he continued on his downward path of sin until he "came to"—came to himself in a new realization that he was a "son," but lived the life of a tramp. How nearly does that perhaps describe my life and your life? Are we consciously walking about as sons of God throughout the entire day—at the breakfast table with the family, in our dealings in business, in our conversation with our personally intimate friends, at the annual church meetings, etc.? I am pleading for the personally victorious life—the life that lives above "evil thoughts, adulteries, fornication, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness," (Mark. 7:21-22)—the life that faces sin as the eagle faces a thunderstorm. He does not fly from it, nor stubbornly fight it, nor resign to it, but confidently faces it and adjusts his wings so that the very fury of the storm raises him above it—ABOVE IT. What would happen if all professed Christians lived such an "above life"—such a victorious life for one month? It is hard to estimate that, but during that month Christians would really be the salt of the earth, for salt makes thirsty, and such victorious living would make the sinner thirsty for the water of life which only Jesus can give. Neighbors would say about us, "That person has something I don't have. I want it." Yes, we want it, but how is this "living-above life" attained? In answering we raise the question, is it attained, or is it obtained? The answer was revealed to Zecharia (4:6) thus, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts." Isaiah substantiates this with the statement, "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength," or "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength to mount up with wings as eagles." JESUS invited those who LABOUR for such victory—those "mühselig"—to come unto Him in reckless abandon and He will give them rest.

In Exodus 33 we have this very problem and its solution dramatized. Moses in desperation prays (Ex. 33:13-14), "If I have found grace in thy sight, show me now thy way." How often have we prayed in the Spirit of Moses, "God, you called me to this work. I have responded, I have sacrificed, now show me a quick solution for this problem." But to us comes the answer of God as it did to Moses, "My PRESENCE shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest." Is there any equivalent for such an assurance? Truly, that is "the peace of God that passeth understanding." It is then that we can sing, "The valley holds no dread for you, when you know Jesus, too."

REV. DAVID GOERTZ

By One Who Knew Him Well

(Conclusion)

On December 26, 1910, Mrs. Warkentin presented the Deaconess Home to the Society in memory of her husband, and in 1916 she and her children added another wing to this home. Recently the home of the late Mrs. Warkentin, with many of the expensive pictures and furnishings, became the property of the Deaconess Home and Hospital Society—a gift of her children for the use of the deaconesses. All of these enterprises are a memorial to Mr. Goerz's zeal, faith, and love—a zeal so untiring that he knew no rest; faith in a God whose promises are sure, and an ardent love for his denomination.

Mr. Goerz As A Man And As A Preacher

All of Mr. Goerz' sermons, which were primarily expository, were the product of deep, prayerful thinking. He had the gift of bringing various shades of meaning out of his texts, and when he concluded his address, attentive listeners had replenished their store of biblical knowledge. He was seldom known to use humor in the pulpit—on the contrary, he was deeply emotional. Of the revivalist methods he had nothing. Indeed, some think that he was not deeply impressed with the common run of revivalists' methods. He strongly believed in laying a good foundation in the hearts and lives of young converts and this accounts for the emphasis he laid upon the catechism still used in many of our western churches. Opinions differ as to his abilities as a pastor. It is just possible that this was not his strong point, and yet he has brought into many a home new hope to such who were in deep sorrow. Leaving the bedside of Grandmother Lehman, who was ill and suffering intense pain, he went home and wrote that wonderful hymn in the Gesangbuch mit Noten: "Wenn in des Lebens dunklen Stunden die bange Seele zagen will," etc.

Mr. Goerz was slow in making friends. He knew nothing of the prevalent "slap 'em on the back" method. His face seemed to be austere and hence some people were somewhat reticent to approach him. He bemoaned the fact that he was not as magnetic as some others are, and that it was difficult for him to enter into a conversation with strangers. But those who knew him best can testify to the fact that hidden behind that austere face was a man with a heart as soft as that of a woman. People frequently misjudged him and when all manner of accusations were hurled at him, people thought that he snapped his finger at them. This was far from the truth. That Mr. Goertz had a sensitive nature is evident from what he wrote in his article, "To Russia via India," in the Monats-Blaetter: "Verkannt zu werden ist ja das unausbleibliche Los aller, die oeffentliche Dienste zu tun berufen sind, und doch will's einem oft so schwer werden, in seinen lautersten Absichten verkannt zu werden und in seinen aufrichtigsten Bestrebungen miszverstanden zu werden."

Never will I forget the day when he invited me to his home. His family was out. Behind closed doors this great man who had done so much for our denomination, and for the suffering ones, poured out his heart as the tears trickled down his wan face. His voice frequently choked. It seemed that the load of calumny and accusation was greater than he could bear, and he had to open his heart to someone. Why he singled me out I do not know, but I do know that he could have no other who was more willing to share his sufferings. He talked for about two hours with little interruption on my part, except that I here and there assured him that I sympathized with him. That he was comforted by what I said I can only hope. Then came the close of the interview when he committed himself and all that was dear to him to the God who knows and fully understands. Here I learned to know Rev. David Goerz. That he was a humble man can be abundantly proven. At the last General Conference, which he attended, he repeatedly called a brother to order, believing him to speak beside the point. He later saw his mistake and before the whole conference begged the pardon of the brother whom he had falsely accused.

His Last Days

Though Mr. Goerz was blessed with a strong physical body, yet his active life left its mark upon it, and gradually he showed signs of advancing age. In 1910 he and Mrs. Goerz went to Palestine because of ill health, which they hoped he might regain. It was not to be so. Upon their return, acting upon doctor's orders, they went to Colorado Springs. He left his beloved Bethel in July 1910 and hoped to return soon, but God thought otherwise. He never saw Bethel College again. They moved to California in August 1910, where they remained until God called His servant home and to his reward.

On the morning of May 7, 1911, he said to his wife: "I feel that my end is nearing." His daughter Katie (Mrs. B. Krehbiel) and his son Rudolph, who had been called, were at his bedside. During the forenoon of that day, May 7, he requested his loved ones to sing for him Number 571 of Gesangbuch mit Noten, "Fuerst des Lebens, unsre Herzen schlagen liebend nur fuer dich allein," etc. Mr. Goerz joined in with his rich, now almost inaudible tenor until the voices of the children choked and they could sing no longer. After a little while, he asked for a few more songs. He was once more made comfortable in his bed. Suddenly he sat up, called Rudolph to his side, and said: "You will do for our Bethel what you can, won't you"? Upon receiving assurance from Rudolph that he would gladly do what he could, Mr. Goerz smiled, and then quietly, without a struggle, breathed his last. He was at home, this busy man was with his Lord Who, in all probability has other work for him. Present at his deathbed, besides his wife, Rudolph and Katie, were Orlando and Willard. The other children, Robert, Helen, and Emma, were not able to be present.

Rev. David Goerz died at noon, May 7, 1911, aged 64 years, 11 months, and 5 days. He is buried in Hollywood cemetery. The speakers were Rev. M. M. Horsch who had as his text Psalm 4:9 and 31:6, and Rev. J. S. Hirschler, who based his remarks on Rev. 14:13.

Rev. David Goerz, my friend, the friend and benefactor of our Mennonites, is dead—"yet speaketh."

MIDDLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE RETREAT

The Forty-seventh Annual Session of the Middle District Conference was held on Friday afternoon, August 9. It was a brief business session, held at the time of the General Conference in the First Mennonite Church of Upland, California.

The President of the Conference, Rev. A. E. Kreider, opened the session with a brief devotional service. The receiving of delegates' certificates and the reading of minutes was followed by reports from the Educational and Evangelization committees. The Conference requested the Evangelization committee to organize the Lima Gospel Chapel into a church. The report of the Board of Trustees was heard and accepted.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, A. R. Keiser; vice president, Adolph Friesen; secretary, J. S. Schultz; member of program committee, Wilmer S. Shelly; member of educational committee, Clarence Schneck; member of evangelization committee, D. E. Welty; trustee of Bluffton College, D. J. Basinger, and upon motion of Conference the outgoing member of the Board of Trustees of the Conference was reelected.

The Conference accepted the invitation of the Fortuna Mennonite Church to hold the next session of Conference at that place.

Following some discussion, the Conference decided to have a three day Ministers' Retreat the first week of November in Chicago. A brief prayer service brought the Conference to adjournment.

A. R. Keiser, Acting Secretary.

NAPIER, PA., S. S. CONVENTION

A Sunday School Convention was held June 29, at the Napier Mennonite church, by the four churches of the western part of the state. There were 130 registered; of that number we were pleased to have with us five from the East. A day of fellowship was greatly enjoyed by all those present. The chairman was Rev. Jacob J. Unruh, pastor of the Napier church. The theme of the convention was, "My Duty," which was discussed in the afternoon under three sub-topics. First, "My Duty as a Christian in the Church," which was discussed with us by John Fretz. There were some very good points brought out during the discussion. He asked the definition of a Christian, and these were some of the answers: Those believing in Christ, another professed followers of God. He said that we must know Christ before we can serve Him, and after we know Him, then our duty comes. Our duty not only lies in going to church. Here are some other duties mentioned: Personal presence at every service, true worship, trying to bring others with you to church, taking part every time you are asked to do so. The next topic which was discussed was, "My Duty as a Christian in the Home," which was in charge of Samuel Snyder. The first question he asked was, "Do we act as Christians in the home after we leave the church"? How do we judge a Christian? A Christian should be Christ like, or look at His work. In the home we should show three things: peace, joy, and longsuffering. The most important are: Faith, hope, and love.

The next topic was, "My Duty as a Christian in the Community," which was discussed with us by Grover Dull. There is no limit to the things a Christian can do in his community in which he lives: visit the sick, by this you will comfort them and keep them strong in their faith; go to church; show kindness; live an honest life; and uphold your Christ. This most people do not do. After the discussion we had a business session, which was in charge of Walter Temple.

Next year's meeting will be held in Roaring Spring Mennonite church, and the chairman will be Samuel Snyder.

EXPERIENCES DURING THE HOT SEASON IN INDIA

(By Helen E. Nickel)

Janjgir, C. P., India,
June 29, 1935.

Dear Friends:

This last quarter has seemed fully three months long and so I was even reminded that a report to the Mission Board is due. During this time we think much of the preparations that are in progress for General Conference, and pray that it may be a wonderfully blessed time for all who can attend. The publicity given the Conference through the Mennonite has been inspirational and encouraging because of the emphasis on the missionary task and obligations. Encouraging to us who are on the field because we know first handed how GREAT the task is and how absolutely inefficient we are in carrying it out, except as God gives the zeal and the strength and blesses every effort. So what could help us more than to know that a praying constituency at home is willing to give and help in every way possible!

This hot season it was my privilege (?) to stay on the plains, and if I had forgotten how hot it gets, this year surely renewed the impression well enough to last for some time. School closed on April 20, so after that the Janjgir and Korba orphan girls and I moved to Champa. They to live with the girls there in the Untainted Girls Boarding, and I to enjoy the spacious Penner bungalow during the weeks that they (Dr. P. A. Penners) would spend in Ootacamund. The change helped all of us and the conveniences of a sure and adequate water supply, hospital facilities right at hand in case anyone became ill suddenly, did away with much of the concern which I would have had if I had remained alone at Janjgir station. Then the fellowship with Miss Lehman (till she went on furlough) and the doctor's family helped much to pass the hot season. Even though school work was just aside for eight weeks, yet we had classes daily, sewing on the verandas from 7:30 to 10:00 A. M., until the heat became very trying. This season was also a good opportunity to have special talks with the older girls which we tried to make instructive as well as interesting. With daily devotional periods with the Bible women, S. S. class, and prayer meeting occasionally the "tolerable" part of the days was quite occupied. In the hot season the day starts at 5 A. M. or before and it is impossible to sleep before 9:30 or 10:00 P. M., so we take a larger rest at noon, trying to sleep under the punkah. For three weeks the temperature rose to 115 degrees or above without one exception. After that it became cloudy and even though the temperature dropped somewhat, it was so sultry and oppressive that we longed for relief.

On June 14, we returned to Jangjir and opened school on the 19th. A few more girls than last year are enrolled, and we have five teachers on the staff. Miss Banwar, who served us so well as headmistress before. but did not return last school year, is back now and Miss Nand is leaving to take training on a scholarship which she receives from Government. The school which she will attend, however, is a Methodist mission school of good standing. The girls seem to be happy and are starting the work eagerly. To date we have had only a few heavy showers, very unlike last year when it rained five inches during the hour we had our opening exercises. This year it was still very hot and sultry and we long for more rain. The first few days of school we had cause for grave concern when there was no water in the two compound wells, and the girls (80 in all) were forced to get all their supply from a well quite far distant. This happened partly because just before opening school it was necessary to clean the well and then the rain did not come as soon as we had expected. Since the heavy downpour on Sunday there has been just enough to keep going. The condition was such that I would have had to close school and send as many girls as possible back to their homes. We feel the Lord answered our prayers and assured us anew of His interest and ability to meet our needs.

Mr. Unruh has returned from Landour and the Bible School will open next week. Penners are not yet back from Kodaikaval and you have perhaps heard that there is some concern about Brother P. W.'s condition. A carbuncle on his hand has caused considerable trouble and may delay their return somewhat. My health has been good since I recovered from my operation, though at times I feel that I am due for a change and rest, and whenever my furlough comes due I shall welcome the opportunity of going home. Greetings to each member of the Board. 1 Peter 3:8-12.

MY DUTY AS A CHRISTIAN IN MY COMMUNITY

George Dull

My duty as a Christian requires of me that I ask myself whether I am a right kind of a Christian in my community. When I answer this question I find that there is no limit to the duties required of the Christian in any community. Among these duties is visiting the sick. If they are Christians they should be comforted through sickness and in the face of death. If they are unsaved they should be brought to know Jesus Christ as their Savior. It surely is a Christian's duty to attend church regularly and invite others to come along whereever we meet them. In our lives in the community we should be examples of kindness and happiness of the kind that lets the light shine to the glory of God and a witness of the living Christ. It is the duty of a Christian to uphold Christ wherever he goes. Recently I was in a store and heard men talk about Christ. They even said they did not think there could be a heaven or a hell. The Spirit seemed to say to me: "Here is your chance to speak for your Christ," but I stood there silent, afraid of man. Did I do my duty in the community and for my Christ? I failed. I believe God holds us responsible for such failures.

We should lead an honest life in our community. Should a man come to me and hand me a dollar and ask me to buy him some liquor, it would be my duty to tell that I do not use the stuff and would not help other to use it. If I did not tell him then about the Christ Who would have us lead clean lives, I would not be doing my duty to him or the community. When I see a certain Christian in my community and see him all smiles and happy and hear him pray and know that there is a family altar in his home, I find him a worthy example, one whom I should imitate. Knowing such a one gives me more strength to press onward.

CORRESPONDENCE

Topeka Mennonite Church, Topeka, Indiana. Union Sunday evening services are being held in the different churches during July and August.

Mrs. Roy Jones entertained the ladies of the Good Fellowship class Friday evening, July 19.

At two o'clock Sunday afternoon, July 21, in an impressive ceremony in the church, Miss Arlene Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. U. M. Miller, of Elkhart, became the bride of Woodrow Risser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Risser, of Millersburg. Rev. Earl Salzman performed the single ring ceremony. They were attended by Miss Violet Oesch and Mr. Stanley Kent. Our best wishes go to this young couple.

Mrs. George Hendricks was hostes to the Berean class, Thursday, July 25.

The Crusaders class enjoyed a wiener roast and social at Shipshewana Lake, Friday evening, July 26.

Rev. R. L. Hartzler and children of Carlock, Illinois, have been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hartzler, and other relatives and friends. Rev. Hartzler delivered the morning message, Sunday, July 28.

Mrs. Vern Kauffman, who has been ill for some time, was taken to the Elkhart General Hospital for an operation.

Mrs. Earl Salzman and Mrs. Earl Neufer very cleverly entertained the ladies of the Good Fellowship classes, Wednesday evening, July 31, in the basement of the church. The party was a shower in honor of two recent brides, Mrs. Woodrow Risser and Mrs. Glen Steele. Games were played and pie a la mode and coffee were served. The brides received many lovely and useful gifts for their new homes.

The Ladies Aid met Thursday, August 1, at the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Elva Yoder are the parents of a son, born August 3rd.

Sunday morning, August 11, the primary department conducted the opening exercise for the Sunday School. Rev. Galen Bowman of Middlebury delivered the morning message in the absence of Rev. Salzman, who was chairman of the Young People's Retreat, which was held at Shipshewana Lake, August 5-11.

Salem Mennonite Church, Marion, South Dakota, August 21, 1935. Dear Readers of the Mennonite and Christian Evangel:— A report from our midst is overdue, so I want to attempt to contribute it.

So far the year 1935 has not seen or brought about any radical or extraordinary changes in our church life. We started the year with the usual cold weather, snow and heavy frosts. A time when we are taxed to the limit to find ways and means to keep warm. But during the last sixty days the problem was how to keep cool.

Our meetings are well attended on the average, and particularly so on the part of the younger people. When we hear the complaints of other churches, especially in cities, about the lack of interest on the part of their young people, I feel that we are fortunate in the way ours are taking hold.

Our Freeman Junior College closed its school year with a record attendance. Considering the financial plight our people find themselves involved in as a result of crop failures, this showing is quite remarkable. President John D. Unruh was given a leave of absence from his duties for one year, and a committee, headed by Prof. Benj. P. Waltner, will head the school for the coming year. Mr. Waltner has been with the college for a long period of years and is well fitted to assume this work.

Continuing a custom of several years' standing, our church and the Salem-Zion church held a joint picnic on July 4, at the Rev. J. A. Schrag grove, four miles south of Marion, and invited President Geo. W. Nash, of Yankton College, to deliver the main address. President Nash is well acquainted in our midst and his speech was listened to with great interest. This manner of observing the nation's birthday is most commendable in contrast with the usual so-called celebrations in this day of legalized liquor and modern sports.

Our farmers are just finishing garnering in their first crop since 1932. Our small grain yield was fair to good this season, with quality only fair on the average. The months of May and June blessed us with fine, cool growing weather and sufficient rainfall, so that prospects for a bumper crop were better than in years. But about the first of July showers ceased and the hot sun began to play havoc with vegetation. Corn prospects are poor, but our small grain and hay will enable us to save what livestock we have. So we are better off than a year ago, but with the low prices of small grain are bound to be poor for another year.

For the first time in the history of this community a Retreat was held on the campus of Freeman Junior College, which just closed. At this retreat our former pastor, W. S. Gottschall, and other visitors from the conference took part. It was well attended and aroused much interest.

It was a treat for our church to have Rev. W. S. Gottschall pay us a visit on his way home from the conference.

We were also treated a number of times during the school vacation period this summer by listening to sermons and addresses from our students, Ralph Kauffman and Erland Waltner. Both of these young men are very promising and we appreciate them.

The political world today does not present a very healthy or promising picture. The Italian-Ethiopian situation in Europe indicates war. Our own nation is spending over a billion dollars this fiscal year for war preparations. Our President has prevented the payment of the soldier bonus on the grounds that we could not afford it. But during the same period of time he has advocated and approved the spending of more than a billion for future wars. We cannot afford to pay for the last war, but we can afford to prepare for more war. What are we to think of that? John J. Gering.

Hillsboro Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kans. Dear Readers: Greetings! We have been fortunate in having several different groups of students from Bethel College with us in our C. E. meetings in spring.

They gave different types of programs, but all showed plainly that they were serving Jesus and were happy in the service. May God bless them all!

Rev. Albrecht of the Hillsboro Bible Academy gave a series of talks on "Early Experiences of the Mennonites," at the C. E. programs, which were educational as well as interesting.

During July and August we again have union meetings with several of the neighboring churches. This year arangements have been made at our church. The attendance and interest is very good.

On July 21, Rev. P. H. Unruh delivered the message, and on July 28, Dr. E. G. Kaufman brought us the sermon. Others will be with us in the future. We are glad this arrangement has been made for all to worship together in these open air services. Orchestra music, special music, and a different speaker bring to us the same old story that is always new and good. All help along to make these meetings a success. Not that we do not appreciate the work of our own pastor or musicians, but we live in a time when every one wants a change from the usual routine.

We have also had different visiting ministers with us. In spring on two occasions we had with us Rev. C. Schmidt from Chicago. He loves to work with the young people. We wish again to thank them all for coming and also extend a hearty welcome to come again.

During the school year Rev. J. H. Epp again conducted a large catechism class. In spring a group of this class desired baptism, so on June 9, six girls and five boys were baptized and taken into the church as members. On June 10, communion services were observed.

Our church was also the scene of several beautiful and impressive weddings, held in June. Nature was lovely at that time, with flowers everywhere. On June 9, at 4 P. M., Mr. Jona Frey and Miss Hazel Klassen were united in holy wedlock by Rev. J. H. Epp. A large number of friends and relatives attended. The reception was held in the basement of the church.

On June 10, at 4 P. M., Mr. Peter A. Pankratz and Mrs. Justina Unger were married by Rev. J. H. Epp, with a large attendance of friends and relatives. They also used the spacious basement of the church for the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Pankratz left shortly after the wedding on a tour which took them to Canada and then along the western coast to California, where they plan to attend the General Conference and also visit with Mr. Pankratz' only son and family, whose home is in Los Angeles.

On June 16, at 7 P. M., Miss Edna Schroeder became the bride of Mr. Frank Jantz. After a very impressive service, a group of relatives and friends went to the home of the parents of the bride, where the reception was held on the spacious lawn. At all these weddings the church was most beautifully decorated with flowers and ferns.

On the evening of May 9, the different sewing circles of the church had a mission sale. We prepared wearing apparel and quilts, also different kinds of foods. A light lunch was served for a small fee. Although we did not have a large sale, we were well pleased with the amount of money taken in. May the Lord even now richly bless all the givers in either way. The money was sent to the Jubilee Fund.

The G. F. Friesen family has left us. We were sorry to see them go, but hope that God's blessing is going with them to their new home.

The harvest is over and although some might think they should have received more, I am sure we all have reasons to be thankful for all we received, as it will be enough for food and clothing and more. Oh, that we may be found to be good housekeepers with what the Lord has given us! Mrs. Jno. Bartel.

Mountain Lake, Minnesota, August 5, 1935. Dear Readers of the Mennonite and Christian Evangel: Greetings to you from the Bethel Church of Mountain Lake, Minn.! You have not heard from us for quite a few months, so our church has quite a bit of news for you, especially because this has been an eventful spring and summer for us. We have been privileged in having a number of guest ministers and also musicians with us.

First of all, Rev. J. H. Janzen of Waterloo, Ontario, was in our church at Easter time. He spoke in our church nightly. Easter evening he gave a short message at the community chorus program in the high school auditorium. This was an Easter program, at which a number of choruses and solos from Handel's "Messiah" were sung. Rev. Janzen concluded his sermons here the following Sunday night, when he spoke on "The Price of a Revolution." He showed slides which pictured the terrible results of revolution in Red Russia. Rev. Janzen is a Russian refugee and is therefore well able to speak on this subject.

On Good Friday afternoon a Sunday School Workers' conference, representing the Sunday Schools of this community, was held in our church.

Sunday, May 5, we had the privilege of having Rev. Walter Gering and the Freeman College Gospel Male Quartet with us.

On Mother's Day, May 12, we had the blessing of children for the first time in the history of Bethel church. There were six pairs of parents and seven children who took part in the ceremony. It was performed simply and quickly, but was very solemn and impressive. The parents first each promised to try to train their children and lead them in the Lord's way. Then our pastor blessed the children while laying his hands on each child's head. He then preached the morning sermon.

The Mountain Lake churches were quite well represented at the Northern District Conference at Henderson, Neb., this spring. There were between fifty and sixty people present from Mountain Lake, about eighteen of whom were from Bethel church.

On Ascension Day, May 30, we had morning services at which the candidates for baptism gave their testimonies, telling the church that Jesus had become their Savior. Then, on Pentecost we had baptism. There were six men and four girls baptized. Two Sundays later, on June 23, we held communion for the third time this year. We observed foot washing on the same day.

Rev. H. W. Lohrenz of Bethel and Tabor Colleges was invited by the Sunday Schools of this community to serve us with a series of sermons. He was here from June 17 to 21 and spoke on the life and epistles of Simon Peter. Many received blessing and inspiration from these services.

Rev. W. F. Toews, one of our pioneer ministers, passed away on June 24. He had worked in Canada, North Dakota and in and around Mountain Lake and Butterfield, Minnesota. Just shortly before his death his brother, Jacob F. Toews, was laid to rest. He had been active in this community in Sunday School work and also in connection with the Bible school.

On June 30, the Bethel church observed its annual mission festival and children's day. In the forenoon Rev. John Wiebe of India of the M. B. Church, spoke in English and P. P. Wedel of Moundridge, Kansas, of our Foreign Mission Board, spoke in German. At noon everyone was invited to eat dinner in the church basement. After dinner the children gave their program. Missionary Mrs. G. R. Duerksen of India spoke to the children. After the program all were again invited to eat lunch in the basement, the children being given first place this time.

Five people from the Bethel church are having the privilege of attending the General Conference in California. They are: Rev. J. J. Balzer, Rev. John Bartel, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Fast, and Missionary Agatha Fast.

We have had several other visitors serving in our church. Rev. Wililam E. Hopkins of the Baptist church of Rochester, Minnesota, gave a missionary program one evening this spring; Rev. H. H. Flaming and Rev. D. F. Dick have each filled the pulpit once; Rev. J. R. Duerksen of India spoke the evening of July 7; Rev. F. H. Schwarz of Schwenksville, Pennsylvania, stopped here enroute to the General Conference and preached Sunday morning, July 21; Rev. John C. Pryor of Gilbertsville, Mass., spoke August 4.

The Bethel College choir stopped in Mountain Lake on July 11. They gave their program in the high school auditorium before a large audience.

The farmers at this writing have about a week of threshing behind them. We had a cool spring here with sufficient moisture. Now, however, we have just had a hot, dry spell. The gardens could well stand rain. However, we are thankful that we have had no dust storms as we had last year. Sincerely,

Ruth Kintzi, Corr.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR SERVICE FOR THE CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE OF YOUR CHURCH

Many of the children are now attending or have just finished Daily Vacation Bible School and have found it most interesting. The Indian boys and girls of Arizona are always delighted when they also have opportunities of this kind. Last year was the first time Missionary Sudermans of Oraibi had a vacation Bible school. They found it so successful, having carried it out in what they termed a small way, that it is their desire to do more in this line of work this year. Last year's enrollment was 72, with an average attendance of 39 plus, of boys and girls from pre-school age to the eighth grade. To make this year's attempt still more successful, YOUR cooperation is desired. The mission vacation Bible school will be held in the late summer this year, so if you attend to these needs at once they can be used to great advantage.

Some of these projects might be carried out in connection with your own vacation Bible schools, your C. E. or S. S. work, or your missionary societies. Your work will be more interesting when you know someone will benefit by what you have done.

Here are the suggestions: First of all—all written material must be in the ENGLISH language.

1) Writing material, including pencils, tablets, notebooks (may be hand made, about a dozen of uniform size of each size desired).

2) Memory verse material for various classes. For a wide-awake teacher there should be endless possibilities along this line. The memory work used in your own church might be copied for each student and made up in some interesting form, tiny scrap books, etc.

3) Motivation or busy work material. Last year sewing, basketry, bead work and even a little wood work was used. These draw the children to the school, for as you may well realize, a heathen parent will not send his child to a Christian Bible school, but if he sees that he learns some practical work or even brings home a little finished article he will permit his child to go.

a) Little stamped sewing articles with floss. b) Coping saw blades (they have saws). c) Patterns for wood work (simple little objects or toys).

4) Articles to be used as prizes. a) For perfect attendance. b) For good work. Any practical, useful article. Last year aprons and dresses were given to the girls. These prizes are given to insure more perfect attendance the following year.

5) Suggestion: Since no teachers' meetings are held on the mission station where such schools are discussed, any suggestion with materials by any of the teachers and leaders or group of leaders from the different churches will be greatly appreciated for the work.

6) The following suggestion will need thought and prayer by those who might be interested. The mission workers in Arizona are looking forward to having those who attend Conference, stopping in to see their stations as they drive through. Young people, here is your chance to see the mission work rather than "hear" it. First hand information would be most interesting as well as helpful. Of those attending Conference would there not be one or two teachers who would, for the sake of experience, like to stay ten days or two weeks to help in the vacation Bible school work? What an opportunity for SERVICE this would be! Our Master says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto Me." Write to: Mrs. John P. Suderman, Oraibi, Arizona, or Mrs. J. Ernest Cline, 425 East 11th St., Upland, Calif.

Inter-Racial Animosities Today

Acts 10:28-35

Suggestions: Have various members bring reasons to show causes of inter-racial animosities.

Procure speaker or student of another race to speak. — Use newspaper clippings on this subject. — Read good books available covering this problem. — Read a report on the "Boxer Rebellion."

In considering the subject before us, is it not sadly true that we must first turn to our scripture text (verse 34-35) to learn anew our heavenly Father's attitude and will in this matter?

Surely God is no respecter of persons, regardless of race or nation, but are we? Does it not seem to you that the trouble lies largely with us as CHRISTIANS; first as individuals, and then collectively as Christian nations? Is it not the duty of those who possess the light, and profess to follow Christ, to take the first steps to bring about a better understanding between those of other races and ourselves? Truly it is a fact that effort is being put forth by many today, in this direction. Even our history shows some indications of progress along this line, but in the aggregate it is pitifully small, and shows a lack of wholeheartedness of purpose behind it. Can you recall some of these efforts from your observations or reading?

It is safe to state that the greatest trouble causing existing animosities is simply due to a misunderstanding of our mutual problems, but that is not all; we have left Christ out too often when we came to solve these problems. In this we are guilty simply because we do not do that which we can do so easily, let alone do as much as we can in obeying God's command. Read the lesson portion again, and note how both Peter and Cornelius went about to solve their problem, and what a blessed experience followed. Perhaps it was not a pleasant task for Peter, but that did not matter, it was God's will, and that was enough. What a lesson for us! The writer recently had the privilege of meeting and hearing a high government official from Japan as well as hearing the Chinese Minister to the United States speak to a group of men, and suffice it to say here that it makes a whole lot of difference on a question, when the "other side" is presented. As young people we do well to remember this before we draw our conclusions.

The best and finally the only solution to the inter-racial question is to bring to these peoples the simple Gospel in all of its fullness, in obedience to the divine command. In this we must not expect everyone to accept it, or that it will end all the misunderstandings that exist, but that such a step will be a firm foundation on which to build, and will have far reaching influence in bringing about peaceful, earnest cooperation. We are reminded of the vast amount of good that has come through the influence of even our own Mennonite missionaries, to say nothing about similar efforts elsewhere. Thus we see that the missionary cause is one of the great avenues through which we may go to help solve this problem. It merits the wholehearted support of all of us young people.

What Missionary Work Can Our Society Undertake?

Romans 15:1-7

It perhaps is not good to begin such a study with a word that sounds critical, however, after carefully reading the portion assigned it is difficult to use the passage in its entirety as a basis for the discussion of the topic. This is neither a criticism of the topic nor the passage, but of the relationship into which they are placed.

Verse 6 yields itself more nearly than any of the rest. It embodies the end toward which all missionary activity should lead: "That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ."

This was the desire in the heart of the apostle for the Christians at Rome and it might well be the prayer for all missionary activity, whether at home or on the field. To this end we offer a few suggestions for activities in this particular connection.

Each society in our conference would find it helpful if they organized a Missionary Study class. This would be done by the Missionary committee. The frequency with which such groups would meet is a matter for local conditions to determine, once a week, once a month, or once a quarter.

Such a group should have two objects in mind. First, to gather to increase their knowledge of missionary work. Second, to pray intelligently and intensely for those laboring on fields and for those who have been won by their efforts.

Here are just a few things that might be done:

1. Make a map of the world, showing the mission fields in general and our own fields in particular. Thus there will always be constantly before the class an objective relationship of our missionary endeavor to the rest of the Christian effort.

2. A study of the religions of the world with a sound conception of Christianity as a comparative critera. The knowledge of the fundamentals of the Christian faith are essentially first.

3. Pick out a particular missionary or land and study him and his life's background. His growth and the growth of his work.

4. Pick out some particular land and study all of its topographical conditions; its past history; its political problems.

5. Make a Missionary Scrap Book into which you will put pictures, clippings, articles, sketches or any data that relates to the mission field that you are studying. There were several fine specimens of this work at the missionary exhibit at Upland. One contained all the programs rendered by the society.

6. Start a missionary library. This may be done by each member donating a copy. Or by collectively buying a few very good books. Among these should be our own publications: "Twenty-five Years with God in India"; "Chips of Experience"; "The Development of Missionary and Philanthropic Interest Among Mennonites." A good text book for facts relating to missions as a whole is that by Dr. Robert Hall. (The cost of these will be less than ten dollars.) If the class has not money enough, purchase them in the order named. Two dollars will purchase the first.

What Can We Get Out Of School?

Phil. 4:8

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

Pre-Prayer

"God gives us joy that we may give,
He gives us love that we may share,
Sometimes He gives us loads to lift
That we may learn to bear.
For life is gladder where we give,
And love is sweeter when we share,
And heavy loads rest lightly, too,
When we have learned to bear."

Again we have come to the time of the year known as school days and when most of the young people are already started or just beginning. It behooves each young person to make the most of school day opportunities, and, in the early years to lay a foundation upon which the structure of life can be erected with safety and with permanence.

What is school for if not for the imparting of information? Though the physical and social phases of school life are not to be neglected where they are of the right kind, these, however, should not be permitted to occupy the mind and time to the detriment of mind and heart improvement and development. Solomon gave a bit of sound advice when he said, "Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not."

As we study the lives of so-called eminent men and women of history, we may profit by their mistakes as well as learn the secret of their eminence. The foundations of life must be laid in the earlier years. Behold! St. Paul tells us of the only foundation for our lives when he said, "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

We trust that each one of our Intermediates is building on this sure foundation, Christ Jesus. If so, you are building wisely and enduringly, and no storm, howsoever furious, can overturn your frail bark, for the Master of the storm is aboard. His all-powerful words, "Peace, be still"! can allay any tempest, and bring about a calm.

Usually the most worth while things in life are accomplished in the hearts of young people, early in years, in careful devotion to God and obedience to parents. During the young days we first learn the value of pulling together and working harmoniously with others. And what a valuable lesson this is; God has made us mutually dependent one upon the other. The Lord Jesus sent His disciples out two by two. How pleasant it would be in many of our societies and churches if more knew the value of devotion to God and love to their fellow-men.

Briefly there are at least six things which are possible for every school pupil:

1. We can get credit for having done the work with a degree or a graduation certificate.

2. We can get habits of study that will effect all our future years; that is, we can prepare to be students or we can prepare to be dullards all our days.

3. We can get training for our life work.

4. We can get cultural ideals and development which will lead us into an enrichment of our lives.

5. We can learn the necessary lessons of living, working, and playing together.

6. We can move in the circles of the great who have gone before us and have left their stamp upon the race. We can imbibe the radiance of their personalities, the strength of their minds, the fruits of their labor.

Questions

1. What can we get out of school?
2. Of what value is knowledge?
3. What place should knowledge have in our schooling?
4. From where do we form ideals?
5. Of what value is the lesson of team work to our later life?
6. What am I getting out of school, or what am I going to get out of school this year?
7. Am I taking Christ with me?

Class-Room Honesty

Matt. 7:12; 2 Cor. 7:2

"Thou, God, seest me."

Pre-Prayer

That God may give me strength and courage to stand for the things that are honest and noble.

School habits are important because they set the pace for practices in later life.

Every student knows that there are two tempters standing by, ready to claim him: one is laziness, the other is lack of time. Both easily lead to dishonesty.

The first creates a "put-off-getting-my-les-committee that his language lesson was unprepared when class time comes. The other consumes so much time with outside affairs—athletics, social parties, movies, etc.—that lessons suffer. In either case some questionable — or dishonest — method represents an easy way out. But it is never a good way out.

A member of an important committee in a society spent so much time on the work of the committee that his language lesson was unprepared. But he made his recitation in class because he used a "pony" or a translation.

An old adage runs thus, "Honesty is the best policy." If one is honest solely for policy's sake, then he is dishonest. If one is honest solely because it pays to be honest, that one is bordering dangerously on the edges of dishonesty. Honesty is infinitely more than a "policy"—it is a principle! One must be honest because it is right to be honest.

During the days of slavery in the South, a young negro was being sold to the highest bidder. A prospective buyer edged up to the negro slave and said, "If I buy you, would you be industrious and truthful and honest"? The negro replied, "Sir, whether you buy me or not, I'll be industrious, and truthful, and honest."

We believe that we need, as never before, to press upon the consciences of our young people the homespun virtues: Truthfulness, dependableness, purity in thought and in deed, and honesty. Not only in the classroom, but also in every relationship of life we should ring true and honest in every way of life. This our Lord expects of each of His followers.

To the Christian, the Bible is final and authoritative in its teachings. From its sacred pages there is no court of appeals. Observe what it says in the matter of honesty: Lev. 19:35; Prov. 11:1; Prov. 21:6, and others. A merchant had a rival who sold sweatshop goods at cut prices. The young man's friend told him, "You will have to do the same or fail." He replied, "I have taken God as my partner; if I work as hard to sell honest goods as the other man does to sell dishonest goods, God won't let me fail." And he didn't.

Question

1. When is the giving of help on classroom work honest?
2. When does it become dishonest?
3. Who is most defrauded by dishonest classroom habits?
4. Give references where the Bible commands honesty.
5. Give biblical examples of honesty.
6. Give biblical examples of dishonesty.

Rules of Life

"Do nothing you would not like God to see.
Say nothing you would not like God to hear!
Sing nothing that would not be pleasing to God!
Write nothing that you would not like God to read!
Read no book of which you would not like God to say, 'Show it me!'
Go to no place where you would not like God to find you!
Never spend your time in such a way that you would not like God to ask, 'What art thou doing?' "

Topic.—School Days Are Happy Days

Prov. 3:13-18

Ask grown people what were the happiest days of their life and many will answer, "My school days." Did you ever notice father's face beam when he reads a bit of news about some man and says, "He and I went to school together." Then, perhaps, he will tell some interesting story of their school days. Or mother may be real anxious to see a lady who has come to your town to visit because they were in the same class in school. This is true of grade school, high school, or college. Boys and girls or young people who have studied together and have been interested in the same things for a number of years form friendships that are never forgotten even though work should take them many miles apart.

Perhaps one reason for such close friendship is that schoolmates not only work together, but also play together. I love to think of our country school yard and the games we played there. As I think of those days, I am reminded that the little things you say and do on the playground will almost surely be remembered by others many years from now. Be careful of the little things!

In school you are gaining knowledge that will help you as long as you live. You need to work hard in order to make your school days most worth while. Don't be satisfied to just pass your examination, but do your very best. You are there to learn, not just to spend time. Many of your parents are doing without things that they need in order to help you in school. Then as you study, your mind is being trained to think. As you go through life, you need to be able to think clearly and rightly.

School is a place for finding and developing talents. It is in school that most children and young people find out what they can do best. You may have a talent for writing, for music, for painting, or for farming, sewing or working with machinery. Schools now are fitted to train pupils for many lines of work.

Do not forget that school is a good place to serve Jesus. He is always ready to help His children with their work and to guide them in their friendships. You may be a real blessing to your schoolmates. Many boys and girls have been brought to Sunday School or Junior C. E. by schoolmates and in this way won to Christ. See how many you can bring.

Plans for the Meeting

You might make this a real school meeting. Have each Junior equipped with pencil and paper. After discussing the topic, have them write a list of things that make school days happy days. For their "home work" ask each to write a short article on "How I may be a blessing in school," or a similar subject. Ask them to bring these papers to the next meeting.

Questions

1. Give some Bible teachings about wisdom.

2. How may teacher and pupils work together to make school days happy?
3. How does obedience help one to be happy in school?
4. Why should each pupil do his best in his school work?
5. How can you serve Jesus in school?

Topic—The Obedient Way Is The Happy Way

Prov. 3:1-4

Have you ever wished that you might always do just as you please? Have you longed for the time when you will be grown so no one will tell you what to do? If you have, I am sure that our topic today seems strange to you. But think a bit. Are you not really happiest when you obey? A disobedient boy or girl is not only afraid of punishment, but something called conscience (which is really God speaking) keeps one from being happy. Doctors have even said that if a child who has been taught to obey gets sick, he is much more likely to get well than if he were spoiled and disobedient.

And let me tell you a little secret. Most grown folks can't do just as they like, either. Sometimes it is another person who must be obeyed, or there is work that keeps them from doing the things they would like to do. The Bible proves again and again that "the obedient way is the happy way."

Adam and Eve once thought it would be nice to do just as they pleased, and they disobeyed God. What happened? As soon as they had eaten of the fruit they were afraid of God and tried to hide from Him. They had reason to be sorry all the rest of their lives, for God could not trust them to live in the Garden of Eden any longer.

Jonah disobeyed, and God caused a great fish to swallow him and keep him until he was ready to obey. God needed to get a message to Nineveh and must punish Jonah until he was willing to take it. How much better if he had gone right away!

Moses almost always did what God told him to, but once he disobeyed. Because of that, God could not let him go into Canaan.

On the other hand, we read of many people who obeyed and were happy. Because Noah pleased God, he and his family were saved when the flood came. Paul obeyed when God called him to be a missionary. Wicked men stoned him, put him into prison, and did many other unkind things to him, but he was happy because he was obedient. We know he was happy, for he told King Agrippa one day, "I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds."

Abraham obeyed, even going far from home into a strange land when God told him to go. God blessed him and made him the father of a great family. Samuel, too, obeyed quickly when God called and as a result became a great and good man.

Several months ago we studied God's promises. Think of these again and you will see how He blesses those who obey Him.

Plans for the Meeting

Study lives of Bible men and women who were obedient, also those who disobey, and note the difference. Then quote some of the commands which apply to us. Show how obedience to these commands adds to one's own happiness and to the good of others.

Questions

1. Why is it necessary for children to obey their parents?
2. What are some results of disobedience?
3. How does obedience add to one's happiness?
4. Why does God punish those who disobey Him?
5. How does He bless those who are obedient?

The Bible A Book For Boys

The Bible is a book for boys,
As anyone can prove,
It's full of just such stories
As boys are sure to love.

There's David and his Hebrew friends,
Who to their God were true,
Through fiery furnace, lion's den,
And all men's hate could do.

Then prophets brave, who warned of sin
In no uncertain tone;
Who faced king's wrath, but stood their ground,
Trusting in God alone.

The story of our Lord Himself,
Of Peter, John, and Paul—
Oh, the Bible is the Book for boys,
The best, best Book of all! —Selected.

Lydia and Priscilla

(Christian Women In Industrial Life)

Lesson Text.—Acts 16:11-15; Acts 18:1-3, 24-28

Golden Text.—Give her the fruit of her hands; and let her works praise her in the gates. Prov. 31:31.

Our lesson today takes us with Paul on his second missionary journey when he came to Philippi. He had received a vision at Troas in which a voice said, "Come over to Macedonia and help us." Paul obeyed the call and went to Macedonia. Here he met Lydia, the seller of purple dyes or dyed goods. She lived in Asia Minor at Thyatira, where dye was made, but she came to Europe to seek sales for her goods. While at Philippi she heard Paul preach and was convinced of the truth of the message. She was baptized and became a member of the church at Philippi. Paul stayed in her house whilt he was preaching at Philippi.

It is rather interesting to note that in this early period of the church, women were found in the business world. Lydia was independent, open minded, a practical business woman, a thinker with good judgment, which could be used in her religion as well as her business.

We have here a suggestion as to the kind of women we need to engage in business. Women are not all gifted alike. For some their place is in the home, but others can render their largest service in the business world. But women in this sphere should be Christian women, so they might bring to business the principles needed to make it Christian. After Paul left Philippi he went finally to Corinth where he met two Jewish Christians who had been driven out of Rome when Claudius, the Emperor, compelled all Jews to leave the capital city. These two were Aquila and Priscilla. They were of the same occupation as Paul, so he lived with them. When he left Corinth for Ephesus, he took Aquila and Priscilla with him.

While they were at Ephesus, a noted orator, a Jew from Alexandria, came to Ephesus and began to preach and expound the Scriptures. But he only knew about John's baptism, so Aquila and Priscilla took him to their home and explained to him the life and message of Jesus Christ. Here we have a woman become very helpful in training a Christian worker for service. Women have a large place in the church in the teaching of the Word of God not only to children, but to adults.

Since Lydia worshiped the true God, why was that not sufficient?

Was Judaism sufficient for the best kind of life?

What is the place of women in business?

What is the difference between Lydia and Priscilla?

Is it proper for women to teach men the Jesus way of life?

Timothy

(A Christian Worker in Training)

Lesson Text.—II Timothy 1:1-14

Golden Text.—Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

Timothy was a young man that Paul met on his first missionary journey at Lystra. There is no doubt but what Timothy was there when they stoned Paul and dragged him outside the town for dead. On Paul's second journey he came to Lystra and asked Timothy to go with him. His father was Greek and his mother a Jewess, so Paul had Timothy circumcised. Paul always appreciated the fellowship and help of Timothy. In this letter Paul is in prison at Rome, just ready to be beheaded, and he is writing a last farewell message to his spiritual son, Timothy.

Timothy had very splendid training as a Christian worker. In the first place he had a good religious heritage. Paul refers to the unfeigned faith that was in his grandmother and mother. These Christian women prepared years before Timothy's birth for his birthright. Then in the second place he was raised in a religious atmosphere. His mother was a devoted godly woman. These two influences are the most powerful in the training of life and the making of character. Then Timothy also continued his training. He did not get to the place where he felt all sufficient and felt that experience was all that was necessary for efficient service. He studied and developed his powers and abilities.

The one outstanding need in the Mennonite church today is a consciousness on the part of our Christian workers that they need more preparation and training for Christian service. We must have Christian workers who are willing to study, to meditate, to be open minded, to be humble, to grasp every opportunity for the development of all their capacities and abilities. When we become sensitive once of this need and demand such training, it will not be difficult to supply the means by which it can be done. Too many people feel that goodness can be substituted for efficiency. A person might have ever so dear and devoted friends, perfectly good, yet we would hesitate to put the knife in their hands for an operation on the body. So it is in Christian service. We need Christian men and women, but we also need men and women who are efficient and trained for Christian service.

Where did Paul and Timothy first meet?

Why did Paul select Timothy as his helper?

What preparation did Timothy have for his task?

What place does the home have in Christian training?

THE COST AND VALUE OF OUR YOUNG PEOPLE TO THE CHURCH

There is no doubt that the saving of our young people to the Church does and will cost us a great deal. It will cost us our interest, for we can never hope to help and influence them unless we are interested in them. It will cost us love, for after all, love is a great force, and unless our love as a Church goes out to young people, we cannot expect them to show much love for the Church. It will cost us our prayers, for, unless we are willing to spend time at the throne of God in their behalf, we can hardly expect the Lord to use us in winning them to Christ and the Church. It will cost us effort of various kinds, and we must be willing to spend and be spent in their behalf. The Sunday School, Summer Bible School, Young People's Meeting, Young People's Institutes, Winter Bible Schools, Church Schools, Teacher Training and Mission Study Classes, and many other activities are designed and used by the Church in a large measure to win and to hold our young people for the Church. All of these cost something on the part of the Church.

And yet, while the cost of the young people to the Church is great, it is also true that the value which the young people are and bring to the church is infinitely greater. If our young people are really won wholeheartedly for the Church they are by far the greatest asset that we have. They supply the energy and zeal that goes with youth and constitute a goodly part of the working force of the Church. The more mature folk must do the directing, because of the wisdom that comes with experience in the Christian life, but the young people furnish both inspiration and enthusiasm for service.

Besides, they are our greatest asset in preserving the Christian faith. If they are soundly indoctrinated in the principles and doctrines of the Word, we may be sure that these will be perpetuated in future generations. Otherwise the things which we hold dear as a Church will pass away with the present generation. Again, our young people are our greatest asset in the great work of bringing the Gospel to the world. There is yet a tremendous amount of work remaining to be done in both home and foreign fields. Much good work has been done in the past, but unless we have our young people in the service, even this must to a large extent be discontinued. What we want, however, is to launch out into new and greater fields while the harvest time is still here. We must depend upon our young people to carry out the Great Commission in the days to come.

Great challenges are before us all — to the present generation to win and hold the young people for the Church; to the young people to carry on the work of the Church in the future. Will we all, each of us, meet the challenge as it comes to us?—C. M.

If you want to be strong in trial don't forget to pray when you are prosperous.

JOTTINGS ABOUT GENERAL CONFERENCE

The party of delegates from the East occupied an entire pullman car in going to Conference. It was a congenial crowd, and considerable time was spent in singing. Dan. Unruh, who led the singing, noted that the conductor as he passed through the car, joined in the hymn and suggested that for his benefit we all sing "Blest be the tie that binds." The conductor heartily joined in this in a rich tenor voice.

At one of the meetings the good old hymn, "O have you not heard of that beautiful stream"? was sung in both English and German. At another meeting the Indian guests from the mission sang the song in their own language, while the audience sang it in English. With a hymn so popular as to be sung in three laugages, the Conference had to be impressed. The result was that the Conference made the hymn the Conference Jubilee Hymn by special resolution.

The Upland church is one of the most modern Mennonite churches in America and is splendidly fitted for the entertainment of a conference. Its many classrooms, its kitchen and hall, and its many comforts included in the plant, make it a building hard to surpass. The surroundings are attractive and the parking space ample.

The story of our Mennonite publications was graphically told in the exhibition of files of former publications. Among them were entire files of the "Botschafter," "Volks-Blatt," "Friedensbote," "Bundesbote," and Mennonite. There were likewise a considerable number of rare volumes of historical value.

The local committee on arrangements was strong on detail. It seemed as though nothing essential had been omitted. That, of course, was to be expected, but the surprise was that the committee managed to throw in many extras for the benefit of the guests. There were great boxes of oranges with the invitation, "Help yourself to as many as you want." Then there were the barrels of fruit juice—literally barrels of it—for every one to help himself. It was quite a job for those who had the task of extracting the juice from the oranges on their hands. We noted half a dozen men at work over electrically operated juice extractors,—and the juice was not thinned out with water!

Among the congregations admitted into Conference were churches from both the American Indian field and India. This was the first time a mission received such recognition. It was a pleasure to many to meet and hear the native Hopi minister, Fred Johnson, who gained so many friends at the Bluffton Conference, two years ago.

Conference has always appreciated the opportunities for early morning prayer services. This has become a feature that many visitors and delegates would not care to miss, but it was noted that the attendances were considerably larger than at previous conferences.

Conference time has come to be a favorable opportunity for all school friends to come together. Halstead Seminary, Bluffton College, and Witmarsum Seminary had their reunion luncheons, all of which are reported to have been delightful. There was also a Pennsylvania Get-together at which Pennsylvania German was the language spoken.

There were 192 certified delegates attending the Conference, among whom the 981 votes were distributed: one vote for every thirty members.

There were greetings from the Mennonites of Germany brought to the Conference in the person of Rev. Mr. Harder and his son from Hamburg-Altona. Rev. Harder was formerly from Russia and is now at work among Russians who have found refuge in Germany.

The Conference Communion was impressive and surely a blessed fellowship of remembrance. The President of Conference, the presidents of the district conferences, and several local officials officiated. Perhaps at no other communion service have so many Mennonites coming from so many and distant places joined in the memorial service in commemoration of the Lord's death. The Indian guests in their native garb participated in this sacrament.

Every Conference Board had a special exhibit, illustrating its work and its history. The Conference historical exhibit was specially rich in portraits of former leaders. There was also the model of the first Mennonite meeting house in America—a log cabin made by Dr. Franz of Berne, Indiana. Home and Foreign Missions, Benevolences and Publications each had a special room with numerous articles of historic and informative value. The Mennonite Book Concern had a sales room under the direction of its manager, Mr. Ferd J. Wiens, who was continually busy serving the many customers to whom the attractive array of books appealed.

Many of the delegates saw palms, oranges, and other semi-tropical fruits for the first time. Two of the delegates, seeing ripe figs, agreed to buy three at a cost of ten cents. Each one ate one of the figs, then the two of them agreed to throw the other away. Like olives, it seems that a taste for that kind of fruit must be cultivated.

The way to win the favor and friendship of God is to take Him at His Word and conform to His holy will.

A continual purpose in our heart never to allow ourselves to be defiled by the corrupting things of earth, coupled with a clear conscience and the courage of our convictions, means safety from the power of the tempter, freedom from the defilements of sin, and prosperity in the faith and service of Jesus Christ.

JOTTINGS

It is interesting to note that among the delegates to the General Conference there were at least three ministers descendants of William Gottshall, who was one of the deacons attending the meeting in Skappick, Pa., October of 1847, when the East Pennsylvania Conference was organized. This conference was represented at the first meeting of General Conference seventy years ago.

One of the guests at the General Conference was Rev. J. B. Baer, who for many years served as the traveling representative of the Conference visiting practically all of the congregations connected with it and assisting in the organization of many congregations and several of the District Conferences. Perhaps no man connected with the Conference ever had such an intimate contact with the churches and their people as Rev. Baer. He was a companion of the late Dr. S. S. Haury in the remarkable trip they made through Alaska in search of a field to do missionary work. At present Rev. and Mrs. Baer are living in retirement in Los Angeles, California.

Eastern delegates returning from the Conference became traveling companions with a troupe of Chinese Boy Scouts who were in charge of a native Episcopalian minister. The lads gave a very favorable impression of young China, being sons of teachers, government officials, etc. Their leader, the minister, who spoke English perfectly, gave the impression of being a wide awake Christian and an enthusiastic friend of boys.

Mr. Walter Temple, the courier of the Eastern group, who is a practical railroad man and knows how to make the tourist comfortable in many ways, of which a mere layman could not think, arranged numerous side trips for the group, not omitting regular prayer services during the trip. These meetings were both edifying and inspiring. Song, testimony, and prayer had place on every program.

Though he has seen more than eighty years go by, Bro. J. P. Habegger of Berne, Indiana, who has served as a member of the Conference Emergency Relief Board and has been active in the Berne church for many years, is in no wise a back number when it comes to taking advantage of modern conveniences. It was the writer's pleasure to meet him in Seattle, Wash., where he had flown from Indiana to visit his son, living in that town. His plan was to return home the way he came, remarking that time is too valuable to be wasted in traveling on railroad trains.

The hospitality of the Upland people shown to the visitors to the General Conference seemed to know no bounds. Their homes were open to the visitors and everything was done for their comfort. An auto tour was arranged, taking the visitors through miles and miles of beautiful orange groves, giving them an insight of remarkable country that could in no other way be obtained. The campus and auditorium of a nearby high school and junior college was given over for some of the important meetings. The auditorium seated fifteen hundred and was filled at every meeting. The communion service, in which the members of the local churches and the conference visitors participated, was solemn and impressive. This was the first conference at which a communion service was made a part of the program. The local pastor, the officers of the conference, and the presidents of the District Conferences served at the table.

Rev. A. H. Miller, pastor for the last five years of the Noble, Iowa, church, has severed his relation with the congregation. His work in the church and community has won for him a warm place in the hearts of those with whom he came in contact.

Rev. Jacob H. Janzen, who has been working among the Russian Mennonites now located in Ontario and other Canadian provinces, plans to make an extended visit to Mennonite churches on his way to the Canadian Pacific coast, where he will shortly locate. Since he has gone through the trying times in Russia before coming to America, and having had an important place in Mennonite activities in Russia and America, he is in a position to give first hand information concerning our brethren. He writes: "Some of the brethren at the conference session in Upland, California, have invited me to visit their churches in the near future. I would be pleased to receive a postcard at my home address confirming this invitation in order to enable me to work out a plan for my itinerary which I could present to the churches interested, for examination and acceptance. I should like to have stated the kind of service expected of me and how long I might stay. Jacob H. Janzen, 35 Church St., Waterloo, Ontario, Canada."

Bro. J. E. Regier, Newton, Kansas, treasurer of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference, presents the following report for July: Total receipts, $7,386.00. Gifts for general, $6,626.16. Gifts for Orphans, $334.65. Interest and rent, $417.95. Sundries, $7.24. Balance in Bank, July 1, $242.37. Paid out on Orders, $6,870.40. Remitted direct, $78.65. Balance in Bank, August 1, $879.32.

Mrs. Frieda Regier Entz, Newton, Kansas, treasurer, reports the following for the Executive Committee of Mission Societies of the General Conference: Jubilee Fund, $226.54. For India, $153.83. Expenses of Executive Committee and Missionary News and Notes, $24.15. Miscellaneous, $120.00. Grand Total, $524.52.

Rev. D. D. Eitzen of Los Angeles, writing from the Mennonite Retreat of the Pacific Conference, writes: "We are now at the Retreat. 84 registrants. First of these was Bro. van der Smissen, now 84 years of age.

Rev. H. T. Unruh of Halstead, Kansas, attended both the C. E. in Philadelphia and the General Conference in California, making journeys that extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific during the summer. During his absence the following ministers preached in the Halstead church: J. F. Moyer, P. S. Goertz, and Philip Wedel. Interesting misisonary addresses given in the Halstead church were a talk on the religious customs in China by Mis Linda Brown, and one by Daniel Schirmer on conditions among the Indians in Arizona.

Following the meeting of General Conference, Ferd. J. Wiens, the manager of The Mennonite Book Concern, journeyed on to Odessa, Washington, where he took unto himself a wife. He was married to Miss Esther Jantz, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jantz. Rev. J. M. Galle of Odessa performed the ceremony. Best of wishes from the writer and the many readers of The Mennonite and Christian Evangel.

The Western District Conference held its Christian Endeavor Convention in the Alexanderwohl, Kansas, church, August 25. The program included addresses by Dr. C. D. Penner, Clifford Goering, Mary Goering, Rev. H. T. Unruh, and Dr. E. G. Kaufman.

RESOLUTIONS OF GENERAL CONFERENCE

(Preliminary Report; Official Minutes to appear in pamphlet later.—Secretary.)

(Concluded from last issue.)

26: Resolved: That we adopt the report of the Board of Foreign Missions, including the treasurer's report.

27. Resolved: That our Conference express its hearty thanks to our Mission Board treasurer, Bro. J. E. Regier, by a rising vote.

28. Having noted the hearty response to the hymn, "O have you not heard of the beautiful stream," and realizing the value of its use as an instrument to stir the heartstrings of action, be it resolved, that the delegates carry this fact and the spirit in which it is used back to their congregations and young people's gatherings, and further to suggest that the Secretary incorporate a verse of it as a dedicatory message in the coming Conference Report.

29. Resolved: That the Conference urge the congregations to conduct frequent Bible studies and evangelistic meetings for the deepening of the spiritual life and the salvation of souls, and if the congregations desire the assistance of the Board it will be glad to render such help as may be at their disposal.

30. Resolved: That the Conference grant the Board of Home Missions the right to give financial aid, according to their ability, to needy congregations that are recommended to the Board by the Evangelization Committee of the respective conference from whose district the application comes.

31. Resolved: That the Conference renew its endorsement to raise funds for a church and Girls' Home in Saskatoon, if possible, but fix the amount at $5,000 instead of $10,000.

32. Resolved: That the Conference grant the Home Mission Board the privilege of opening a Girls' Home and Home Mission work in Vancouver, B. C., if the Board can see their way clear.

33. Resolution: The Board of Home Missions is in possession of a request from the mission congregation in Hutchinson, Kansas, asking that about six months after this session of the Conference they be granted their independence and become self-sustaining. The Board recommends that this request be granted in accordance with Res. 50 of 1929.

34. Resolved, to adopt the report of the Board of Home Missions, including the treasurer's report, if the auditors approve of it. (The audit has not been sent to the Conference Secretary.)

35. Because of factual misstatements, Resolved: That the closing sentence of paragraph 1, page 2, beginning "It seems . . . " be deleted and that the two changes suggested by C. E. Krehbiel be made. (One referred to changing the place of publication of the Bundesbote and the other to the surplus of $309 since this paper is printed at Newton.)

36. Resolved: That beginning with January 1, 1936, "The Mennonite" again appear as our separate Conference organ and that it be issued weekly.

37. Resolved: Inasmuch as the Lektionshefte have always been printed with profit, and inasmuch as English S. S. Quarterlies are now greatly needed, that the Board of Education take steps to furnish to our Board the material for quarterlies and possibly S. S. helps.

38. Resolved: That if a Conference Field Secretary is to be appointed, we request that he represent the publication work also.

39. Resolved: That the churches be asked to consider the work of publication as a missionary enterprise, and that they take at least one offering annually for the support of this cause.

(Recommendation 55 was passed by as the Board has instructions on this from the last session.)

40. Resolution: The Board is gratified to learn that Bro. H. P. Krehbiel intends to compile another volume of the history of the General Conference, bringing it up to date. The Board had intended to suggest this very thing to the Conference and we commend Bro. Krehbiel for his noble undertaking. (It had been stated in an open meeting that this was a personal undertaking and involved no financial obligation on the part of the Conference.)

41. Resolved: Since it is almost impossible for us to appoint a committee to cooperate with the Canadian brethren in working out the manuscript for a new German Hymn Book, we suggest that the Canadian brethren work out their manuscript and submit it to our Board to see in what manner we could cooperate with them in publishing such a book.

42. Resolved: That we accede to the request of the brethren in Canada to have a (our) German catechism (for Canada) printed with their Articles of Faith appended.

43. Resolved: That the reports of the secretary, treasurer, and audit of the Board of Publication be adopted.

44. Resolved, That as Mrs. Samuel Baker of Wadsworth, Ohio, a visitor of this session, passed away suddenly today (August 7), the Conference express its sympathy to the members of the bereaved family by rising. (A telegram of condolence, signed by the conference officers, was also sent.)

45. Resolved: That the Conference by rising give expression of appreciation to Bro. F. J. Wiens, Manager of the Mennonite Book Concern, for his heroic, efficient, and tireless service during the difficult years of the past conference triennium.

46. Resolved: To refer the motion referring to contents of the Mennonite, etc., to the Board of Publication for such action as seems advisable in the light of the discussion at Conference.

47. Resolved: That we refer the matter of a joint secretary for the five Boards: Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Publication, Education, and Relief, to the Executive Committee of the Conference with power to act.

48. Resolved: That the Plan for Systematic Giving be referred to the various churches and reported to the Secretary of the Conference before February 1, 1936.

(No further action was taken on the first and second recommendations of the Board of Education, since the points had been disposed of.)

49. Resolved: To adopt Rec. 3. It reads: The Board of Education seeks permission by the Conference to build up a Student Loan Fund. In this way the Board would be of definite assistance to our colleges in meeting North Central Association standards as well as aiding young people to go to school. (No action on Rec. 4.)

50. Resolved: That each Sunday School be asked to set aside the offering of one Sunday each quarter to be used for the promotion of the work of the Board of Education.

Mother was tired and weary,
Weary with toil and with pain,
Put by her glasses and rocker,
She will not need them again.
Into heaven's mansions she entered,
Never to sigh or to weep,
After long years with life's struggles,
Mother has fallen asleep.

We cannot rekindle the morning beams of childhood; we cannot recall the noontide glory of youth; we cannot bring back the perfect day of maturity; we cannot fix the evening rays of age in the shadowy horizon; but we can cherish that goodness which is the sweetness of childhood, the joy of youth, the strength of maturity, the honor of old age, and the bliss of saints.—Henry Giles.

EDITORIAL

A number of announcements have reached the editor too late for publication. This is to be regretted but cannot be helped, since nothing is gained but a loss of space in printing announcements that do not serve their purpose. We would advise that those wishing to give publicity to any event through The Mennonite and Christian Evangel should remember that the paper appears only every two weeks and matter for insertion in any issue should be in the hands of the editor in good time, making allowance for transportation through the mails and time for the matter to be prepared for press. —G.

The text has always been the conspicuous part of the sermon when the preacher set out to present what Scripture teaches, which he should do in every public discourse. We get the word text from the idea of a thread running through the cloth. Like the crimson thread in the rope, which England used in her navy to identify it, so the thread of Gospel truth should identify the Christian message proclaimed from the pulpit. One of the trying experiences for the Christian, hungry for the truth, is to sit under a discourse where he misses the crimson thread of Gospel truth and consequently goes away hungry, disappointed, and possibly disgusted. The pulpit is no place for discussions other than those that have to do with the message of God to the sinner with the aim of moving him to conversion or to the saint with the object of edifying him. We have heard and read sermons that have had nothing to do with the Gospel except that they were labeled with a text which, if used at all, was used only to give respectability. In law false pretense is a crime, but we fear that it often happens that discourses passing as sermons are deceiving from the beginning because they do not serve the legitimate purpose of a sermon. A sermon has Scripture for its background, but every one who enters the pulpit with a message must have back of him also the Scripture written with his own life. He must be the living epistle known and read of all men. —G.

One of the oldest Mennonite churches in Germany is in Gog, some miles from Crefeld. It has dwindled down to a few individuals, but is still occasionally served by Pastor Kermer of Crefeld. The building is small but attractive, and formerly had a minister's house attached to it. Near the church is a building occupied by a Catholic school that is said to be the place where Menno Simon lived whiled on one of his journeys to Germany. From this church came Rev. Jacob Gottschalk, one of the earlier Mennonite ministers in America. He is said to have administered the first Mennonite baptism and celebrated the first Mennonite communion in Pennsylvania. It was he also who was the first Mennonite minister to perform a marriage ceremony in America. One of his descendants is still living in Crefeld and takes a lively interest in the history of the church. —G.

For the benefit of our contributors, who times misjudge the amount of postage re-eir communications, we will say ets of typewriter paper of meth the envelope will carry for letter with less postage than al regulations require may become some and at least delay delivery. The office will return to the writer a letter with short postage if the sender's address is on the envelope. If there is no address of the sender on the letter, it is delivered when possible, but the receiver must pay the postage due. In neither case need there be a design to avoid full postage and the sender, no doubt, is embarrassed when such a thing happens, but this may be avoided when one remembers that three sheets can be carried for three cents.

It was once believed that a city atmosphere was not the kind in which a Mennonite community could develop and flourish. The few city churches we once had were made up largely of members that migrated from the country. This is rapidly proving to be a wrong conception of Mennonite possibilities. For one thing, the differences between city and country folks that marked past decades has disappeared. Country folks read what city people read, they equip their homes in city style, their dress is the same, and their interest in things in general in no wise differs from urbane people. In the General Conference there is noticeable a growing number of churches in the larger towns, while those that have been established in large cities are prospering. The age is beginning to get rid of the notion that there must be a different kind of religious atmosphere for city and country people. —G.

Harmony in all things is the secret of prosperity and advance. The Psalmist rightly exclaims: "How good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity"! Too often we must meet discord with the explanation that human nature, being what it is, troubles are ever likely to appear. However, in the Christian life human nature must be regenerated and man must become a new creature in Christ. The sign of a Christ-like spirit is harmony—the harmony that considers others as well as self. Those who were privileged to attend the late General Conference were impressed with the spirit of love and consideration that prevailed. One received the impression that with such a spirit, in spite of material depressions, the work is sure to go on and to prosper to the glory of God and the edification of his saints. —G.

One of the features that marked the Jubilee Conference as instructive as well as inspirational was the historical exhibits. Each one of the Boards had arranged a display that covered its work and history. The eye is a great help in impressing things upon the mind and no one who examined the exhibits could come away without a greater appreciation of the work the Boards have done and are doing. Having seen the exhibits, especially the numerous pictures that covered every phase of the work of the Boards, makes what they are doing real. It should make it so real to everyone that an increase of interest and supoprt may be expected along all lines.

A unique feature of the recent General Conference was the reception of mission churches into membership. Hitherto the missionaries generally represented their charges, but the time was ripe for a more complete recognition of our charges on the mission field. Since our brethren across the seas and among the American Indians have advanced to the extent to being able to maintain their church organizations it is no more than a Christian attitude to accept them as eligible to the fullest extent of our fellowship. They are now to be received not only as wards, but as equals in our deliberations concerning the things that concern all the churches of the Conference. —G.

CENTRAL CONFERENCE MENNONITE BIBLE SCHOOL

The Central Conference Mennonite Bibl
School was established in January, 1935. Th first term of the school was held from Januar 14, to February 14, 1935. Nearly two hun dred were enrolled in the four districts. Th primary purpose of the school is to bring a opportunity for Christian training to thos
Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and churc workers who are not able to get away to an of our schools for training and yet are interest ed in becoming more efficient in their Christia work.

The Central Conference churches of Illinois with the exception of Chicago, are divided into four districts. The districts with the comprising churches are: District one, Normal, East White Oak, Anchor, and Carlock; District two: Peoria, South Washington, Bethel, and Calvary at Washington; District three: Danvers, Congerville, Hopedale, and North Danvers. Tiskilwa, because of distance, had the school by itself for a week.

The second term of this school begins this year on September 16, and closes October 24, 1935. The districts will be the same as last year. There will be two courses offered, The Sunday School Teacher, by Rev. R. L. Hartzler, Carlock, Illinois; and Acts, by Rev. Wm. B. Weaver, Danvers, Illinois. The cost of the course is fifty cents for the six weeks. The first session will be held Monday evening, September 6, at 7:30 P. M., at the Normal Mennonite church for District Numer One. On Tuesday evening, September 17, the first session will be held for District No. 2. The meeting will be held in the Calvary Mennonite church. The first session in District No. 3 will be held September 18, in the Danvers Mennonite church at 7:30 P. M. The first session will be held in District No. 44, Thursday evening, September 19, in the Meadows Mennonite church. This schedule will be followed each week for six weeks. Although this is a denominational project, any Christian workers of any church or denomination are welcome and cordially invited to join with us in study and preparation for Christian service. We wish to have for our motto in the school the words of Paul to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth."

A certificate will be granted in the last session of the school to any one who attends all of the six sessions in his or her district. The committee stands ready to assist in this type of work in any other church not included in these districts. —Weaver.

TRAINING FOR SERVICE

The time has again come when we witnessed the pageant of thousands of boys and girls and young people going to school to receive, as we say, an education. A person cannot help but ask, in these days, with deep concern what it is all for. Last Sunday, September 8, in our church we had a special service dedicated to our school folks. The young people, teachers, members, and directors of school boards were asked to sit in a body so that we as a church might become aware of the relation of school and church. The pastor gave a sermon appropriate for the occasion. The purpose of it all was to get our church people to give consideration to the fact that a large majority of our youth are going to high school and some to college and university.

The two pillars upon which the civilization of our democracy rests are education and religion. If we would have a true democracy, then ignorance must be dispelled and on the other hand our knowledge become sanctified in the atmosphere of religion. No person is truly educated who is not trained in the Bible and in Christian living.

Education can have only one purpose and that is to develop the capacities and possibilities of life, and to prepare life for the largest and most efficient service. It behooves the church to consider seriously whether the present system of education in elementary and high schools is producing those results. A person receiving a training for the purpose of living selfishly is robbing his own life of the highest and best and on the other hand becomes a parasite as far as society is concerned. An educated rascal is more dangerous than an ignorant one. The church should teach our youth as they go back to school that they are having these educational opportunities offered by society so that they might be able in their field of service to render the largest good to humanity. Too often our young people raise the question, "Shall I answer the call to a profession where I can make money or where I shall render service"? There is no occupation or profession in which an individual has a moral right to make profits the primary motives. We too often look upon the ministry or mission work as charity work with a starving support, while in occupations and professions we are primarily interested in comfort, financial safety, and profits. It is just as wrong for a high school teacher to teach primarily for the money in it as it is for a minister or missionary to render service for money. Education becomes a blessing when those educated have the spirit of Him who said, "For their sakes I sanctify myself." —Weaver.

TRAINING FOR CHRISTIAN LIVING

By Anton Richert

"How may our teaching be such as to make our pupils aware of the connection between the truths taught in Sunday School and their actual everyday life situations"?

In other words, it is a question of teaching and its application.

If there ever was a time when Christian education should be emphasized, it is today. In this age of confusion and shifting economic orders and prevailing philosophy of uncertainty, we need to re-emphasize practical religious education.

Not so long ago Roger Babson, the world's greatest statistician, addressed the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce. What do you suppose he talked about? Do you think he talked about his statistical tables, his business and market barometer; or of how to overcome the depression, or how to codify industry? No, he talked to these hard-headed business men on the value of religious education — the very theme we are discussing here today: "Training for Christian Living," and Roger Babson is not a preacher, he is a cold blooded statistician. He told the Chamber of Commerce that in early American history our forefathers had emphasized Bible reading, prayer, and family altar; but America had more or less forgotten these foundations of Christianity. America presumed that progress lay in material wealth and resources. The spiritual was neglected. Material and spiritual progress must go hand in hand; the one is the hatchet, the other the handle—one the lock, the other the key. It is just like rowing a boat and using only one oar—you will travel in a circle and get nowhere; but if you apply both material and spiritual resources — two oars — then you will go straight forward and make progress. Therefore, if Roger Babson, who deals mostly in facts and figures, realized the importance of training for Christian living, it certainly behooves us to reemphasize our duties in that direction.

Whose duty is it to assume this job? Well, of course, first of all the home must assume responsibility of Christian training; then the church and its various departments — the Sunday School and the Young People's Association, — and the public school shares in the obligation.

We, as a Sunday School Convention, are here today to face our particular duties in this field of Christ-character education, to find a solution.

The topic assigned me is based on three assumptions: (1) That the Sunday School teaches the great Christian truths; (2) that these truths should be applied in everyday life; (3) that there seems to be a weakness in applying what has been taught, or a gap between theory and practice.

The topic assumes the Sunday School has included the basic truths in its curriculum, but i has failed in showing how they can be applie practically.

Before we attempt a solution, let us look a the psychological basis of our problem. This is well presented by C. H. Benson, who write in the Sunday School Times of May 26, 1935 page 333: "There can be no real teaching without learning, and there can be no learning apar from the response of the pupil." (Quote.)

That is correct educational psychology. I simply means that the teaching process is no complete until the pupil reproduces in his ow mind the truth to be learned. The educationa process must begin with the acquisition o knowledge and truth, but it must end with it application.

There is the story of Robert, who was usuall given 5c for his Sunday School offering. O Easter Sunday his father gave him 10c for Special Easter offering. On their way to Sunday School Robert and his friend stopped at drug store and got 5c worth of candy. Whe they reached Sunday School, Robert said to little girl, "Teacher said to give the extra money because we really wanted to. I really don' want to give any extra, so I bought this candy." That was an application, only, unfortunately, the wrong one and therefore the wron learning resulted. But the old principle, "N impression without its corresponding expression," applies also to our Sunday School problems.

Let us proceed now to answer this questio "In what manner can the Sunday School sho pupils how to apply the principles taught"?

A.—The first answer is, "By selecting Sunday School literature which emphasizes practical applications." I hasten to add that I hav no desire to pose as a critic of Sunday Scho materials, but I submit to you, that whateve literature your Sunday School uses, the teacher should always have recourse to literature of several denominations and authors.

Just a word of warning here: Some modern Sunday School teachers may be so anxious to APPLY truths, that they lose sight of the ACQUISITION. They forget the Bible; at least they intimate that the contents of a book written a few thousand years ago are not suited for modern application. And some complain that the wording or phraseology is out of date and must be rewritten. But the Bible is the changeless book for this changing age.

Yes, content is important, yet Benson adds: "It is not the content of the lesson so much as the preparation and training of the teacher that determines whether the pupil will apply the instruction to his own life." If Benson is right, it will mean that the Sunday School teacher has a tremendous responsibility; it will mean that in the preparation of the lesson, the teacher will not merely study the portion of Scripture to be taught, but its application to the particular needs of each member of the class. That necessitates a knowledge of the parents and families of his Sunday School pupils. And this brings me to my second point.

B.—Show your pupils how to apply the principles taught, by discovering the needs of your class. Theodore G. Soares in his "Religious Education" calls this "the child centered curriculum" (p. 124 ff.).

The needs of the pupils can be discovered only in the teacher's close, almost intimate, relationship with his pupil. Yes, Benson goes so far as to say, "Therefore all application fails when the teacher fails." That is no doubt exaggerated, because "All Scripture is profitable for instruction," if the pupil but allows the Holy Spirit to direct his study of the Word, regardless of his teacher, — but nevertheless it gives point to the statement that a teacher's preparation is of permanent importance.

Let's say, I have a class of high school boys. I know from my experience as High School Superintendent that drinking is a problem with these boys. I can fight that destructive force whether the lesson deals with the Lord's Supper or with Stewardship or with the Holy Spirit. But I must know my boys and their problems.

But I hear someone say, "I have little opportunity to know my pupils intimately. I cannot enter their homes. I am too busy, etc." — — One of the best ways of learning their needs and problems is by gaining their confidence. If you have their confidence, they will open up their hearts and tell you more of their difficulties than they might tell their own parents. Therefore, gain their trust and confidence and your influence as their friend can be increased 100%.

Last week I picked up a hitch-hiker, a young man twenty-four years old. In the 80-90 miles between Wichita and Pratt he had told me his whole family history, his educational problems, and even all about his girl, Josephine, and his prospective mother-in-law. If a stranger will thus confide in you, how much more a pupil who knows of your heart interest in him as an individual.

Yes, the teacher's attitude is important. One lady Sunday School teacher said: "That child —I'm happiest when he stays at home!" (Do you ever feel that way?) So spoke a Beginners' teacher about a stubborn little fellow. Yet, what would you think of a doctor who would say to you when you are terribly sick, "I wish you would not come to me." Instead, when you have a real case you should shout with a cry of joy: "Thank heaven, this child has come to Sunday School where we can do something for him"!

Paul H. Vieth in "Teaching for Christian Living" (p. 73 ff) says on the same question, "Learn to know the individual; walk to school with him; discuss a book with him; visit his home; get the cooperation of his parents. Be alert to his questions, suggestions, activities, interest, and conduct situations. These offer means of discovering needs of the pupils."

C.—Discovering the needs of the class is not the whole story. The teacher must also create new needs. Prof. Soars (already quoted) points out that the child centered curriculum is inadequate if it means that we will study the child and find what he needs, for this would give him only the satisfaction of his evident wants and the solution of his manifest problems; it is the lure of the young adventurer into experienceable knowledge; it is the stimulation of desires which never spontaneously occur — — —. There is a certain sense in which knowledge says to us, "I am come that ye might have life and that ye might have it abundantly." What Mr. Soars means is simply that a Sunday School teacher know not only what needs the child has now, but also what needs he should have.

Finally, theory and practice can be brought closer together by a teacher who provides definite projects for the class. Apply the old law, "Learn to do by doing." We need a laboratory in which Christian virtues may be applied. And our whole life is such a laboratory. But more specifically, a teacher can provide committee work, organizational activities and projects for his Sunday School class. Give them definite things to do. Check upon their Bible reading, on how a lesson on forgiveness worked out during the week, on how a lesson on stewardship was applied.

But if our laboratory is life itself, then the Sunday School teacher is not there to supervise the work and often the parents are not there. No one is watching. The pupil faces decisions alone. Will the Sunday School teaching carry over?

Many may assume that there is a close relationship between knowing what is right and doing what is right. A recent study by Coach Unruh of Bethel College indicates that such is not necessarily the case. Knowing what is right is not synonymous with doing right. There is a difference between understanding how to apply and actualy making the application in life.

After all, our real problem is not so much that pupils are not aware of the connection between truth and lift situations, but that they make little use of such awareness.

Prof. Unruh's study covered over 1000 students in Newton High School, McPherson High School, and Blue Rapids High School. Practical everyday situations involving the question of honesty were presented to the students. E. g. Question: If your best friend wants to copy your work and hand it in:

(a) Would you let him do it and say nothing, or (b) Would you let him do it and tell the teacher, or (c) Don't let him do it and say nothing, or (d) Don't let him and tell him you don't approve of it.

First they were asked what they would actually do and then they were asked what would have been the right thing to do (according to their best knowledge).

The study shows that about 70% of the Newton high school students had correct knowledge, but incorrect practice. In Blue Rapids 54% knew what was right, but would not act according to their knowledge, and in McPherson 25% had correct knowledge, but incorrect practice.

Here is where the warning of 2 Peter 2:21 applies: "For it had been better for them not to have known it, to turn from the holy commandments delivered unto them."

Therefore the real problem resolves itsel to foundations and inspirations which are buil during infancy, probably the first three years If Christian parents would see and meet thei responsibilities at that stage, then the problem of truth teaching and its application would also be largely solved.

RUSSIAN MENNONITES IN CANADA

David Toews

Around 1870 the Russian government wa about to renounce the privileges granted to th Mennonites in Russia by Catherine the Secon in 1779, and it appeared for a time that al Mennonites would leave Russia rather than t submit to compulsory military service. Seein the determination of the Mennonites to leav the country rather than to submit to coercio in this vital question, the government submitted a compromise, allowing Mennonite youth to do forestry work in lieu of military servic and they persuaded the majority of Mennonite to acept this offer rather than to leave th country. The value of Mennonites as agricu turists was fully recognized by the authoritie in Russia at that time.

A number of the Mennonites, however, pr ferred to seek new settlement possibilities i a country where they thought that they wou be permitted to worship God according to the conscience, and where they would be permitte to bring up their young people in the ways their fathers. The constitution of the Unit States seemed to warrant their assumptio that they would be free from military servi in that country. In Canada there was the Mi tary Act of 1868, which expressly exempt Mennonites, Tunkers and Quakers from a kind of military service. By Order-in-Coun the privilege of freedom from military servi was explicitly interpreted as applying to Me nonites wishing to leave Russia as coming u der this Act.

Russia prepared to leave their homes and come to America.

The majority of these people settled in Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, and Dakota. The more conservative branch that was particularly anxious to keep school matters entirely in their own hands, settled on the plains of the Red River Valley in Manitoba, south of the city of Winnipeg, which now has a population of 300,000 to 400,000, and which at that time was a mere hamlet, composed of a store of the Hudson Bay Company, Fort Garry, an inn, and a few dwelling houses. All the pioneers had great hardships to endure, especially those in Manitoba suffered greatly from the weather, from floods, grasshoppers, early frosts, and other adversities. After a year or two the majority left the place of settlement on the east side of the Red River and moved to the west side, where a number of townships were reserved for them. They finally succeeded, after many years of real hard work, in establishing themselves on these fertile lands. In this connection it should be noted that when the Mennonites who settled in southern Manitoba were on the verge of starvation, $100,000.00 were loaned to them by the Canadian government on a security by the Mennonites in Ontario. This money was repaid with interest and to the surprise of the government itself after ten years. And it should further be noted that this fact, which was not forgotten after fifty years, made possible the movement of 21,000 Mennonites from Russia to Canada on credit.

In this connection it must not be forgotten that about the same time or a little later, immigrants came from Germany on account of compulsory military service in that country. A number of these immigrants settled in the Blue River District around Beatrice, Nebraska, others settled around Newton and in Butler County, Kansas. All these immigrants from Russia and Germany have made their contribution toward different achievements of general interest, missionary work, school work, publications, relief work, and in every other kind of work in which the General Conference is interested.

In 1884 some twenty families immigrated from Central Asia, where they had gone about 1880 to avoid military service. They joined different churches in Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas, and some of them reached as far north as Canada.

In the short time allotted to me it is impossible to trace the development of these Mennonite pioneers through the years of many hardships and much suffering. Suffice it to say that after a comparatively short time they were fairly well established and in some cases they had become wealthy. It certainly is important to note some of the results to the different undertakings of general interest which came from these God-fearing people as they certainly have made a very remarkable and valuable contribution toward our different conference endeavors.

They have helped to build up colleges and hospitals in different places. All the Mennonite colleges and high schools, except the school at Wadsworth, were built after their arrival and they contributed substantially toward establishing and maintaining them. The hospitals at Newton and Goessel, Kans., Beatrice, Nebr., and Mountain Lake, Minn., owe their existence to the generosity of these people. In educational matters they believed in religious training for their children and they certainly went very far in establishing educational instiutions for their young people.

In mission work they have also been particularly active. One of the first two missionaries to the Indians in America, Brother H. R. Voth, came from these early immigrants from Russia. At present the majority of our missionaries in the different countries are descendants of these early pioneers. And large sums of money are sacrificed every year for the development of mission work.

It is not my duty to elaborate on mission work, but in this connection it is noteworthy that during the famine years in India, 1899 and 1900, it was one of the Mennonites from Russia, Rev. David Goerz, then a member of the Emergency Relief Commission, who went to India to look after the distribution of the shipload of corn that had been collected from Mennonites of North America, and of the money that was spent for this purpose, Mennonites from Russia and Germany contributed their share fully.

Brother P. A. Penner in his book, "Twenty Five Years With God In India," mentions Rev. David Goerz again and again and the valuable work that he did in India to pave the way for the missionaries who came to India shortly after the famine.

In the relief work that was done in different parts of the world, also including China and later on Russia, our early immigrants from Russia and Germany were always willing to the extent of their ability to relieve human suffering.

Last but not least, I must mention the famine in Russia during the years 1920-1922 in which all the different sections of our Mennonite church cooperated through the Central Committee of which the late Levi Mumaw was the Secretary-Treasurer. From reports we have received, many children and grown up people were saved from starvation through the sacrifices of our people in America. The contribution of our General Conference for relief work in Russia at that time was over $300,000.00.

It was soon seen, however, that relief work only would not suffice to save our people in Russia from perishing. A number of the leading men of our Mennonite people in Russia saw that they would have to leave their homes to save their families from the awful conditions existing in Russia under the new system.

A delegation was sent to America who went through the churches in the United States and Canada and who also visited Mexico with the aim of finding means and ways for the Mennonite people in Russia to establish homes in another country and under more favorable conditions. The United States were closed to immigration, Mexico with its unstabilized conditions did not appeal to these delegates. Their choice finally was Canada.

But even in Canada there were obstacles in the way. In 1918, after the Great War an Order-in-Council had been passed by the Canadian government prohibiting the entry of Mennonites into Canada. Before any movement of Mennonites into Canada could come about, this Order-in-Council would have to be rescinded. The different churches in Canada united in sending a delegation to Ottawa in order to appeal to the Canadian government to rescind this prohibitory act. The representative of our Conference in this delegation was Brother H. H. Ewert. When the government of Canada had changed and Mr. McKenzie King, a friend of our people, had become Prime Minister, this Order-in-Council was rescinded and the doors opened to Mennonite immigrants from Russia.

The Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization was then formed early in 1922 in Gretna, Man., and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company was approached with a view of getting credit for the bringing over of our people from Russia. The first contract was signed in August 1922, but owing to conditions in Russia the prospective immigrants could not come out o Russia before 1923. On July 21, 1923, the firs trainload of Mennonites came into Rosther station and they were distributed in the different homes of our people in that district. Sinc that time and up to 1930 we have received contingents of immigrants from Russia in larg numbers, totaling in all 20,201 who wer brought over by the Canadian Pacific Railwa Co., and about 800 were brought over by th Cunard and the Canadian National Railway The total credit extended to us by the C. P. R was around two million dollars, of whic $1,058,042.59 were paid on transportation, an some $25,000.00 have been paid for detentio expenses in different detention camps. W have made loans in the United States and Canada to the extent of about $200,000.00, o which about $62,000.00 have been paid.

Nearly all of our immigrants in Canada hav been settled on lands entirely on credit. Th again was possible on account of the good reputation which had been established by our earl pioneers and by the Mennonite people in gene al. In many cases large sums of money had t be invested by the vendors before they wer able to sell their lands on credit to pennile people. In spite of hard times and the depre sion which has affected all people in Canad and to some extent also in the United State more than half of the settlers are still holdir their own on these purchased lands. I believe I am safe in saying that practically all of our immigrants would have made good, if it had not been for the poor crops and low prices for farm products.

We feel that in spite of the heavy burden of debt still resting on us, we have made a decided gain in the coming of our brethren from Russia. Our Conference, as well as the Conference of the Mennonite Brethren, has received a new impulse in our various endeavors. Large sums of money have been sent by these immigrants to Russia to keep their friends from starving. Our home and foreign missions are already supported to the extent of their ability and those who have been laboring for years in Canada to establish better educational opportunities, have received encouragement by the coming of these people, because they are intensely interested in good Christian education. We trust that history will repeat itself and if immigrants who came to America in the seventies have meant so much for our conference work, we believe to have reason to hope that the coming of our people from 1923 to 1930 will mean much to the development of our conference endeavors. We can expect great things in the next fifty years from the coming of these people.

I cannot close my discourse without expressing my heartfelt thanks for the support we have received from the beginning of our work up to now from our brethren in the United States. We have received large shipments of clothing through committees and churches in this country, and we also have received large sums of money to care for the sick and to support the needy. I would say it again as I have said it on many occasions at this Conference, that we cannot express in words our feelings for the sympathetic cooperation which we always had on the part of the General Conference. Other conferences in the United States also deserve our heartfelt gratitude and I sincerely trust that no person and no organization will ever have reason to regret the sacrifices made in this connection.

We still will need help, but judging from the past, I believe I am safe in hoping that where help is needed, a helping hand will be extended.

PEACE PROMOTION PROGRAM

Friends, we lieve in a modern time of social and business contact with all nations of this great world. The daily press, the radio and news flashes, also the commerce and transportation facilities help to make the distant people our closest neighbors.

Isolation is a thing of the past. Therefore we as a body of people who have endeavored to keep peace among ourselves in the past must now make it a rule to get along with other nations as well. We must strive for the things that make for peace with every nation and help do away with war. More than any time in the past have we to think of such a situation. Therefore we must act quickly for a permanent peace promotion program.

This is the task before us: The first and most needed thing in this peace construction is to accept Christ, the Prince of Peace, accept His gospel of reconciliation, His teachings of love, justice, and good will. George Washington, the father of our country, once said: "Above everything else has the pure, inspiring light of the revealings of Christ Jesus affected a wholesome and loving attitude towards one another." The Christian attitude to every peace movement, consisting in respecting the rights of others, is the forward step in this struggle for peace.

Two students once rooming together, had an argument. Said the Christian to the other, "See here, Pal, we are put together in this room for the sake of peace. Let us endeavor to get along in a peaceful way." "But," replied the other, "you do all the getting along, I'll not bother my mind about that." There we have a view of two attitudes concerning peace. We are to follow the path the Christian has chosen and if we are true Christians, we need not fear. But if we follow the latter and do not care about peace or about war, gradually we feel ourselves slipping. We argue and we go to places that tempt us and soon we have walked into the midst of trouble. And what does it lead to? War, of course. No nation will take the scandal the other country puts up to it. If we are true Christians, live up to the Word of God, denounce war and help get peaceful living, we need not fear war. The Christian people of the United States as well as of the world at large, are sick and tired of war. Also the common people say in their hearts with Coolidge at the grave of the Unknown Soldier, "It must not happen again. Let us have peace, is the divine warning."

The next step to take is to give those who have to fight, those who may be maimed, those who have to die in warfare, a chance to say if we want to enter war. Leave it to the vote of the people. Have an ear for their cry, for it is they that must fight for their country and for us.

Before we entered the World War it was suggested that we leave it to the vote of the people. Instead, the government received a delegation from England and listened to their plea, and their plea was as follows: "It's no use to kid ourselves. We are licked and France is licked, and unless we can get your help we shall lose this war. Now you have loaned us six billion dollars, and unless we win, we cannot pay it back to you, neither can France, and Germany won't. So if you want your money back you must help us win this war. If you don't help us, your munition makers and bankers will lose their six billion dollars." The citiens' cries were smothered, the voice of the war financiers carried. It sounded like the gong of bells. The voice of the people who were forced to enter had no chance to be heard. They had to take heartbreaking leave of their families and walk out onto the battlefields. Furthermore, they had to go against the Word of God, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." If a person must take arms and must be ready to kill or be killed, wound or be wounded, what a tragedy! To be engaged in battle against your brothers of the same faith, yea, against your relatives, how savage! Therefore we, as people of the United States, should have the privilege to voice in on such an occasion, because we are the ones that do the fighting, and if we don't defend and speak for ourselves, the war lords, the profiteers in war, shall speak for us, and they will speak to suit themselves. Such as munition makers and bankers are always in favor of war.

Another step is, "to take the profit out of war making." The World War cost us thirty-nine billion dollars. This sum would now provide a comfortable home for all of us; but the United States did not want to lose their six billion dollars. Instead of gaining back that amount, they lost six times that much.

What is more, sixteen billion dollars of this was profit and went into the hands of the munition makers and bankers. In four years the patriotic Du Point powder plant with the United States flag flying over their building, earned nine and one-half times as much as in the years before. Their increase was nine hundred and fifty percent each year. The stee producing states gained at the same rates. Twenty-one thousand millionaires and billionaires were made during those four long years of the World War. And who paid this bill? We paid this bill in our taxation, and now stil more we have this depression to fight the world over. And while we have this depression upon us, the shadow of war is looming over us again. We ask again: Who pays this bill? We pay it in the fatherless families, men and boys who have lost their legs, arms, and whose minds have been destroyed. Yet, if we stand back and do not speak for ourselves, we shall be driven to that terrible siege again. If we do away with profit and gain during war there shall be no more war, because those who make the profit are the ones that slide us into that treacherous game.

But how can we do this? Simple! By government ownership and operation of all war material and war machines in factories. The drafting of persons in industry, munition factories, war ship building business, war plane building, and all industries which may make war a desirable event for profit. This is as fair as it is to force young men to be drafted for war.

Another step is to agitate peace while we have the privilege and good of it. When war is on we haven't time, then it is too late. We must proclaim peace and stand for it as our forefathers have done for over four hundred years. To crusade for peace should be our work at this time, and is it not worth our constant and best endeavor?

Think what a war consumes. The first and most noted is the lives of men. Millions of lives are lost each time war is waged. Husbands are drafted from their loved ones, brothers and sons are called from their homes. Some never return again, while others with shattered health and sick at heart are once more home to see their families. When our men were brought home after the treaty had been signed for the World War, they had the privilege to see the Statue of Liberty, which none of them refused. When they entered the square some began to weep, while others shouted, "Hey, buddie, look at the Statue of Liberty and what it has brought upon us."

Then there is the danger and destruction of property. Opponents' planes come and bomb stores, houses, mills, and even kill wives and children.

We must take into consideration the sums each building has cost. The first building that would befall ruination would be the national capitol at Washington, D. C. That building has cost the United States billions of dollars. It is the most noted and necessary building of this land.

What if they shattered our provision storehouses? Much of our food would be wasted, and when war is on there can't be a surplus of food.

What if they would bomb our state capitols? Since we have lost our national capitol, they know that we must depend upon our state capitol. After we have lost these buildings, the people that are left at home are practically helpless.

After they have ruined our most necessary buildings, they will ruin our homes. This means quite a bit to us. Perhaps that home has taken the entire savings that family has been able to put by. Not only will they bomb one home, but millions of homes will be blown to pieces each day, whole cities gassed, and families, too. The loss of lives would be almost as severe as on the battle grounds.

The next thing and one of the most grievous at that time, is the waste of money. Money alone is called a trouble-maker, and it is not good to have an excess of it. But when war is on, every cent is used, including the excess money, and in every case a large debt is left.

Friends, we agitate peace from different angles, and at each and every angle we find it one of the greatest gifts God has given us.

The things that we value highly, are: Our children. If you have children, you prize them above everything else; life, unless you have life all else is worthless; health, if you haven't health you can't enjoy life and its surroundings. Yet all these things are blotted out if we have not peace. If we are in war we are taken from our children or our children from us. We can't be around them and know the joy they give us, so peace is considered greater than our children.

Then we have our own life. If we haven't peace, what good does life do us? We have to go through misery and often get into much trouble. We just can't enjoy life as we should. If a person does not enjoy life, it is often his own fault. The only way to enjoy life is to help one another and do things the Lord wants us to do. He wants us to keep peace and do His will. So even greater than life is peace.

Peace also makes for health. Is there any one here that would like health and be at war continually? Certainly a person cannot enjoy health if his life is to be engaged on the battlefields. If your life is a life of drudgery, your health is apt to be very poor. So even above health is peace.

Now if we combine all these things, surely they must be greater than peace. You can compare peace with anything and you will find that no matter how important it is, peace is always at the top of the ladder. Another way of expressing the thought is that no one thing in this world is of greater standing than peace, and we should all strive to keep this great blessing with us.

IF TWO OF YOU SHALL AGREE

"Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions." Dan. 2:17.

Daniel and his friends were, humanly speaking, in a very precarious situation. Their lives seemed to be forfeited because of a governmental decree. A very serious situation due to no fault of their own. However, they appealed to the highest court and were wonderfully vindicated and the name of the true God was glorified before the nations.

In our work among the Indians a serious situation has arisen, owing to governmental decrees. It appears to be the policy of the present administration to give the Indians a so-called "new deal." These regulations, as they are now being applied in the work among the Indians, do not only permit but encourage and enable the individual Indian to exercise his natural inclinations, ostensibly to develop his native traits. This policy, if applied some 50 or 60 years ago, then some of the Indians' admirable traits might have been salvaged and developed, but as it now is, these desirable traits of yore have largely been superseded by others which the older Indians are a unit in deploring. After acquiring from the white man these deplorable traits in spite of various restraints on the part of both the government and the missionary activities, then to remove restraint and to abet the Indian in the exercise of depraved inclinations is nothing short of calamitous for the average Indian, and utterly discouraging to those among them who are earnestly striving to uphold a better standard. The appalling downward course of the Indian since the introduction of this new policy is a patent fact to all who are in a position to observe the Indian as he is.

If these conditions were brought about by local authorities, appeals could be made to the higher authorities — as that has been done in the past in certain cases; but conditions have now been changed, the local authorities are threatened with the loss of their positions unless they are effectively enthusiastic in complying with the wishes of the Indians.

Because of these conditions, we, like Daniel, request our companions to ask of God mercies concerning this secret; for there is more back of this policy than appears on the surface. But we are confident that our earnest and united prayers to God—the highest Authority—will bring about a change to the furtherance of His kingdom and the glory of His name.

This is a matter which concerns every child of God, whether we are particularly interested in the welfare of the Indian or not, for it is true in this matter as it was in the case of Mordecai when he sent word to Esther: "Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews" (the people of God). For the mystery of iniquity doth already work, only there is One who is holding back, till He be taken out of the way, then shall the Wicked be revealed (2 Thess. 2:7).

May He, the Holy Ghost, hold back this monster, Iniquity, for the sake of these Indians and for our own sake as well.

G. A. Linscheid.

D. L. MOODY CENTENARY AND INSTITUTE JUBILEE

The years 1936 and 1937 hold special meaning for the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, as marking the Institute Jubilee and the Centenary of D. L. Moody's birth. The Jubilee, commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Institute, will be launched with the Founder's Week Conference, February 3-7, and anticipated by a special "Moody Day," on Sunday, February 2, observed by evangelical churches in all parts of the nation. A Campaign of Friendship will continue through all of 1936, and One-Day Bible Conferences will be a feature. Friends and not funds will be the moving objective of this year. At the opening of the fall term at the Institute in 1936, a great homecoming and Christian inspiration will be promoted, visitors including notable missionaries and Bible teachers from far and near.

D. L. Moody was born at Northfield, Mass., on February 5, 1837. The year 1937 will be given to a celebration of that notable event, beginning with the Founder's Week Conference in February. Through the year Bible Conferences and other gatherings will be held in churches and schools in metropolitan centers and elsewhere, stressing the great values for which Moody stood—evangelism and Bible study.

The promotion of the two-year celebration is in charge of a Centenary Committee at the Institute address, 153 Institute Place, Chicago, from which timely information may be had on request.

CORRESPONDENCE

Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio. Dear Readers: Our church has again been blessed with many rich gifts of many kinds during the past months. Although we have had an unusual amount of rain this summer, the harvests have been good; we have not had much destruction of crops in comparison with other localities. For all this we should be grateful to our heavenly Father and return our appreciation in gifts of money and service.

The churches of our town had union services on the school lawn again this summer. Visiting ministers were invited to preach. Our pastor invited Rev. A. E. Kreider, who recently left Bluffton, to preach.

Three of our young people attended the retreat, held at Shipshewana Lake, Indiana.

Six of our members, including Rev. and Mrs. Whitmer, have attended the General Conference at California. During our pastor's absence we have had several visiting ministers preach to us. On August 4, the Ezra Steiner family, missionaries in Tibet, conducted our services. On August 11, Rev. Ray Steiner preached an inspiring sermon. On August 18, a varied program of favorite songs and hymns was rendered. German as well as English songs were sung. In the evening of the same Sunday the Dorcas girls rendered an interesting mixed program. Milvena Gerber. Corr.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

September 29, 1935

The Power Of United Action

Nehemiah 4:1-6

This is Rally Day for Christian Endeavor. Vacation days have passed. Students have once more left their home churches to resume their studies. Responsible leaders must take a survey of the field of work, organize the work for the winter months and procure the cooperation of all to carry through the plans for the coming year.

Every working society should be organized. Put as many people to work as is possible. Your officers will constitute the executive group. This group should meet at stated times to plan the work. There should also be a number of committees appointed, the chairmen of which should also belong to the Executive committee. Each local society should have the following committees: Program, missionary, social, lookout, and service.

In union there is strength. We have all heard or read the legend of the bundle of faggots given by a wise father to his sons in turn. Two of the sons tried to break the bundle, but the third untied the string and broke the sticks one by one. When a family works in a harmonious manner there will result a pillar of strength. When everybody in a church or a Christian Endeavor Society cooperates much can be accomplished for Christ and the church. However, when a few are expected to carry the burden of the group there is bound to be a great loss and finally ruin. Every individual member should take responsibility using the talent God has given him, be it to serve on a committee, lead a meeting or to answer a topic well.

In our Scripture portion is found a classic instance of unity. The secret was "that the people all had a mind to work." Very true, there were enemies and they were active, too. It is always thus, every worth while task will be opposed. All public works are constantly facing some criticism, either justly or unjustly. There are always Sanballats and Tobiahs just around the corner to molest. They will first be angry because righteousness seems to prosper. Then they will mock and ridicule, and if possible, try to cause the good work to cease. The evil one ever rejoices when work ceases because of discord among the workers.

In the High Priestly Prayer of Jesus in John 17, He prayed that His followers might all become one in the spirit. There does need to be a better spirit of unity in Christianity. A church broken up into over two hundred Protestant groups and several Catholic groups is by no means a strong and united church. However, it is doubtful as to whether organic unity into one big denomination is desired. But there should be a greater spirit of tolerance and a oneness in spirit, all mindful that each is seeking to serve the Master as they know Him. The greatest enemy of the church today is not modernism or fundamentalism, but secularism and materialism. All religious groups should join hands trying to revive a spirit of faith and worship in God, our heavenly Father, as He is revealed through Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior.

Questions

1. How could we organize our society more effectively for better work?
2. What are some things our society should do this year?
3. How might individual members cooperate more effectively?
4. Is organic church unity desirable?
5. Describe the activities of Sanballats and Tobiahs in every good work.
6. What is the nature of Scriptural unity?
7. How might our church be more Christian in relation to our neighboring churches?

Our Goals And Ways To Reach Them

Ephesians 4:11-16; Philippians 4:8

This is Consecration Sunday. A fine plan would be to have the secretary call the roll and have each member respond with some contribution to the program, either a topic, a clipping or some word of testimony.

In the Scripture portion we note that there is a diversity of spiritual gifts. Nature knows no sameness, every leaf is different from every other leaf. So God gives to each one of us our own individual task, He holds us responsible for our best and not for somebody else's best.

Paul emphasizes the goals for the Christian life. We are placed in this world to fit His people for the work of service, for building the body of Christ until we come into Christian maturity. Mature spiritual manhood is reached when one has attained unto unity in faith, in the knowledge of the Son of God and in reaching the full measure of development found in Christ. Our present attainment does not matter as much as it does matter what we are becoming. Are we progressing in spiritual growth? Paul adds by way of emphasis that we must lovingly hold to the truth and grow up into perfect union with Him who is the head, even Jesus Christ Himself. Then when we are under His control the whole Kingdom of God can go onward and forward in building itself up through love. What a glorious privilege to have a share in such a program and to become increasingly the sons of God.

The goal of life is ever of great importance, but once we have determined the goal we must also decide on the methods which we will use in attaining unto the goal. When Jesus was baptized by John the baptizer, His task was clearly before Him, but the wilderness experience was necessary in order that He might determine the principles which should serve as methods in attaining that goal. Therein lies the importance of his temptations in the wilderness. We find the spirit and the method of the Christian in that beautiful verse where we as followers of the Christ are exhorted to let our minds dwell on what is true, worthy, right, pure, amiable, kindly and praiseworthy. These are the fruits of the spirit.

Questions

1. What is the place of consecration in the life of a Christian?
2. What is the value of having a goal in life?
3. What are the evils of drifting?
4. What are the true goals of the Christian life?
5. What is the primary purpose of a Christian Endeavor Society?
6. What should be the purpose of a church in a community?
7. Do ends justify the means used in attaining them?
8. What are some principles laid down by Jesus Christ for His followers?
9. What does it mean to be a Christian?
10. How may our society best serve as a consecrated vessel for Christ?

What Can Our Society Mean To Us?

Rom. 12:1-9

"Neglect not the gift that is in thee"

Pre-Prayer

My Greatest Need

"Master, Thou knowest what I need;
Not fame, nor friends, nor foes to bleed,
Not pelf, nor pleasure — and the rest,
But, oh, I need my soul well blest!

"Others may pray for great success,
And — 'tis a proper thing, I guess;
But, Lord, here is my heart-request:
Please daily keep my soul well blest!

"Without Thy presence I am poor,
And trivial trials cannot endure;
But I can weather every test
If Thou wilt only keep me blest!

"Then let the criticisms come;
Let friends deprive me of my home:
And let me be nobody's guest—
But, Spirit, kindly keep me blest"!

Possibly none of us young people appreciate fully the benefits of such a young people's organization as is ours. The best things in life are often accepted by us with a thankless matter-of-factness. We fail to be thankful for many of the good things which are made possible for us. The object of today's lesson is to enable each of us to look into and discuss certain benefits which come to us by being a member of our society.

One of the greatest blessings of the Christian life is the blessing of fellowship with God's people. There is nothing more conducive to Christian growth than the meeting with saved people for prayer and the study of God's Word. Surely, this thought was dominant in the mind and heart of the prophet when he wrote the verses found in Mal. 3:16, 17.

John, the beloved disciple, said, "If we walk in the light, as He is the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin."

After conversion, each one of us should endeavor to take advantage of every means afforded us for Christian growth and increase in knowledge of God's Word, the Bible. Paul, in writing to the young man Timothy, gave a piece of advice that each young Christian should apply personally. Read 1 Tim. 4:14; 2 Tim. 2:15.

No Christian can lay away in heart and mind too much of God's Word. Read what the Psalmist says in Psalm 119:9, 11, 105.

The Bible is the "sword of the Spirit." This is the defensive weapon which the Lord Jesus unsheathed and wielded in His wilderness temptation with the devil. Three times He said, "It is written." If we, as Christians, would overcome the evil one, we must become proficient in wielding "the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. If our society fails in the Bible assignments, it has failed at one of the most vital points.

Possibly not any of us young people alone could support a missionary, but banded together as a society, we can make our influence felt to the remotest parts of the earth. The primary purpose for our existence is the salvation of the lost. If we, as an organization fail to "rescue the perishing," then there is little reason for our continued existence. Without this worthy objective in mind, we are like an athlete without a goal, a ship without chart and compass! Hence, we will become displeasing to God. Our Lord's marching orders for us are plain in the following verses, John 20:21; Matt. 28:19, 20.

Suggestions for Meeting

Before answering the question asked in the topic consider this one: What DOES our society mean to us? In answering this there should be an honest facing of the facts, with no attempt to make them better than they are.

In answer to the topic let the possibilities of the society be presented, perhaps by several speakers, each taking one point. Following are examples:

1. It can mean a place to worship, both in our personal lives and in services for the larger group.
2. It can mean training in committee work and the knowledge of how to proceed with a task.
3. It can mean the development of leadership in organization, transaction of business, conduct of devotional meetings, and in general enterprises.
4. It can mean the chance to put into practice the religious truth we have learned, and to apply Christian principles in all of life.

It can mean the elevation of our friendships to a high Christian plane.

False Social Standards

Rom. 14:1-13

(Consecration Meeting)

"But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling block to them that are weak."

Pre-Prayer

That we should have the strength and courage to stand at all times for the things that are right and true, high and noble, and that our lives may be a living example of a true Christian.

In our lesson text taken from Romans we see what Paul has to say in regard to our treatment toward a weaker brother. 1 Cor. 10:32 says, "Give none offense, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God." By this we are to avoid giving any cause of offense either to the unconverted Jews or the unconverted Gentiles, so as to prejudice them against Christianity: nor to the church of God, made up of converts from the above parties.

It seems from the letter to the Romans that there were considerable misunderstandings between the Jewish and Gentile Christians at Rome, relative to certain customs which were sacredly observed by the one and disregarded by the other. The apostle exhorts that in such things, not essential to religion, and in which both parties, in their different way of thinking, might have an honest meaning and serious regard to God, difference of sentiments might not hinder Christian fellowship and love; but that they would mutually forbear each other, make candid allowance, and especially not carry their Gospel liberty so far as to prejudice a weak brother against the Gospel itself and tempt him to renounce Christianity.

Paul's rules and exhortations are still of great, and happy would the Christian world be if they were more practiced. He finally ends by saying that we should not judge our brother but that we should be careful that we do not cause him to stumble.

We today need this lesson greatly and should study it, and see if we are leading others down to destruction or if we are helping them to do the things that are right. We judge too often by the social standard around us and do not use the Bible as our standard. Let us just look at some of the standards by which many young people make their decisions:

1. Everybody's doing it. Yes, this is an expression that is heard over and over again. When applied to social activities this is not true, and if it were true, it would not necessarily be right. Your own group may be doing it, but that does not constitute by any means the young people of the world. Is your group on the right or wrong side?
2. It does not matter as long as I get by with it. This may refer to speech or to activities, but its basis is deception, and therefore it is never right.

3. I want to live. By those who crave sin and unrestrained freedom in their lives this is quoted as a laudable goal. It assumes that to live one must freely indulge in questionable or harmful things.

4. My parents are old fogies who do not know anything about today. Parents know life and its problems, and they see the dangers attending many common practices.

5. Money is all that counts. Christians know full well that this is false; that there are many things that money cannot buy; that friendships, and health, and comfort in sorrow, and faith in humanity, and faith in God, and intellect, and a happy home have little or nothing to do with money.

Questions

1. What is my duty toward others?
2. Must Christians be tolerant?
3. Should we keep from doing certain things for the sake of another?
4. Why should we seek our parents advice?

A Missonary's Work

The missionaries about whom I am writing, are three, a couple and a single lady, who are alone on a mission station in the Belgian Congo. The mission station is sixty-five miles from the nearest white people, among a very primitive pagan people, whose religion is animism.

The day starts when the rising bell rings at 5:20. As we go to chapel at 6:00 A. M. in the grass roofed building, the sun is coming up over the hill like a great ball of fire. How pretty it is! The sky is all aglow, but in a few hours the sun will be high in the sky and very hot. We are refreshed spiritually by a message from the Word given by one of the native Christians and taken from the life of our Lord, the parable of the drag net.

From chapel every one goes to work, the man missionary to assign the workmen and boys their work, one of the ladies to get the girls started off to their fields, for there is work to be done in the fields every month of the year. Other girls cook the food, others get greens and water and wood. The other of the ladies goes to the married women's roll call. The married women are not sent to their fields, they must plan their own work, but often they have palavers or difficulties that have to be followed up, perhaps someone has taken the field of one of the women, or another's food has been stolen from the river, another has had nightmare during the night and thinks that one of the dead of their family has been tormenting her, perhaps someone who has magic medicine has caused her difficulty. The palavers must be followed up. Work continues until 8:30 A. M. During this time the work of the work men, boys and girls has been watched closely, and the missionaries have eaten breakfast, one of the ladies has had a clinic and with her helpers has taken care of from perhaps sixty to more than a hundred patients. Some have big sores or ulcers, others headache, etc., etc.

When the 8:30 bell rings, there is great hurrying. Everyone wants to get ready for school and eat a bit of food. The students' hands, hair, teeth, etc., are inspected by one of the leaders or schoolteachers before they go to school. The native teachers often make those whose hair is not combed or whose hands are not clean, carry stones or earth as punishment. School continues from 9 to 12 A. M. These are busy hours. There are from eight to twelve native teachers in four to six different school buildings. All must have supervision and encouragement.

We have the noonday meal at twelve and every one is free until 1:30 P. M., when the bell rings or the native drum is beaten and the activities of the afternoon begin. The second degree school and Bible school are in the afternoon. There may be a women's meeting. The work men must be encouraged in the work of the building, the girls must be noticed at their field work, the boys may have been sent to get building material. As they are on "piece work" their work is taken account of likely in the evening.

After supper there may be a palaver to listen to and settle with the help of the native leaders. Perhaps someone has offended someone else, or there is some other offense. This may be one of the evenings for choir practice. One of the ladies will be in the chapel or on one of the verandas teaching a group of twenty or thirty singers a new song with the help of a little folding organ. We all enjoy the result of the practice on Sunday morning when they dress in their best clothes and sing some song that has just been translated into their language. One of us often spends a profitable evening helping some of the natives with some song that they have translated. It is very interesting as well as difficult sometimes, to find words in their language to express the wonderful praise of the Lord.

It is Wednesday evening and prayer meeting. We first have a prayer meeting for the missionaries, when one of us gives a short message. We go from the white meeting to a meeting with the natives in the chapel, where one of the missionaries or one of the Christian natives gives the message. I recall a prayer meeting when the native gave a message on humility and prayer, taking the parable of the Publican and the Pharisee. It was the climax of a busy day.

Topic.—Working With Jesus

John 15:14 (Rally Day)

Very soon after Jesus started to go about doing good, He chose twelve men to be with Him to learn of Him and to work with Him. You will remember how, when feeding the five thousand, Jesus did not give food to each one, nor did He ask them to help themselves. He gave to His disciples, these twelve men who were with Him, and they gave to the others. At other times, when there really seemed nothing for these friends to do, He took them along that they might learn by seeing and hearing Him.

As the time came near when He must leave them, He often told them how to keep on working with Him, not just for Him. He promised to be with them and all others who believe, by His Holy Spirit. So even now He asks us to be workers with Him. How glad we are that as we work for Him, we who love Him, really work with Him, for He said, "I am with you alway." He said, too, "Without me ye can do nothing."

This reminds us of the story of the man who was going to paint a house. The paint is supposed to have said, "I am going to paint the house," and the brush said, "No, I am going to paint it"! But the painter knew that unless he handled the brush and used the paint, nothing could be done. We may try to work in our own way, but our work will never be worth while unless we let God use us as tools in His hand. First we must give our hearts to Him, then go on working with Him as He would have us do.

Plans for the Meeting

Have the Daily Readings read and discussed:
A mark of love. John 14:15, 21, 23.
Counted as kin. Matt. 12:50.
The disciples at work. Mark 16:20.
The Lord's blessing. Acts 14:3.
God bearing witness. Heb. 2:4.
Greater things than these. John 14:12.

Questions

1. Who did Jesus first train to work with Him?
2. How did He train them?
3. How is He with us now?
4. Why is it important that we work with Jesus, not just for Him?
5. How may we be sure that we are working with Him?

Topic.—What Does A Missionary Do?

1 Cor. 2:1-5 (Consecration Meeting)

As you study the topic today, read what Miss Birky has to say about a missionary's work. We sometimes think that a missionary has little to do but teach and preach, but you will see by that letter that missionaries are busy indeed.

Plans for the Meeting

Some time before the meeting assign to Juniors different lines of work done by missionaries. Give the assignments early enough to allow them to get necessary information. One might tell about how missionaries care for the sick, another about work on the station, then teaching, preaching, visiting, etc. You might even be able to get a returned missionary to speak or to write a letter to your society.

Question

1. Why do missionaries go to other lands?
2. Name some countries to which we send missionaries.
3. How do they help children?
4. Mention things that make a missionary's work hard?
5. What do you think are some joys of a missionary?

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

James

Lesson Text.—James 1:1-17

Golden Text.—Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him. James 1:12.

The scripture we study for this Sunday is taken from the book of James. There are five writings in the New Testament which are classed together as general epistles. They are called this because they do not seem to be addressed to any particular person or community. James seems to be addressed to a group of churches. As we are particularly interested in character study, we are interested in the author. This James is the brother of Jesus Christ. There are two things singificant about him in the Scripture. First, that he was the bishop of the church in Jerusalem as we have recorded in the book of Acts; and second, that he is the author of this epistle.

From all the accounts that we have of James is that he was a man of stern integrity, a born leader and administrator, a man who stood firmly for the Jewish law. James being the brother of Jesus, he refused to accept Him as the Messiah during Jesus' earthly life and was converted by a special appearance to him of the Risen Lord (1 Cor. 15:7). We may well believe that in his Nazareth home he was carefully trained in all the precepts and practices of the Jewish faith, and as we read the epistle, we are assured that he clung with deep devotion to that faith all through his life. He was one of those Jews whose obedience to the law was a joy and whose life was lived in its spirit. This kind of a Judaism later on led him to Christ. It is rather interesting as we read this epistle to find that Christ's name is only mentioned twice. The epistle consists of a series of moral instructions. In our lesson he discusses patience under trial, the value of practice as opposed to theory. This book emphasizes the ethical so much that it had a hard time to get into the New Testament Canon. Even Martin Luther declared that it was an epistle of straw. This of course, because James emphasizes ethical living and works rather than faith. Men and women in our churches who do not believe that the highest morality is essential to Christian living will not find much comfort in the book of James. James undoubtedly wrote this at the time of great persecution of the Christians. Many of them were inclined to let go of their faith, feeling that they were not able to endure. But James argues that these very trials are a test of character and that by the means of these trials they will come to discover themselves. It is very essential that they should endure because through this endurance they shall know their strength and through it they shall also win the crown. It might be said that the central truth of this lesson is how to meet the test of life. James would say, "Have patience, be wise, humble, and have faith."

What was the attitude of James in Acts 15 in the council of Jerusalem?

Is the epistle of James a Jewish document of ethics or is it a Christian treatise?

What place does James give to faith in life?

What are some of the tests which come to an individual?

How would James say that we should meet this test?

John

Lesson Text.—Romans; III John

Golden Text.—Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God, but he that doeth evil hath not seen God. III John vs. 11.

The last character which we study, is perhaps one of the most interesting ones of the quarter. This discussion takes it for granted that John, the disciple of Jesus and the author of the fourth gospel, is also the author of this epistle. The writer is, however, aware that there is a difference of opinion on this point. John was the youngest of Jesus' disciples and seemed to be nearest to the Master while He lived on earth. He seemed to be a lovable and teachable individual. He sensed many truths in Jesus' teachings which the others did not seem to get. One of the marvelous things concerning John is the transformation of his life as he lived with Jesus. He changed from John, the Son of Thunder, to the apostle of love. In the epistles we are studying today he is giving advice to a certain Gaius whom he commends for his faithfulness. He has heard of Gaius through the other brethren in the community and he writes him commending him for his loyalty and fidelity to the truth. There was a prevailing heresy at the time this epistle was written, denying that Jesus was incarnate in human flesh. Gaius seems to have stood for the faith and the truth. There was, however, another member of the church whose attitude was not so commendable. This man loved to exercise his authority. Diotrephes was undoubtedly the bishop of the church. He did not receive with favor such traveling missionaries as John. He had even spread malicious reports about him and threatened to expel anyone from the church who would receive these missionaries. It is rather interesting to notice here the development in the government of the church and the power that the bishops had already received. Earlier, if an apostle or missionary would come to the local church, he would be received with open arms, but now the church is established and the bishop feels that they are able to carry on without the presence of an elder. The spiritual truth, however, of this lesson is that all of the members of the church should live together in unity and peace. It might, be well as we close this discussion, to suggest that the classes have a general survey of all the characters studied and notice the outstanding facts concerning their lives. There will be no questions with this lesson because this general review should rather be taken.

THE FREEMAN RETREAT

The campus of Freeman junior college, Freeman, S. D., was the site of a Mennonite Young People's Retreat, August 8-21. Under the inspirational leadership of Rev. W. S. Gottschall, Quakertown, Pa.; Rev. D. J. Unruh, Lansdale, Pa.; Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Dester, Basna, C. P. India; and Miss Martha Burkhalter, also of India, eighty-eight retreaters, representing eleven different congregations and coming from three states, spent the days in devotional study, and in discussion of the problems of youth. The central theme of the retreat was "The Abundant Life," based on John 10:10, "I am come that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly."

The daily program began with devotional services at 8:30. At nine o'clock, and again at eleven o'clock, one hour class periods were held, while from ten to eleven o'clock of each day, a general mass meeting was held. Large crowds attended the nightly meetings held in the college auditorium, at which Rev. Gottschall, Dr. Dester, and Rev. Unruh spoke.

Four different classes were conducted during the morning class periods. Rev. Gottschall taught a class in Bible Exposition, where the book of Acts was given special study. The class in Christian Youth Faces the World was led by Rev. Unruh. The vital issues that confront young people in their relation to their government, to citizenship, and to non-resistance, were discussed. The warning was sounded by Rev. Unruh that we must not confuse our scripturally-based doctrine of non-resistance with the anarchistic pacifism of the day. Dr. Dester in the Personal Problems of Young People class gave his young people opportunity to bring up questions with regard to the practical, day-to-day problems of young Christians. Miss Burkhalter based her discussions in the Missions class on Dr. R. H. Glover's book, "The Progress of World-Wide Missions." Miss Burkhalter also spoke at several of the morning mass meetings, where she gave thoroughly enjoyable reports of the Central Conference Young Peoples Retreat, as well as bringing to the Freeman group the greetings of the California retreaters. Mrs. Dester assisted in the class work, and took charge of Rev. Gottschall's class on the closing day of the retreat, he having been forced to leave early, due to other engagements.

The spirtiual blessings afforded those attending the meetings must be thankfully noted. Hereafter the retreat will be an annual event. Rev. Walter Gering of Freeman, S. D., was chosen as chairman of next year's retreat committee.

D. Waldo Tieszen, Marion, S. Dakota.

The man who follows Jesus close up and all the way will follow Him to victory over evil, insult, infamy, violence, and death.—Sel.

JOTTINGS

The Mennonite Home for the Aged at Frederick, Pa., held its usual anniversary exercises on the Home grounds, the occasion being the thirty-ninth anniversary and the First Annual Donation Day. The speakers were Rev. E. J. Bohn of Souderton, Pa., and Rev. Chas. Borneman, D. D., of Cedar Crest College.

Rev. J. E. Hartzler, former president of Witmarsum Seminary, who has recently returned from a year's work in the Near East School of Theology, Beirut, Syria, announces a change of address. He is now living in Wooster, Ohio. His new book, "Voices From Bible Lands," will shortly appear.

The program of the Second Quarterly Minister's Conference of the Eastern District Conference has appeared. It will be held in the Baumansville Meeting House, Baumansville, Lancaster Co., Pa. The subjects for discussion are: "The Catechetical Problem," by Rev. H. G. Nyce; "The Minister's Homiletic Problem," by Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander; Presentation of the Work of the Orphans' Society and "Bible Exposition," by Rev. Freeman Schwartz.

An interesting birthday celebration took place in the Hoffnungsau church, Inman, Kansas. It was in honor of Rev. Abr. Ratzlaff, who was 85 years of age. He was for years the elder of the congregation and he and Mrs. Ratzlaff, who is 82, are the only living couple who were married in Russia before the migration to Kansas in 1874.

The treasurer of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference, J. E. Regier, Newton, Kansas, announces the following receipts for August: General Fund, $2075.42; Gifts for Orphans $249.56; Interest and Rent $49.00; Gifts for Sundries, $376.37. Total $3429.67. August 1, balance on hand, $679.32. Paid out on Orders, $2886.71. Remitted direct, $263.23. Balance in Bank, September 1, 1935, $279.73.

When Bethel College opened this year, there were several additional members of the faculty who received the doctor's degree during this spring. Bethel College now has the distinction of ranking among the upper ten percent of colleges and universities in America in percentage of faculty members with Doctors' degrees.

Rev. S. J. Goering and Mrs. Goering of our China mission visited friends and relatives in Kansas and elsewhere, after which, according to their plans, they will spend some time in Colorado to rest.

K. A. Richert, treasurer, announces the following receipts for the Diamond Jubilee Fund of the General Conference: Received from July 26 to September 1, 1935: $1,896.96. Total receipts for the Diamond Jubilee Fund to September 1, 1935, $13,350.96.

Eigthy-eight registrants from eleven churches and three different states gathered in Freeman, S. D., on the Junior College campus for the Young People's Retreat, August 18-21.

On their way from General Conference, Rev. W. S. Gottshall of Quakertown, Pa., and Rev. D. J. Unruh of Lansdale, Pa., stopped over at Freeman, S. D. Rev. Gottshall was for years the pastor of the local church and Rev. Unruh had made Freeman his home more than 22 years ago. Both brethren were speakers at the retreat held on the college campus.

Practically the only change made this year in the Bluffton College faculty was the selection of Miss Edna Ramseyer of Smithville, Ohio, as Dean of Women. Miss Martha Burkhalter, who served as dean last year, is returning to India to resume her work on the foreign mission field. Miss Ramseyer is a graduate of Bluffton College of the class of 1932.

Rev. David Toews of Rosthern, Saskatchewan, writing to the editor, says: "When I left Canada for General Conference, prospects for crops were quite fair, but the needed rain came a little too late and crops have suffered on that account. In Manitoba and in parts of Saskatchewan rust has damaged the crops, in some cases destroying them entirely, especially in Manitoba. What will be possible in the way of collecting transportation debts, I do not know, but I trust that something can be done along this line."

Mennonite colleges report that in spite of the hardships caused by the depression the attendances this year have increased to a considerable extent. This is encouraging, because young people, though they realize that it will be hard to get a start in life, are convinced that the better their equipment, the better will be their chances to accomplish something really worth while in life. The increase of attendance in our denominational schools also indicates that the worth of schools with Christian support and background is being appreciated by both parents and the children whom they send to the schools.

Rev. W. S. Gottschall, secretary of the Home Mission Board, announces that on and after October 1, 1935, all contributions for the Home Mission Treasury of the General Conference are to be sent to Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, 122 Juniper St., Quakertown, Pa., instead of Rev. J. E. Amstutz of Trenton, Ohio.

Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.—I Cor. 13:4-7.

DEATHS

David D. Augspurger, 81, founder of the Zion Mennonite Church, situated northeast of Goodland, died at the home of his son on Sunday. Mr. Augspurger was well known for his church work, having filled the pulpit of churches in Nebraska and Ohio as well as the church he founded. He was also famed as an evangelist, this work taking him through many states. He lived an interesting life and was loved by all who knew him.

Mr. Augspurger was born in Butler County, Ohio, on October 16, 1853, and died on July 21, 1935, at the age of 81 years, 9 months, and 5 days. He was united with the Mennonite church in 1869, when he was baptized by Bishop Christian Ropp. On December 31, 1875, he was married to Lena Schrock near Washington, Ill., who departed this life on March 18, 1907. To this union were born four children, Samuel J. of Texas, Daniel A. of Goodland, Sarah A. Sommer of Peoria, Ill., and Lydia May Sommer of Washington, Ill., all of whom survive. He was ordained to the ministry in 1889 in what was then known as the East Washington Mennonite Church and served as pastor there until 1892, when he moved to Aurora, Nebraska, where he assisted in the church there. In 1895 he with his family moved on a farm near Goodland. There he organized the Zion Mennonite church and served as its pastor until the fall of 1908, when he went on an evangelistic tour. In 1912 he was married to Katherine Sloneher of Trenton, Ohio, who preceded him in death on May 22, 1935. He lived in Trenton until his health failed and since that time has lived with his children.

Besides his children he leaves six granddaughters, two grandsons, three greatgrandchildren, one brother, Peter of Bloomington, Ill., two sisters, Lena Denier of Bloomington and Anna Augspurger of Chicago, and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at the Zion Mennonite church, with Rev. A. D. Elgi, the present pastor, and G. I. Gundy of Meadows, Ill., in charge. They were assisted by Rev. Unsicker of Dunlap, Ind., Rev. Val. Struthlar of Washington, Ill., and Rev. Amstutz of Trenton, Ohio.

Philip Neuenschwander, a charter member of the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio, was born July 26, 1861, and died August 29, 1935, as a result of an automobile accident, having attained the age of 74 years, 1 month, and 8 days. Mr. Neuenschwander had been a S. S. teacher for more than fifty years. He was a father in Israel whose going is a real loss to his family, church, and community. Three children survive him. The funeral was largely attended and was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Paul E. Whitmer, on Sunday afternoon, September 1, 1935.

Wilhelmina Jantz, nee Franz, daughter of Leonard and Eva Franz, was born near Parker, S. Dakota, March 10, 1885. She was baptized September 15, 1901, upon her confession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. She came to the State of Washington in the fall of 1902. She was married to Andrew Jantz, December 26, 1907. Six children were born to this union, all living and permitted with their father to be at the bedside of the mother. She was a charter member of the Salem Mennonite church at Ruff, though in February 1935 transferred her membership to the Menno Mennonite church. She was a very faithful member of the church ever since she united. She passed away in the hospital at Spokane, Saturday, August 24, attaining an age of 50 years, 5 months, 14 days. She leaves to mourn her departure, her husband, 2 sons, 4 daughters, 1 granddaughter, 6 brothers, 2 sisters, a host of relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted from the Menno Mennonite church, August 27, the Rev. P. R. Aeschliman and Rev. M. J. Galle speaking words of comfort. Interment in the Menno Mennonite church cemetery.

Orva Ida Guth, daughter of Samuel and Ida Guth, was born in Washington, Ill., 1908, and passed away in Chicago, Ill., Monday, August 19, at the age of 27 years, after an illness of eight months. At the age of three she moved with her parents to Huntley, Ill., where she lived until after her graduation from the Huntley High School, after which she moved to Chicago, where she was employed until the time of her illness. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Ida Guth, and two sisters, Mrs. Eunice Fulmer of Wilmington, Del., and Mrs. Elsie Sharpnash of Maywood, Ill.; also two brothers, Arlo Guth of Huntley, Ill., and Willis, of Maywood, Ill. Her father, one brother, and one sister preceded her in death. She was loved by all who knew her and will be greatly missed by her many relatives and friends. She was a member of the Huntley Congregational church.

Funeral service was in charge of Geo. I. Gundy, assisted by a student of the Moody Institute.

OUR MISSION TREASURY

Dear Mission Friends:—

Now that we are returning six missionaries this fall, four to China and two to India, we have to appeal for special remembrance of our treasury, especially since this is, as usual, the hardest time in the year for our treasury.

Next Sunday, as you will have read, Missionary S. F. Pannabecker's ordination is to take place in Newton at 2:30 P. M., to which all mission friends are invited. As usual, a collection will be held in connection with this festival, which will, no doubt, help us much. For Brother and Sister Pannabecker a special gift has come in for the traveling expenses, and for Brother and Sister Boehr some money has also been sent in. But just now also a part of this quarter's salary is due and we can easily use during the next few weeks around $10,000.00. Could not all churches have a special mission collection next Sunday when the ordination will be remembered in the churches? Or some other Sunday soon? It would be a great help to our treasury at this time.

With hearty thanks for all support in the past, we hope for the Lord's blessings also in the future.

P. H. Richert, Secretary.

CORRESPONDENCE

Normal Mennonite Church, Normal Ill. Lucile Deuler is recovering nicely from a long, severe illness.

Albert Rohrer, Merle and William Ramseyer are leaving for Bluffton, Ohio, where they will attend Bluffton College.

September 8, Methodist ministers attending the Methodist conference at this place, will be guest speakers in our churches.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Baughman have returned from a short visit in Indiana.

Anchor Mennonite Church, Gibson City, Illinois. Mrs. Roy Unzicker visited her sister, Mrs. August Wickman, of near Milford, Sunday, August 11. Mrs. Wickman had been severely cut and bruised by a team of horses that she had stopped. She seems to be recovering nicely.

Frieda Garber entertained her Sunday School class Friday, August 16, with a picnic in the timber near the home of Rev. Roy Unsicker of Fisher.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schertz received word Monday, August 25, of a grandson, born at the Mennonite Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Claris Roth. The little one has been named Claris Dean.

Rev. and Mrs. Samuel Ummel and three children, Mervin, Dorothy, and Lola, worshiped with us Sunday, August 18. Rev. Ummel delivered the sermon, which was very much enjoyed by all and was a glory to God. They visited at the home of Mr. Peter Nafsiger and daughter, Ethel, Mrs. Ummel's father.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Unzicker and children, Lyle and Farice, and Mr. Julius Unzicker attended the Sutter reunion, held at Miller Park, Saturday, August 30.

Rev. and Mrs. Aaron Augspurger returned home Saturday, August 31, after visiting relatives and friends in and near Bloomington, and attending the conference.

Our Sunday School and church were closed August 25, and everyone availed himself of the opportunity of going to Bloomington to the conference. One feature which seemed to be of great spiritual help was the afternoon session when the presence of the Holy Spirit was so visibly felt in the room.

August 28, the Schertz family held its reunion in Miller Park. Those from our vicinity were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Schertz. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schertz and sons Wilbur and Dale, Rev. and Mrs. Aaron Augspurger, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Gingerick, Elizabeth, Dan, and Earl Schertz. Saturday, August 30, they all attended the Springer reunion, which was also held in Miller Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Gingerick, Elizabeth, Dan, and Earl Schertz attended the Defenders Conference, held at Groveland Sunday, September 1.

Mrs. Joe Schertz attended the King reunion, held at MacNaw Dells. September 1.

Mr. and Mrs. John Garber and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Schertz and sons attended the Garber reunion held at Washington Park, Washington, Ill., August 27.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Unzicker and children visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Baughman, Sunday, August 18. Lyle and Farice spent a week with their grandparents.

Rev. Roy Unzicker was led by the Spirit, September 1, to speak on Eph. 6:1, "Put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." This is the only armor which a true Christian can put on to endure the power of Satan. In Isaiah 59:1, 2 we read, "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it can not save, neither is his ear heavy that it can not hear. But your iniquities have separated between you and your God and your sins have hid his face from you that he will not hear." So when we pray and our prayers are unanswered we know that we have not done according to 1 John 1:9. If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

Many years ago Sunday School work was inaugurated in Arabia among the children of the Beloochis who migrated from their own country to make their homes in the southeastern section of Arabia. As a result of hard work, perseverance and courage there is now reported in Muscat a Sunday School of six classes. There are well over 250 enrolled. A fifty percent attendance is considered excellent since parents do not look upon attendance in Sunday School as worth while if there is no material gain. Most of the children must help in some way to support the family so there are always some absent because of that. The efforts on the part of these children not to steal or to lie are most gratifying. For the six classes there are four teachers, so instruction in hand-work is given the classes which must wait. The Sunday School is the only bright spot in the lives of many of these children.

In many churches it is the custom to hold a Harvest Thanksgiving Service some time in fall. We can not conceive of any Christian so forgetting the graciousness of God in bestowing the kindly fruits of the earth so as to omit an expression of gratitude. Such gratitude should be a daily expression and not only one for a special and formal service. However, as with the Children of Israel of old, so with us every year of our lives, the great joy of harvest is a matter that turns our thoughts to God, the giver of every good and perfect gift. As the blessings of harvest are general, so there should be a general coming together to express unitedly the thanks of a grateful people. We would urge that every congregation set aside a special day of Harvest Thanksgiving, if this has not already been done.

A Harvest Thanksgiving is one because of gifts received. It should be an occasion for giving of gifts in return. The Lord's work at this time is in special need of unusual support. Every Mission, Benevolence, or Church Extension enterprise needs the help of all the church. Why not, then, make Harvest Home an occasion for bringing special gifts for those special general ventures of the church that are in dire need of greater financial support? G.

To the English speaking world October 4, 1535, was a date of greatest significance for at that time the first English Bible came from the press. This was only after such men as Tyndale had died the martyr's death in efforts to give their countrymen the Word of God in the language which the common people could read and understand. After that there came numerous translations following the 1535 of Coverdale, which finally culminated in the Autherized Version of 1611, which remains today the fixed standard of scriptures for the general reader, and incidentally a standard of English speech.

No one can estimate the power of the Bible in the tongue of the people. It has become fixed in their thoughts, language and lives, neither could any estimate what would be the effect upon us and the whole world, had the Bible remained, through the barriers of language, the monopoly of the learned in a language that meant nothing to the ears of the common people.

The American Bible Society has issued a series of booklets on the subject of the English Bible and in recognition of the 400th anniversary of its first printing in the English language. These are a mine of information and a source of inspiration to further Bible study and should be in the hands of every minister, Sunday School teacher and all others to whom the Bible is the most precious book. Since the Bible is the source of all that pertains to our salvation, Christian life and hope, no Christian can afford to let any opportunity go by that may be helpful to him in its greater appreciation.

There are people who love discussion for discussion's sake. Very often such debates are profitable because of the matter under discussion. Again, they are a waste of time. We like the freedom of exchanging ideas when ideas are worth while. However, it sometimes happens as it did in a Sunday School class, that someone likes to throw a wrench into the machine just for the fun of it. A teacher who was explaining the lesson and making a strong plea for total abstinence, was interrupted by one with the question, "What do you make out of Paul's advice to Timothy to take a little wine for his stomach's sake"? The answer was sensible and to the point: "I am not Paul and you are not Timothy, and there is nothnig the matter with your stomach or mine." —G.

At this writing the papers are full of news concerning the Italian-Etheopian situation. No one can tell what the headliners may bring, though it does seem that the fiendish demand for war will remain unchecked, and maybe by the time that this paper is in the hands of the readers bombs will be falling from the skies on helpless women and children and poison gas will be casting its clouds of death over troops of practically helpless black people. Since the World War we have thought that nations have learned their lessons and become more peace minded. In a sense this is true of some nations and not true of the aggressor nation today. Surely, the League of Nations has made great efforts at having war averted and it must be said to the admiration of the statesmen who have unceasingly done all they could to prevent the war that, aside of the Italian people, they seem to have the approval of the peoples of the other nations. If there ever was an unjust war, this one which is planned to deprive a people of their territory and their resources that another nation may profit without regard to decent rights, will be an unjust and criminal one.

The people of our country are recalling how that at the outbreak of the World War no one thought that we would become involved, but as the months went by we found ourselves drawn into it and now, years after its end, we are left to hold the bag by the nations that cannot afford, or rather refuse to repay us for the money we loaned them to win. In other words, America has been forced to pay for the war. People are wondering, should a general war break out, what will be the possibility of the United States being drawn into it? The last war was, as far as our country was concerned, a munitions makers' war. Will the greed of the makers of war supplies again draw us into a bloody conflict? Will one-sided sympathy make possible a propaganda that will draw us into the conflict? Or will the good sense of the American public be such that it will abide by its determination to strict neutrality? Here is the challenge to all lovers of peace. What are they going to do about it? —G.

ENCOURAGING REPORT FROM THE GIRLS' BOARDING SCHOOL, JANJGIR, INDIA

By Helen Nickel

For all the encouragement and help which has come recently from friends at home, I thank our heavenly Father. He knoweth our needs and is strong and ready to help. I appreciated in a very real way the letter from the Board which came as a Christmas greeting.

In times of personal troubles and discouragements and news of the death of a near relative after weeks of terrible suffering, my testimony is best expressed in the words of Saint John, "Greater is He that is in me than he that is in the world." Christ is sufficient. He is the same yesterday, today, and forever, but my knowledge of Him and acquaintance with Him has been greatly enriched, and for this I thank Him.

Much of my joy in India comes from the daily contact with the teachers and school girls, and this year the cup of joy was quite full when a quiet but sure working of the Holy Spirit manifested itself in our midst. The one outstanding noticeable result was that twenty-one girls were baptized at the various stations during the Christmas holidays. But there have been equally encouraging, though perhaps less conspicuous changes also. Greater truthfulness, better consideration one for another, eagerness to help and a cheerful cooperating attitude! Nor is it over—we keep praying that it may increase and spread beyond the school and boarding. And after I have made these statements carefully, I'll not spoil them by looking through my pessimistic spectacles. I have a pair and am tempted to use them too often. There is a life work right here at Janjgir—a great need for teaching, advising, and illustrating consistent Christian living. If God wills it so, I trust the task may be mine for many years to come. Only — helpers in prayer are needed, otherwise the task looks too big.

Recently the Inspectress of Schools for Jubbulpore district paid her official visit to the school. She is an English lady, very congenial, and thoroughly interested in educational and also mission problems. Her intimate knowledge of India makes her opinions rather important and she was liberal in giving constructive and workable suggestions. She was more than a visitor on business, she was a guest, and guests to us are always important events. Just come and see for yourself. You will find a welcome and plenty of preparation and excitement about your arrival. I quote the opening paragraph of her report of her visit. It pertains entirely to the girls' school. "The school is showing distinct progress. I hope it will not be necessary to close it for financial reasons, for this institution caters to specially backward areas, and if the girls cannot get their education beyond class IV in this school, it is doubtful whether they will be able to attend any other."

PANNABECKERS IN HONOLULU

Aboard the Empress of Canada,
Nearing Honolulu,
September 12, 1935.

Dear Friends at Home:

In several hours our ship will be stopping at Honolulu, and we want to take the occasion to send back a few words of greeting and farewell. First we want to thank all those who by their prayers, sympathy and gifts have made our return to China possible at this time. We feel it is both a distinct privilege and a heavy responsibility to represent the home church on our China mission field. For this privilege and the confidence it shows we wish to express our thanks. I can think of no greater opportunity in the present day than to be a representative of the gospel of Jesus Christ in a land like China where civilization is in a flux and where there are so many problems and where people so much need the power of the Spirit.

On our trip out to the west coast we made a six-day stop in Kansas. We will always remember the kind hospitality and the Christian fellowship of those days. May God bless all of you whom we met as well as the host of others throughout the various congregations who, we know, are continuing with us in spirit.

Our address in China will be simply Kai Chow, Hopei, China, and we hope to hear from many of you as time passes. On our part we will try to answer all letters we receive and to keep in touch with you occasionally through the church papers. On September 24th, we are due to land in Shanghai, and by October 1st we hope to arrive on the field. Let us remember each other in prayer that both at home and abroad we may be faithful.

Wishing God's best for each and all of us,
Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker.

THE HEART OF THIS NATION IS CHRISTIAN

Matilda Basinger

Text: 1 Cor. 10:12, "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Before the World War began, most of us thought we had established a Christian world here in America and that we were about to establish the Kingdom of God in other countries. We were all more or less sure that God's will was being done on earth.

In 1914, August, before the war began, I was at the University of Chicago and was advised by a friend to go with her to the city and lay in a supply of gloves and silk because prices soon would go up. Said I, "But this is the twentieth century, not the sixteenth, and I can not imagine that people today will go about killing each other off." How far from the truth was my hope in an idealistic world! Today, because of this war, missions in many countries, particularly in Turkey, are suffering and actually being asked to move out of the country together with the schools which they founded. (The Seven Churches.)

It is timely that we ask ourselves why the building of God's kingdom suffers so on earth? The lust for gold probably has to be put as the first great cause — if, indeed, not the entire cause of all wars. (Ye can not serve God and mammon, still holds.) Nations want the raw material that other countries have—oil, rubber, cotton, minerals, etc., and so a pretense is made for patriotism when the object is merely robbery (Teacher's Oath Bill of Illinois. The man who introduced the bill received $800 per month for no services rendered). Newspapers —lies. Hence, there are wars and rumors of wars. So the best of us are led face to face with the worst against the spiritual interpretation of man and the universe. (All the middle aged people know by this time that the battles of life just begin at forty or fifty years of age—really. In 1926, a great preacher of Boston, Dr. Gordon, wrote: "This country needs discipline, and it is bound to have discipline. It is enormously rich, enormously irresponsible morally, and given to pleasure, and such an age brings its own antidote agilation as to the fundamental meaning of life. If human beings turn into animals, the dog eat dog kind, then Christianity means nothing for them, no matter how refined they may be, or how splendid the habitat. We are to look dark things in the face, but we shall see in each case the light that can not fail. Which is the better life, and which the stronger, the life of the just man or the life of the unjust man? We want to know what injustice is in itself, and why we should reject it, and want to know what justice is and why we should choose it. We have an example of this in the New Testament.

Jesus was transcendent in His goodness, and He received, He met the worst treatment. He was the best in His program, in His spirit, in His character, in His faith, in His influence, that the world has ever seen. The religious men of His time bitterly opposed Him, did everything during His public ministry to thwart and bring Him to naught. His mission was largely among the unfortunate and, of course, to powerful people in those days such persons did not count; publicans and sinners were His friends, abandoned men and women, therefore they thought His character must be like theirs. His disciples, without doubt men of unusual natural capacity, were unlearned men, of no influence with the upper classes. Finally this Being, who was the best the world had ever seen, was crucified between two thieves, crowded out of the world as a superlative criminal. The best met the worst and was NOT defeated. Which had the happier life, Jesus or those who opposed Him? What was highest ruled throughout His life; He was interior harmony and symphony of infinite worth, and He went His way in the vision of the loving Eternal Father, in the vision of human beings as the children of a loving Father in heaven, and in the service of them. His meat and His drink were to do the will of the Father; this was His joy, the joy set before Him that made Him endure the worst evils and regard them as of no account. Which was the stronger, Jesus or Hi foes? They killed Jesus. Absolute moralit always leads to the cross. Socrates drank hi hemlock. Joan of Arc was burned at the stake They killed Jesus, but they did not kill Hi cause. That was His life. He founded Hi kingdom in spite of all opposition of Scribe and Pharisees (the lawyers, who have no changed much, and who are today very bus again in not letting a good social program come to earth.) (This conflict can not be understood by youth, only middle age.) He founded His kingdom in spite of all classes, even th Romans. They put Him out of life, but Hi kingdom was founded, as Martin Luther says "His kingdom is forever." His enemies though they had crowded out Jesus, Him and His life but He won by putting the Kingdom of God i human history, there to stay until man ceases to be human and becomes a brute.

And what subtle forces are at work today to crowd out the Kingdom of God? Propaganda weighted news, reels, pictures that are cheap and tawdry, 90% of them. This in spite of the fact that the Legion of Decency thinks it has cleaned up the movies. The profit makers (serving mammon—gold) leave others to worry about the citizens of tomorrow. The newspapers, 75 of the largest dailies, got together after the war to make the American people military minded and get more profit for the few. Newspapers are run to make money and not to educate the people. They also use any method possible to spread their propaganda. Lies about presidents or about big men are often resorted to, and one editor has actually said that if lies are repeated often enough the people will believe them. The Army and Navy League, so-called Crusaders, American Legion, Chamber of Commerce in high places are all busy in spreading, not the Kingdom of God, but its overthrow, wars and rumors of wars —for profit to themselves. These are the forces then that Christianity today encounters.

In this giant conflict many a Christian has thought himself broken up, when he was merely been made ready for the sowing.

The one thing that should comfort us all can be well expressed in the motto which the Swedish botanist, Linnaeus, had inscribed above his door: "Live blamelessly; God is near." In contrast with a statement I found in a book the other day, which said that this country is fit only for bears and wolves, let me say it is beautiful. If you don't believe it, try to live in a city for nine or ten months, and then look at the beautiful green pastures and trees which God has made. The beauty of all His handiwork is enough to nearly blind one's eyes, certainly daze them. Are these brutalizing forces going to defeat the better life God has chosen for man? If man does return to animal life, then what need has he of Christianity?

With all the bad forces at work in the world today, one certain prayer of the Father remains, "Thy kingdom come"! All the bad forces of the world can not defeat its coming some day. These bad forces may delay its coming for thousands of years, but come it must. — If one lives blameless, there is no need of despairing about what is to be done. People are commanded to put their trust in God and not in themselves.

"Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Live blameless; God is near.

(August 1, Missionary Society, Pandora, Ohio.)

HOME MISSIONS AND THE KINGDOM

(By J. H. Janzen, Waterloo.)

"You shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." Acts 1:8b.

Where there are no home missions there cannot be foreign missions. Where the foundation is rotten, the building will collapse. Where the family, which is the essential core of the state, decays, the kingdom will break down. Without home missions there can be no kingdom.

If you wish to conquer the world for the Prince of peace, you must not hesitate to do the first step on the war-path. We start from home on the road of triumphal progress. We can make headway only if our home has been made and is being maintained as a sound dependent strategic base for our warfare. Therefore home missions necessarily must be the base of any church or conference that wants to expand to the uttermost parts of the earth and make the whole earth the Kingdom of God. The Lord has given nothing short of this as a commission to His disciples, apostles and churches.

The home mission field is necessarily at home. Everybody cannot be a foreign missionary, but every Christian can, should, and must be a home missionary. "If any provideth not for his own, and especially his own household, he has denied the faith, and is worse than an unbeliever." How could such a man or woman go and preach the gospel to the heathen?

But working in the small family circle very likely will make our minds narrow and foster a kind of a family egoism that might be worse than personal egoism. Therefore our Lord has included in the home mission field the church in which all Christian families are united and must "give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Here the Christian has to be active in real home mission work by which the members of the church would be strengthened in their position in social life. In this respect any church must be a training school of home missonaries, who would be trained and able to work for the Kingdom in the surroundings in which they are earning their daily bread, conducting their business and doing their duty as social workers. A church whose members are not torches that set the unbelieving world on fire, are dead and useless. Only such churches have really a right to exist whose members are taught to appreciate the word of Jesus Christ: "I came to cast fire upon the earth; and what do I desire if it is already kindled"?

Our Lord and King has no use for self-complacent piety, that would make the church a hermitage in which to give ourselves up to contemplative mysticism, without applying the attainments practically in mission work. One of the first promises of God reads, "I will bless thee . . . . ; and be thou a blessing"! This makes emphatically clear what we get the Lord's blessing for. The Jews did not understand this. They wanted to be blessed, but they did not want to be a blessing to others; and the wrath of God came upon them. This will be the fate of any church that will only foster a self-complacent piety, without being active in missions, foremost and primarily in HOME MISSIONS.

But even home mission work in the limits of the church only can and will lead to schisms and dissentions. Therefore it is essential that the churches should be bound together by home mission work. There must be home mission workers to visit the different churches of a Conference, and they should be trained and brought under a special guidance of the Holy Spirit by intercessory prayer of the church.

But, as I see it, it is not sufficient to have home mission workers work only throughout the churches within the Conference, or in the different churches of one particular denomination. Home mission work should be interdenominaitonal, and if we could have — what, alas, we have not, — an efficient interdenominational home mission work in action, then the harshness of the differences between the Christian denominations would be smoothed, and relations would become more friendly. The Spirit of Unity would increase, and at the end of the road stands the promise of our Lord: "There will be one flock and one shepherd."

The home mission field begins in the family circle, expands over the church and the conferences, over the different branches of a denomination, and finally over the whole church of Jesus Christ. That vast field is not yet covered by the activities of the present day Christian churches.

Twofold is the commission of home missions. They have to purify conditions at home and make the home church a sound base for foreign missions. Further, they have to work for the unity of churches, conferences, denominations and Christianity as a whole.

A home mission worker therefore must be broadminded. He must be able to understand the single suffering soul with whom the Lord will bring him in contact, — and he must be able to see the whole kingdom of God in which these souls exist and develop, and to help that they may be built as living stones in the whole structure of the kingdom.

The home mission worker must be able to organize the members of his own denomination into solid and strong organizations, where such organizations are not in existence. He must know what his congregation stands for, what his own conceptions are, and why he stands by them. But he must never forget that he is not the only child of God on earth, that he is not the only honest searcher for truth,—that there are among those of a different opinion—people who are as devoted to God and as honest in their search for truth as He is. He must never forget that he is in the field not to stir up theological and dogmatical strife, but to work for peace and unity.

Being broadminded and tolerant toward differing conceptions he must be deeply rooted in the essential truth of the Gospel. There can and there must be unity between Christians of different denominations, but there cannot and must not be unity and compromising between believers and unbelievers. I am deeply convinced of the fact that the present diversions of the Christian church very shortly will be replaced by a diversion between sincerity and falsehood: between those whose lives are governed by the Word of God, and those who think to be the masters of the Word of God, entitled not to have their lives criticized and corrected by that Word, but to criticize and correct the Scriptures by their own authority. Who gives himself to home mission work must understand that there are very many false ways that lead nowhere,—but that there is but one way that leads to perfection, satisfaction, peace and blessedness. Christ says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no one cometh unto the Father, but by me."

Our churches should become real home mission churches in order to present the King's business and to be a strategic base for the conquest of the earth for the Kingdom of God.

Keep the home fires burning! Support your home mission workers praying for them, and, after all, love your neighbor as yourselves, that the great day of the one flock and the one shepherd may come!

BROTHERHOOD TOPIC—OCTOBER 1935

AIM— Awake Definite Personal Responsibility in the Conference Budget

Scripture Passages:
1 Cor. 16:2; Luke 16:10-13

The Brotherhood has a definite responsibility to the local church and the Eastern District Conference to see that the activities of the conference are fully understood by the members of the congregation. We want to see the conference advance in the cause of Christ, and therefore we must keep posted on its efforts and help carry out the actions taken at the sessions by our elected representatives.

The conference through its Home Mission Committee (therefore a part of our own church) agrees to do a certain work during the year. If we fail in our part, then we hinder the work. The members of the committee are anxious to carry on, but sometimes we thoughtlessly hinder them by our apparent lack of interest, often times due to lack of knowledge.

This year your representatives instructed the Home Mission Committee to do the following work:

Assist in spreading the Gospel by contributions and supervision of the work at the following places:

Germantown	$300.00	or $25.00 a month
Mechanics Grove	480.00	or 40.00 a month (Part sup.)
Napier	480.00	or 40.00 a month
Bowmansville	480.00	or 40.00 a month
Perkasie	50.00

It was decided that the committee should be permitted to spend $110.00 in supervising the work and for the expense. Making a total of $1900.00 for the year, or $158.34 a month.

The Home for the Aged has been feeling the depression as much or more than some of the rest. In the past they have been able to operate the Home without the direct aid of Conference. The last several years this has not been possible and they (the Board of Managers) feel that they must have some definite support through the budget. Your delegates to conference have authorized the including of an item of $2,000 in the budget for their assistance. We have a definite privilege in assisting in caring for the older folks that have reached the time in their life when they are entitled to a rest and freedom from worry and care.

For the expense of carrying on this work, look over the reports that appear in the various conference minutes. It will give a good idea of the cost of the work. It is well worth the amount spent. We must recall that the guests at the Home are not young people, able to do a lot of the work themselves, but rather they have reached the age when they need attention and care. The cost of caring for these folks for the last year did not exceed $1.00 per day per person. And this included food, medical attention, room, and supervision.

Naturally there is a certain expense in operating the conference during the year, such as printing of the minutes or reports, handling of records, postage, arranging for the Quarterly Ministerial and Deacons Meetings and other expenses for traveling on business of the conference. The budget includes a total of $200.00 for this.

The total of the budget for 1935 and 1936 totals $4100.00, or $341.66 a month. This amount is required to carry on the work which your representatives have approved and does not in any way represent unnecessary expense, nor can we consider it a personal responsibility solely of theirs. It is ours, and we must do our part in raising it so that we can do our part in carrying forward the work to which the conference is dedicated in the spreading of the Gospel.

The treasurer always reports the fact that the most of the churches hold their contributions until the later part of the year. This seriously handicaps the work as the expenses are spread out through the year. What can we do to help get this money in more quickly or at least on the monthly basis. Conference needs $341.66 a month to meet its obligations in the proper manner. This figures about 11c a month a member.

What can we do about the condition?

1. Post ourselves on the activities of Conference by a careful study of the reports and be in a position to answer questions that are asked.

2. By making our contributions to the Church Treasurer, so that he may pass them along quickly.

3. By making it a point to explain the work of the conference to every member of the congregation. Not only through an every-member campaign, but by personal contacts on our own part as the opportunity arises.

4. By assisting the pastor in presenting the facts of the budget.

5. By having the Brotherhood pledge themselves to see that the matter is not forgotten by the people.

General Conference Retreaters, Camp Fire Bowl
Camp La Verne, California, August 12-17, 1935

REPORT OF THE FIRST GENERAL CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE'S RETREAT

Held at Camp La Verne, Following the General Conference at Upland

The theme of the Young Peoples' Retreat was, "Who knoweth whether thou art not come to the kingdom for such a time as this." Esther 4:14.

In the Bible study classes, Rev. Kreider chose the theme, "A word from the prophets for such a time as this." Through these studies we were shown that God does not call all men into His service in the same manner.

Missions "for such a time as this" was the class taught by Miss Martha Burkhalter of India. She introduced us to the trail-blazingmissionaries of other denominations as well as of our own. Miss Loretta Lehman and Miss Aganetha Fast each gave brief messages from their respective fields. After the discussion, "Do missions pay," we all felt sure that "the little we do is much if God is in it."

"Being a Mennonite in such a time as this," was a course we all enjoyed and profited by. I am sure all retreaters will join me in thanking God for our forefathers who stood true to the faith once delivered to the saints, and since we know more about the work of our own Conference, we want to go forth in the strength of the Lord, for the God of our fathers is ever at our side.

During the Sunset Vesper Hour when Dr. Langenwalter spoke to us on "The personal walk with God in such a time as this," he brought out the fact that our lives are the only gospel most people read. Can others see Jesus in me, in you?

Our Campfire services were very impressive, for God was very near, speaking to all of us, calling us to yield ourselves unto Him, or as Dr. Hubbard told us, presenting all the keys of our lives to Him.

The conference hymn was carried on into the retreat program and was sung at nearly all the class gatherings, admonishing us to "Seek that beautiful stream" in such a time as this.

Luella Kliewer, Los Angeles.

We, who attended the retreat, have again descended to the lowlands, carrying with us the treasured memory of the blessed experience which we wish to share with those we contact in word as well as in our lives.

It is difficult to describe the radiance of the sky; the grandeur of the mighty trees pointing heavenward, and all the other beauties of the place which formed the setting for the retreat.

We were greatly inspired by the "oldest young man" in attendance. Of four score and three years, Rev. van der Smissen not only gave us valuable information in church history, but also proved to be a speedy hiker, a swift rower, a good instructor in swimming, an excellent entertainer, in short, a real sport in all phases of camp life, and a mountain peak in spiritual growth. Rev. P. R. Schroeder, whose stay was short, was greatly handicapped in his discussion by the pounding of rain on the tin roof, but we caught the spirit in spite of the hindrance. Rev. Kreider led us into a deeper understanding of the prophets, and Dr. Langenwalter touched our soul as he spoke to us while we watched the setting sun disappear beyond the distant mountain top.

We are grateful to Dr. Hubbard, Rev. Plenert, and Miss Emma Ruth for inspiring us to a greater life of service and consecration. A very outstanding feature of this retreat was the presence of a number of our missionaries now on furlough, namely, Rev. Boehr, Miss Fast, and Miss Sprunger of China; Miss Burkhalter and Miss Lehman of India. How their enthusiasm, companionship, and sincerity warmed our hearts! We express our deep appreciation to these and also to Rev. Eitzen, chairman; Aron Jantzen, director; and many others behind the scene, who, with the help of God have helped to make the gathering possible.

Martha Dyck, Los Angeles.

Rev. Kreider in his Bible Study course made it very plain to us that a devotional study of the Bible is an important part of the life of every Christian. We have several rules to guide us and help us in making a real study of God's Word, namely:

1. Go to a quiet place where you may be alone.
2. Pray the Lord of truth to send forth His light.
3. Read a book, if possible, at a time. Read slowly, thoughtfully.
4. Read until you are impressed with some truth. Meditate.
5. Pray. For light, for guidance, for the revelation of divine truth. Phil. 4:6.

A short study of some of the prophets was taken up by the group. A prophet is one who speaks for God. He speaks the mind, thought, heart, will, and purpose of God. He speaks concerning both the present and the future. Amos had a rich, personal experience and was well equipped to boldly and courageously speak of God's dealings in justice and righteousness in a very sinful age. God is righteousness and demands judgment. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. Hosea was the prophet of love, and he emphasizes the fact that whatever may be God's dealing with man, it is always in love and mercy. We must believe in the power of love. Love can win where all else fails — love will overcome all. Jesus said, "Love and pray for your enemies." He did not use force, but always answered in love, even on the cross. The cross was victory, not death. God's love never fails (Hos. 6:3). Jeremiah lived in a time when man was indifferent to God. He stood alone against his people, against the king, against the priests and false prophets, alone in a time of great strife, proclaiming the will of God for His wayward people. There are occasions when we, too, must stand alone and we can endure as Jeremiah did because the law and will of God are written on our hearts— that is heart religion, that is what God does for us.

Pauline Krehbiel, Donnellson, Iowa.

All who attended the Missions course showed a real interest and derived a large amount of help as well as information. Several of the missionaries from the various fields were present and told of their work and labor of love for the Master.

We studied of early missionaries up to the nineteenth century and then took up the work of our own fields. We noticed that after the Reformation, the Protestant faith and teaching came into practice.

Several definitions of our missions were given. "The Church of Jesus Christ on her knees in prayer." "The effort of God to reveal Himself to a lost world through Jesus Christ."

In the closing session, the prospective missionaries were reminded of the cost of mission work. In the tropical countries the health is often in danger, and even life may be endangered by the presence of wild animals and poisonous insects. The fact that missionaries must often be separated from their own children and from loved ones constitutes as real sacrifice. The importance of knowing various trades is urged for those who are contemplating work in the foreign fields.

Prayer is the great need in mission work today. Leonard Wiebe, Upland, Calif.

"Being a Mennonite in such a time as this." This all-important course proved much too short for most of us.

Because of Rev. Jantzen's absence, it was our privilege to have three speakers lead us in this discussion. Rev. Schroeder reviewed with us the seventeen branches of Mennonites, and called our attention to the things that stand out as points of differentiation.

Rev. van der Smissen, who is well qualified for the task, in his own inimitable way took us back through centuries of time and gave thrilling high lights of Mennonite history, thus helping us to realize anew what a noble heritage is ours.

Rev. Langenwalter, in the closing session of this class, gave us a most inspiring talk on what it means to be a Mennonite in these days of many denominations, and fired us all with a greater zeal and enthusiasm for the faith of our fathers and for things Mennonite. May we today contend for the faith in the spirit of our forebears.

Because of the important place music holds in the life of the church, an hour was given each morning to the study of hymnology and song leading, under the able direction of Miss Emma Ruth of Reedley. In spite of the fact that four hours is inadequate time to make accomplished song leaders of us, we each felt a little better versed in the rudiments of this important art.

Hymns, songs, and choruses were used abundantly throughout the retreat, and who is there who loves the Lord and does not appreciate the blessing in the fellowship of sacred song.

Marie Lichti, Upland.

With the days full of the good things out of the Word of God, out of the hearts and experiences of His servants, and of personal Bible Study, there was also opportunity for all manner of recreational activity. Great was the joy of those who could find pleasure in swimming and rowing at Jenks Lake, as the boats were released to the retreaters at no extra expense. On asking, we were told that the lake had a depth of forty feet.

Mention must be made of the way all took part in the group games, which were held in the lodge, when weather did not permit any outdoor activity.

Two teams were organized in soft ball and volley ball. Some preferred the less strenuous sports of ping-pong and pitching horse shoes. These recreational periods were greatly enjoyed by all, and I believe each of us also benefited by them.

Clyde Schumacher, Pandora, Ohio.

HISTORICAL SURVEY OF MISSION WORK AMONG THE NORTH CHEYENNES IN MONTANA

(By A. Habegger, Busby, Montana)

Seventy-five years ago the Lutherans were sending missionaries to do mission work among the Cheyennes then encamped along the Platte River, near the present Casper, Wyoming. Their work was short lived, as the Indians were too restless, and were resenting the encroachments of the white men on their hunting grounds. Three Cheyenne youths went with these missionaries when they left. Two of these are buried in St. Louis, Mo., the third is said to have married, but never returned to his people.

Fifty years ago, after a reservation was set aside for the North Cheyenne, the Catholics established their mission on the Tongue River, near Ashland, Montana, and have ever since then had a mission school there. First the Jesuits were in charge with the help of Ursuline nuns, however, in 1925 the Franciscan-Capuchian priests took the work over and since then have built chapels in all the different districts.

About 35 years ago, Rev. R. Petter, then stationed at Cantonment, Oklahoma, among the South Cheyennes, made his second visit to the Cheyennes in Montana, and looked over the Reservation for a place where mission work might be established. In 1904, Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Linscheid began work at Busby, building a chapel and dwelling house. This log chapel was later destroyed by a cyclone (1914) and replaced by a frame structure. In 1905 a log house was built for a helper at Busby, Montana, and Miss Agnes Williams assisted the Linscheids for a year. Magpie, a Christian Cheyenne from Oklahoma, helped for two years. In 1908, Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Kliewer came to assist at Busby and work at Lame Deer at weekends. So Rev. Kliewer supervised the building of a log church at Lame Deer in 1908, which is still standing. Lame Deer is the Agency, and more people live in this place than in any other district.

In 1911, Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Wiebe came to Lame Deer and built a dwelling house. In the meantime the Kliewers had moved to Birney in 1910, and built there a mission station, but helping the Wiebes in their new work from time to time. In 1913, Rev. and Mrs. H. T. Neufelt came to Busby to assist there and to work in the Muddy District. When Wiebes had to leave in 1915, on account of the failing health of Rev. Wiebe, Neufeldts moved to Lame Deer for a short stay.

At this time our churches in the Busby, Lame Deer, and Birney districts were the only missions among the Cheyennes in these places, while the Catholics had the Ashland district. Indians living in this Ashland district having friends in the other districts, got in touch with our missionaries, especially with Rev. Kliewer and asked him to hold services there and offered him their dance hall for meeting purposes. That is how in 1915 meetings were held there until 1917 a chapel was built for them, and Ashland became an outstation, worked from Birney till 1921, also part time from Lame Deer.

In 1916, Rev. R. Petter and his wife, Bertha E. Kinsinger Petter, came to Lame Deer and the Neufeldts moved to Fonda, Okla. The Petters have worked at Lame Deer ever since then, and he has there done much of his translation and printing work with native and other help. In 1918, Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger came to Busby, assisting there and then substituting for the Linscheids while they took a few months' furlough. The next year they served at Birney while the Kliewers were on furlough. In 1920 the Linscheids moved to Cantonment, Oklahoma, and Habeggers returned to Busby.

When Kliewers came back in the summer of 1920, they rented a house in Ashland, and during the following winter Miss June Brookover, a schoolmate of Mrs. Petter, lived at the Birney station. The chapel at Ashland was moved across the river to its present location and a dwelling house built by the Kliewers.

Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Wiebe came in 1921 to take the Birney station, but again the climate proved too severe and they had to leave again, after staying a little over a year. In 1923, Rev. and Mrs. Otto B. Pankratz came to take the Birney station, staying until the summer of 1926, and since then the Birney station has been worked from Lame Deer, as an outstation. Frank Littlewolf is the native helper, who makes trips to Birney at week-ends.

When Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Kliewer left the Ashland field in 1924, in the fall of that year Rev. and Mrs. Valdo Petter came to take up the work there. At first they did not wish to assume full responsibility, as Rev. Petter was not well, suffering from a nervous disorder caused by the World War in which he served as a noncombatant in the medical corps. On May 6, 1935, Rev. Valdo Petter passed away, having served in this field for 10½ years. Mrs. Valdo Petter is planning to carry on the work with the help of her brother, Edward Rohrman from Detroit, Mich., until further plans can be made.

In 1926, while Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger were on a year's furlough, Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Schlink substituted for them at Busby. In April 1927, it was necessary for Rev. R. Petter to undergo a serious operation, so Rev. A. Habegger was called to care for the Lame Deer station for some six months, until Rev. Petter could return, in the fall of 1927. The Schlinks kindly consented to stay at Busby until Petters could come back, and thus all the stations were being cared for during this trying time.

Rev. Valdo Petter and family did not have any furlough during their 10½ years of service, but were about to take a year off when he suddenly took sick and passed away. At the same time Rev. and Mrs. R. Petter were granted a furlough to make it possible to visit his old home and relatives in Switzerland and France, whom he had not seen since coming to this country, in 1890. They were on their journey across the Atlantic when Rev. R. Petter's son, Valdo, passed away at Ashland on May 6, 1935.

During the absence of Rev. and Mrs. Rodolphe Petter from Lame Deer, the services are in charge of the native helpers, Milton Whiteman and Ernest King. Rev. Habegger of Busby helps out in times of special calls, such as funerals, etc. The Petters are to return to Lame Deer the first part of August.

All the workers who have served in the Montana mission field are still living with the exception of Valdo Petter. God has been generous throughout all these years to sustain the workers and to help them do His work among the Cheyenne.

PEACE IN CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

(Mr. Peter Vos, Chicago, Illinois)

"And one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all? And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment, and the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thy self. There is none other commandment greater than these." Mark 12:28-31.

These words were uttered nineteen centuries ago by a comparatively inconspicuous, Jewish idealist. His influence has been so tremendous that today Christianity in one form or another embraces approximately thirty-seven per cent of the adherents to the world's living religions. It is quite certain, however, that this same group has not totally embraced the ideals of its noble namesake, for had they, the world would not be facing its present dilemna.

The ideals of brotherly love and non-violence are not peculiar to Christianity, for as far back as 1375 B. C., Akhnaton, father of the illustrious Tutankamen, established a City of the Horizon with many features suggestive of similar utopian ambitions. About eight centuries later Cautama, the Buddha, preached his principle of purity, renunciation, harmlessness, and non-violence. "Overcome anger by love; overcome evil with good; meanness with a gift; and a liar with the truth." And we call this heathenism!

Contemporary with Buddha were Confucius and Lao-Tse, who both advocated "non-action" and deprecated violence. An even more extreme pacifist was Mo Ti. He believed that "the will of heaven is love of all" and deemed all men truly brothers, so that the ruling principle of action should be "equal love of all."

There is an interesting story told concerning Mo Ti. It happened that a nearby king was planning a devastating conflict with a new device for battering down the walls of cities. When Mo Ti heard this he went to the king's capitol and for ten days and nights he implored the king to cease from his contemplated folly making daring and successful protests. "Before I met you," said the king of Chu, "I wanted to conquer the state of Sung, but since I have seen you, I would not have it if it were given me without resistance." Mo Ti replied, "If so, then it is as if I did already give you the state of Sung. Persist in your righteous cause, O King, and I will give you the world."

But it remained the task of Jesus to proclaim an adequate philosophy of life. He appealed not to the intelligentia of Alexandria or Athens. He gathered about him a handful of menial laborers and taught them the greatest truths of the universe. He appeared at a time when his countrymen were oppressed by the heavy penalties of taxation imposed upon them by a conquering enemy. They longed to free themselves from the heavy militant yoke of Roman oppression.

Accordingly when a leader of supreme spiritual genius did at last arrive, in the person of Jesus of Nazareth, He found His message by no means acceptable to the majority of His countrymen. Jesus had in the highest sense come to fulfill the task of the prophets. They had looked forward to a king who should establish a new and better order of things, but the invisible kingdom Jesus sought to establish was of the spirit alone and had its seat in the soul of every believer. "God is a spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth."

No prophet had dared to push the claims of the spirit to such revolutionary extremes as this young enthusiast from Galilee. He would have been an ideal candidate for the role of patriotic Messiah had He condescended to fill it, but He avoided the least suggestion of turning aside from His spiritual quest to political or nationalistic aims. His mission was one of love, brotherhood, peace. Toward the close of His brief but momentous life He pronounced His final verdict upon methods of violence by refusing the protection of the apostle's proffered sword with these words: "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."

This, then, is the man whom we call Jesus, yea, even Christ. He has been the distant ideal of Christendom for nineteen hundred years, but the intervening time has placed Him into oblivion to all save a few keenly farsighted individuals.

What progress, if any, has been made since the advent of this modest Galilean? From a handful of unlettered men gradually developed, in the process of years, this powerful institution known as the Church. Its influence with the acquisition of wealth became sufficiently great to send armies of men and children to death in so-called crusades against paganism. It even caused earthly potentates to move at its beckoning or to stand barefooted in the mountain snow, doing penance.

The Spanish inquisition is but one of the terrible bloches on civilization, wherein hundreds were tortured or slaughtered.

Let us pass on to our own country, this land which our forefathers proclaimed with such fervent gusto as a land of liberty, justice, and freedom of worship. Especially a land where one could worship as he pleased, and in parentheses, provided he pleased to conform to the prevailing type of worship. The many who were ostracized from communities, tortured, or even burned at the stake for their political or religious views, stand out as a sore thumb in clariont witness to the atrocities committed in this fair land of freedom.

"Life is a burden; bear it,
Life is a duty; dare it,

Though the burden crush you down,
Close your lips and hide your pain.
First the cross,

The World Vision Of Jesus

John 10:16; 12:32

In a day when there is so much confusion in all of our thinking, it is well for us to have a topic like this. There is hardly a realm of life where men are not bemuddled in their thinking. Men are asking whether there is any standard or whether all matters are merely relative. What does Jesus tell us, or was He merely the product of His own times?

Questions

1. Trace the universal element of religion through the Old Testament. Was God the father of Israel or of all nations?
2. Give some evidence that Jesus was interested in all men.
3. What social implications does the world vision of Jesus have for all who call themselves Christian?
4. To what extent did Jesus accept the thought forms of His day?
5. In what aspects did the teachings of Jesus constitute a great contribution for all times?
5. How may we acquire more of the spiritual mindedness of Jesus?

Israel first thought that God had shown Himself to them as an evidence of divine favor, but as time passed the prophets taught that He was to be the Father of all mankind. Israel was favored not in that she was better than other peoples, she was given a religious heritage to share with their neighbors. To be a Christian always must mean to serve and to share.

Many students of religion feel that although Jesus was the divine Son of God, He was also so human that He accepted some of the traditions and thought forms of His own day. But Jesus always stressed the religious aspects. He taught that the Kingdom, although future in its consummation, was for the now and present. God's will should be done here on earth as it is done in heaven. Society should increasingly become a society of loving individuals because men and women had experienced the rebirth. We find no trace of materalistic and nationalistic elements in Jesus' teachings, neither did He promise His followers any vindication over their enemies, but He taught them the Sermon on the Mount. When men were puzzling over the exact hour of the end of the ages, He taught them the hour was near enough at hand to prepare for it, to demand more meant a lack of faith in God who alone knows that hour. Jesus was not a soothsayer, but His greatest contribution lay in His great spiritual insight.

Let us remember, Jesus said, "The kingdom is within you," it is God who does all things, but He can do it only as men cooperate with Him. Are you cooperating with Him?

The Effect Of Alcohol On Body And Mind

Proverbs 23:29-32

The "wets" are trying to make it popular to drink beer and all intoxicating liquors. Judging from the many places where it is sold, from the otherwise respectable girls handing out the stuff, and from the large number of otherwise respectable people imbibing the stuff, they seem to be succeeding. It is high time that the church of the living God bestir herself, study the facts, build up a sentiment against the hellish business, and bring to men sobriety and sanity. Arthur Brisbane, the star editor of the Hearst newspapers, said in an editorial comment: "There is more prohibition power in the Baptist, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches and Sunday Schools than in all the big names in the country. Separate prohibition from religion and it will be as helpless as a small child lost in a great city."

This country can again become dry, and more effectively dry than it ever was just as soon as enough ministers, Christian business men and women want to change the constitution and make the repeal of no effect. We must build from the very bottom up. Too many Mennonites and other Christians buy and sell beer and other spirituous liquors.

Wet Fallacies and Arguments

Everybody who has a good memory or is willing to face facts knows that every argument put forth as a reason for repeal has failed to be true. The Wets have always been liars, they are not concerned with the truth, they are interested only in getting a larger number to buy their wares irrespective of the awful results economically, socially, morally, and spiritually.

Scientific Temperance Facts

The evidence from centuries of actual experience is that ordinary beer and kindred malt liquors are capable of causing drunkenness and its results and often do cause it. The exact alcoholic percentage in beer which would cause drunkenness cannot be determined because the effect of alcohol on individuals varies with individuals and circumstances of drinking. Anyone who doubts that beer can produce a certain form of intoxication need only visit the saloon and watch the beer drinkers in various stages of befuddlement or excitement.

A remarkable collection of testimonies from a large number of distinguished men who had been in the habit of using beer and wine but had discontinued them, show conclusively the harmful effects therefrom. Nearly all of the writers reported that headaches and digestive troubles from which they suffered while using them, had left them. In health of body, in working ability, in endurance of hardships and exposure and in mental disposition all testified to a decided change for the better after discontinuing the moderate use of these mild alcoholic drinks.

Today's laboratory and hospital has made conclusive studies about alcohol and its effects on the human body. They follow the causes and effects of alcohol through the tissues of the healthy body and everywhere they find that alcohol has a depressant effect. It is in a majority of cases used as an escape from worries and anxieties, freedom of restraint of social convention and self criticism. This depressant action on the brain even in the least doses reveals itself in poorer thinking, less sensory acuteness and in delayed and weaker muscular performance. Medical authorities inform us that minimum and permissible doses of alcohol do not exist. Moderation has long been settled by science. The use of narcotics is simply indecent and criminal.

For this meeting procure a well informed speaker and if you desire to use topics choose them fearlessly to suit your problems.

Why Do We Pray?

Ps. 18:1-6; Luke 11:13

"Oh, what peace we often forfeit,
Oh, what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry Everything to God in prayer."

Pre-Prayer
"Lord, teach us to pray."

Jesus is the Christians' example in all things and we should follow in His steps. What a mighty intercessor was Jesus! He continued all night in prevailing prayer. In dark Gethsemane, where He anticipated His approaching sorrow and death, He prayed in earnestness of soul. It was Jesus' custom, in the quietness of the morning hours, to resort to the place of prayer and power. If Jesus, the sinless Son of God, needed to pray, how much greater is our need of prayer. God works mightily in our behalf when we pray. God's power, and guidance, and blessings are available to His children through prayer. Read Matt. 7:7. Today we are to continue the "why" of prayer.

We pray because we are commanded to pray. Prayer is not only a privilege, but also a bounden obligation upon each of God's children. Luke 18:1; I Tim. 2:8. How different many of the lives of God's children would be if they had not neglected prayer!

We pray because it is a privilege. Those who walk daily with the King, those who dwell in the "secret place of the Most High," cherish the privilege of talking with God as one of the greatest of life's blessings.

We pray because of our needs. How needy we are! How great is our dependence upon God! How weak we are; How great is our need of His guidance over life's pathway! We are often times pressed sorely under the crushing burdens of life, and we don't know the way out, which road to take. Our Guide, however, knows, and He is attentive to the faintest call for help from His children. His challenge is found in Jer. 33:3. Even in the apparently trivial things of life we should talk to our Father about them, for He is pleased to have His children confide in Him.

We pray because of the need of others. Each of us, undoubtedly, has unsaved loved ones or friends. We should pray for their conversion. Then, too, there are the sick ones (Jas. 5:13-16); the discouraged ones; the straying ones—all should cause us to give ourselves to intercessory prayer.

We pray "that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." Eph. 6:11, 12. Paul tells us in the following verses what constitutes a Christian's armor, and in the eighteenth verse tells us that to all else we must add prayer.

Besides the example of Jesus, the apostles regarded prayer as the most important business of their lives. Read Acts 6:2-4 and see that they felt that they should give themselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of God's Word.

We should face this searching question from answers separated from the unfavorable. For example, do we pray because we have been taught at home and in church that it is the thing to do? Do we pray because we think it is our duty, that we cannot be Christians without it?

Do we pray because we have promised to do so when we signed the Christian Endeavor pledge or joined the church? Or is it because we want to ask God for something? Do we pray because we have needs?

Are our prayers based on a desire to know God better and to give Him the opportunity to speak to us as we wait before Him? Do we know that a time spent in meditation and prayer gives us poise and self-control, so that we may better do our work? Is prayer a guard against temptation? When we walk in the presence of ungodly persons and temptation is all around us, do we pray in order that we may be kept from indulgence?

Do we summon immediate strength for our tasks through prayer, as, for instance, when we need to be at our best for an examination or a class room recitation?

How Shall We Pray?

Matt. 6:5-15

"In every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God."

Pre-Prayer

"O Lord, send a revival, and begin it right in my own heart."

In the sixth chapter of Matthew, Jesus has taught His disciples how NOT to pray, as well as how to pray. We are NOT to pray as the hypocrites, who "love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men." After this warning word, our Lord then proceeded to teach the "How" of our praying.

We are to pray secretly (Matt. 6:6). It is all right to pray publicly, provided we are not praying to audiences and to be seen and heard of men. The publican prayed in the temple, but he prayed to God and acknowledged his sin, and his prayer was heard.

We are to pray sincerely (Matt. 6:7). Our prayers may be long, or they may be short; they may be uttered privately, or in public; but if we get an audience with God, we must be sincere. When we are living in known and unconfessed sins, we cannot pray acceptably and sincerely.

We are to pray reverently (Matt. 6:9). If we were approaching an earthly ruler with a petition, or request, there would be an attitude of respect and reverence, such as becomes a subject in entering the presence of his sovereign. When sinless angels approach the Heavenly Throne they veil their faces and cry, "Holy, holy, holy"! Should it not behoove sinful man to show proper reverence in coming into God's presence?

We are to pray dependently (Matt. 6:11). All God's children are but pensioners upon His limitless source of supply. In God we live and move and have our being, and He is the Giver of all good.

Is your need small? Then remember that the Father's tender care includes the falling sparrow. Is your need great? Then remember that the silver and gold are His, and the "cattle upon a thousand hills." Is your lack wisdom? Then, plead His promise, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that giveth to all men liberally." Do you need cleansing from sin? Then His promise is, "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Whatever the need may be, O child of God, let your request be known unto God!

Questions

1. What is prayer?
2. When is prayer not prayer?
3. What kind of prayer is pleasing to God?
4. When should we pray?
5. What characteristics constitute a real prayer?
6. What happens to one's life when we neglect prayer?
7. How long should one pray?
8. What would happen if the church really began to pray?
9. What does prayer mean to you?

Helps For Your Prayers

1. Assume the most helpful attitude in prayer. In public congregation the bowed head, the standing posture, closed eyes, or kneeling are all acceptable and may be used effectively. In private prayer the kneeling posture and closed eyes will more nearly shut out detractions.

2. Pray in secret. No matter how much one has of group or public worship, the best results of prayer are not obtained until one is alone with God.

3. Pray in public. The impressions of prayer on others comes when a group of persons holds a common worship service. The spoken prayer is a challenge to one's thinking; to voice petitions in the presence of others is a surety that there is genuine asking, and the orderliness of spoken prayer helps to make clear one's relation to God.

4. Pray in silence, meditation and song. The deepest yearning of the heart often appear in moments of silence or under a great demonstration of nature. Likewise song and poetry often express what the heart desires.

Topic.—Who Sends Out Missionaries?

Romans 10:8-15

Many years ago Jesus said, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son." Not only a few people in Palestine, but all people everywhere. Now many people did not know anything about God and His love, and since He loved them so much He certainly wanted them to know. He had a plan. Before Jesus went back to heaven, He promised that the Holy Spirit would come to live in the hearts of men and teach them. But the Holy Spirit speaks through God's Word, the Bible, so someone must take that to people. Who should go? Some people could work best in one place and some in another. How should they know just where each should be?

Get your Bible and find Acts 13. Notice verse 1. There were many people in one church, while other places had none. If the people had tried to decide who should stay at Antioch and who should go farther, they would surely have made a mistake. But now read verse 2 and see who gave the orders. The Holy Spirit said that Barnabas and Saul should be sent out as missionaries. And what great missionaries they became! The Holy Spirit never makes a mistake. The next verse says that the Christians sent these two men on their way. The Holy Spirit called them and the church sent them. That has always been God's way of getting missionaries out. No one is able to say who shall go except the Holy Spirit Himself.

How does He tell people? He called Peter through a dream, as we read in Acts 10. Sometimes He speaks very quietly to people by just showing them the need in a certain place and making them feel sure that they can never be happy if they do not take the gospel to that place. Sometimes the call comes through a missionary talk, a letter, or advice from friends. Again the Holy Spirit may show one where to go by causing certain things to happen in his life that make the right way seem very plain. Some people have known from the time they were small children that God wanted them for missionaries. He has His own way of letting each of us know what He wants us to do. Our part is·to keep so true to Him that we shall be able to understand His call, then be willing to obey. God has a place for each one and we must let Him tell us if that place is at home or away.

After He has called, the church must do its part as the Antioch church did. Each boy and girl may help there. Missionaries must have food and clothing, and it is the people of the churches who must take care of that. You have perhaps heard the saying, "Some can go, most can give, all can pray." Prayer helps, oh, so much, and every Christian can and should pray.

Plans for the Meeting

This is the second of four missionary topics to be studied on consecutive Sundays. Enlist the aid of your missionary committee in planning these meetings. Use missionary songs and readings in addition to the usual discussion of the topic.

Questions

1. How do we know that God wants missionaries to go out?
2. By whom are missionaries called?
3. How are they called?
4. What is our part in sending them out?

Topic.—What Missionary Work Is Needed In Our Own Country?

Acts 4:12; Phil. 2:5-11

We often hear America spoken of as a Christian nation, but is it? Our lesson text today says in speaking of Christ, "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Since there are many more people even in this land who do not believe in Christ than who do, we know that there is a great deal of missionary work to do right here. Did you know that there are many boys and girls near us who have never heard of their need of Christ? Some one says, "Well, they could hear if they wanted to. Why send them missionaries"? Because they don't know that they should hear , and we must tell them.

Let me tell you about some of the people in Chicago who need missionaries. I suppose other large cities are much the same.

In a city like this, there are a great many people who have come from other lands and some of them can not understand our language. They need someone to go to them and tell them of Christ in the language that they can understand. Missionaries have missions or churches for these people where they tell them that Jesus loves them. There are a great many Jews in some parts of the city and only a very few of them know Christ. The rest, like many Jews in Jesus' time, will not believe that He is God's Son and they are still waiting for a Savior to come. They are very hard people to preach to because most of them do not want to hear, but missionaries go to them and some are saved. After being saved, they are very eager to tell others.

Then, in some parts of the city people are so very poor that they can not dress well enough to feel at home in a church. Missionaries have gone to them. They not only help them to know of Christ, but teach them to care for their bodies and their homes. There are many men in the city who have no homes or who have left them and who have no money and no work. It makes one sad to see them, but we are glad that missonaries go to them, too. Very many have been saved and now have happy homes. Some of them have become missionaries to other men who are poor and sad.

Missionaries are needed to visit in hospitals, too. We know of people who are glad that they had to be sent to a hospital, for it was there that some missionary told them of Christ. And we must not forget jails. Did you know that missionaries go there, too? Really there are so many places that one can not name them all. And in all of these places missionaries are needed.

But the city is not the only place in America that needs missionaries. People who have been in the mountains in the South tell us there are many there who have never heard of Christ. Then in other parts of America there are country places where for miles and miles there is not a single church. Someone has said that there are 10,000 villages without churches. Missionaries have gone to many such places, but think how many more are needed. Then we must not forget the Indians in the West and the negroes in the South, many of whom are glad to become Christians when the missionary goes to them.

As I write, I wonder about your own neighborhood. We are sometimes surprised to find how little some people near us know about Christ. I hope that when you grow older some of you will be missionaries in the city, the mountains, the country or perhaps to the negroes or Indians, but why wait until then? Won't you start by being a missionary now, right in your own school among your friends? We want always to remember people in other lands who need missionaries, but let us not get so busy looking far away that we shall forget the need here.

Plans for the Meeting

The Junior topics do not often offer the opportunity given today for studying the need in our own land. He should try to present facts that will grip the minds of the Juniors and linger with them. Letters from home missionaries would be of great interest. Try to have a few adults visit your meeting and tell briefly of different lines of missionary work needed here.

Questions

1. Why are missionaries needed in our country?
2. What is the work of a missionary?
3. How do missionaries help the sick?
4. What do they do for the poor?
5. Why are hospitals and jails good places for missionaries to work?

BLUFFTON COLLEGE NOTES

Bluffton College began its new school year September 10. Among the most noticeable facts and impressions to be observed are an increased enrollment, a fine and promising student body, an unusual spirit of enthusiasm among students and faculty, and a general determination on the part of all to make this an exceptionally satisfactory year for all on the campus. The field workers and the administration have worked hard during the summer to lay the foundation for a successful school year, and all the evidence thus far seems to indicate that they were successful above expectations. At this writing, when the enrollment is not yet completed, there are reported to have enrolled 170 full-time college students, 10 part time college students, and 11 conservatory students. There are still others who are known to come for late registration; so it is certain that this number of students will show some further increase.

Thus far there is an increase of from twenty to twenty-five per cent of regular college students over the enrollment for the first semester last year. There are sixteen denominations represented of which there are 80 Mennonites or 44 per cent of the total number of students. This is a considerable increase in the number of Mennonite students. Among the States sending students, Ohio naturally ranks first, but Illinois and Pennsylvania with thirteen students each and Indiana with nine show an increase in enrollment. The senior class, too, is larger, having 34 members.

While the above is only a partial analysis of as yet incomplete figures, the trends in student attendance are encouraging. On the campus some new policies, whose aims are to make the college more efficient, are being put into practice. More students are being used in place of paid workers in the administration activities and in the dining hall. Rigid economy is practiced wherever possible in order that the college might be run on as low a budget as good work and efficiency may warrant.

Very few changes have been made in the faculty. Mr. Winfield Fretz will continue as field manager for the year and Miss Erma Ramseyer has taken over the duties of the Dean of Women. She will also have a share in developing a wider social and recreational program for the students. President Rosenberger is offering good constructive leadership as he assumes full charge of the affairs of the college. The faculty, too, seems determined to work as a unit to make the Christian program and the work of the college in general what it can and ought to be. Thus with the prayerful support and sympathetic help of the churches this school year should be one of special blessings to all connected with the institution.

Isaiah Portrays the Suffering Servant

Lesson Text.—Isa. 53:1-12

Golden Text. — "With his stripes we are healed." Isa. 53:5.

This quarter's Sunday School lessons are taken from Hebrew history from the time of 628 B. C., the reign of Josiah, through the downfall and captivity of Judah in 586 B. C., through the restoration of Israel under Persian rule to the time of 400 B. C. Our first lesson is from Isaiah 53. There are two things of interest and importance in this lesson. First, the time of the writing, and second, the message of Isaiah 53. As far as Isaiah the prophet is concerned he lived in the days of Jeroboam II and Uzziah, or in other words, from 750 B. C. to about 680 B. C. Northern Israel was still a nation when he preached. Isaiah lived through the time of the downfall of Israel in 721 B. C., taken into captivity by the Assyrians. He lived in the days of Hezekiah whose trusted adviser he was through stormy political days. But not all of the chapters of the book of Isaiah are his authorship. The book of Isaiah, as are many of the books of the Old Testament, is a compilation of material written at different times. The Book of Isaiah divides itself into two parts, Isa. 1-39 and Isa. 40-66. The second section deals with Hebrew history during the captivity and the restoration. This can be proved by the reader himself if he reads carefully the references to Jerusalem, the temple, and the history of the Hebrews. So Isa. 53, our lesson, describes the experiences of Judah in captivity. The Babylonians came in 597 B. C. and took into captivity the outstanding young men of Judah, such as Daniel and Ezekiel, and took them to Babylonia in captivity. In 586 B. C. the kingdom of Judah came to an end. The Hebrews were scattered. A large part of them remained in Judah, but were disorganized and without leadership. Another large group was taken to Egypt, where you have the beginning of that Hebrew colony which by 250 B. C. numbered almost a million. Then you have the third group, the smallest but the most active, taken to Babylonia into captivity. Great changes came about in Hebrew life during the captivity. There developed a distinct Judaism which based its hopes not in a temple of political organization, but in its law. The synagogue arose to be a school and a church in which the Law should be read and taught. The Hebrews became the people of a book rather than people of a land and political organization. These Hebrews in Babylonia took different attitudes towards their living in a strange land. There were those who became so interested in the good farming land of Babylonia that they settled down in Babylonia to stay and intermarried with Babylonians and lost their identity. There were others who preferred to stay in Babylonia, but who kept the Hebrew faith. These are the ones who were largely responsible for financing the expeditions to Palestine in the Restoration. Then there were those who never felt at home in Babylon and longed to get back to Jerusalem and rebuild the temple and establish a nation. One of the questions which came to the minds of the faithful in captivity was, "Why were we taken captive? Why do we need to suffer"? The Hebrews had always looked upon suffering as punishment for sin. The author of Isaiah 53 teaches that suffering is not punishment, but is for discipline. It is for the purpose of purifying the remnant of Judah. This remnant is referred to as the suffering servant of Jehovah. The experiences recorded in this chapter are the experiences of a faithful servant whose suffering made them more loyal and faithful. This group is spiritual Israel which is fulfilling the purpose of God for Israel. As we look at this chapter from the viewpoint of a Christian, we are impressed how this description of suffering Israel also applies to Him who came as the highest revelation of God's purpose and was the true spiritual Hebrew. He became the complete fulfillment of the suffering servant of Jehovah both in His life and death on the cross. The world has gained from the Hebrew race its highest conception of God, a conception wrought out by that people through its suffering, and in the sacrificial life and death of Jesus we see the most satisfying interpretation of the description of "the suffering servant of Jehovah."

What did the experience of the captivity do for the Hebrews?

Does the description in Isa. 53 fit the experiences of the Hebrews in Babylonia?

What was the "suffering servant of Jehovah"?

How does Jesus fulfill the description of the suffering servant?

Jeremiah

Lesson Text.—Jeremiah 1:6-10; 26:8-15

Golden Text.—"To whomsoever I shall send thee thou shalt go, and whatsoever I shall command thee thou shalt speak." Jer. 1:7.

Jeremiah was born about 620 B. C., in the evil reign of Manasseh, the son of Hezekiah, king of Judah. He lived in a little town called Anathoth, about an hour's walk north of Jerusalem. His father was a priest and Jeremiah became a priest. He grew up in the atmosphere of persecution of the prophets. Hezekiah is dead; Isaiah is dead; and Manasseh came under the influence of the anti-prophetic party. He killed the prophets of God, established high places for the worship of the hosts of heaven throughout the kingdom of Judah. The temple was neglected and the people worshipped idols instead of the true Jehovah. It is in such a situation that Jeremiah received his call to be a prophet. It was five years before Josiah carried on his great religious reform. It was Jeremiah who encouraged Josiah to carry on the reform. One of the interesting things in the life of the prophet is his call. Each prophet received his call in a unique way. To Moses the call came at the burning bush; to Isaiah in the temple; to Ezekiel by the river Chebar; and to Jeremiah it came when he was a young man. But in this call of Jeremiah there are three factors of importance. First, he saw God. The Lord spoke to him and said, "Before you were born I sanctified you and called you to be a prophet. A prophet was a spokesman for God and so it was important that they have a clear vision of God. This vision would mean power, courage and deep conviction. In the second place, the prophet in his vision saw himself. Jeremiah was young and diffident, and he said, "Ah, Lord Jehovah! behold I know not how to speak; for I am a child." This does not imply stubbornness or lack of interest, but Jeremiah knew that this call meant attacking evils in high places, antagonizing the masses, and condemning the false leadership. He knew it would be a life of struggle, self-sacrifice, and persecution. In the third place, he saw not only God and himself, but he saw the needs of his people. They had been led into idolatry in the reign of Manasseh and they needed to be brought back to the true Jehovah. With this in mind, Jeremiah accepted the challenge and went forth to be the noblest of patriots and the greatest of prophets. For nearly fifty years his personality completely overshadowed kings, other prophets and priests.

What were the conditions in Judah at the time of Jeremiah's call?

Who was Jeremiah?

Why did he hesitate to accept the call?

What contribution did Jeremiah make in his life work?

CORRESPONDENCE

Tiskilwa Mennonite Church, Tiskilwa, Ill. The Sunday School enjoyed its annual picnic at the County Park, August 22. There was no preaching service on August 25, due to the absence of the pastor, who with his family was attending the conference.

Others who attended the conference on Sunday were, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Schertz and Charles, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Springer and family, and Mrs. J. C. Albrecht.

Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Graber and Mrs. Oyer spent Sunday, September 8, with us, bringing two very challenging messages. Their varied programs of sermon, song, crayon work, and slides brought the appeal of their work in the Belgian Congo to us in a forceful way.

Henry Bachman is slowly gaining strength at the Methodist Hospital. Peoria, after submitting to two operations recently.

Francis Bachman has returned to Illinois State University for his sophomore year of school work.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sears has sold her household goods and expects to leave soon to spend the winter with friends in Iowa.

Several of our Sunday School workers have enrolled in the County Leadership Training School at Princeton. The classes meet each Monday night for seven consecutive nights.

JOTTINGS

Freeman College, Freeman, S. D., announces that its enrollment this year is gratifying and really beyond expectation. The present school year presents a special challenge not only to the students, but to the faculty as well. Christian education must help develop Christian leadership, and the world is suffering from the lack of it.

A large audience witnessed the ordination of Rev. S. F. Pannabecker to the Eldership in the First Mennonite Church of Newton, Kansas. Those participating were Revs. J. E. Entz, the pastor; P. P. Wedel; P. H. Richert, secretary of the Mission Board; and A. E. Kreider. Rev. and Mrs. Pannabecker will shortly return to the mission field in China.

A reception was given to Rev. and Mrs. Albert Claassen in the North Church, Freeman, S. D., upon their arrival after General Conference. Rev. Claassen, formerly of Portland, Oregon, has become pastor in Freeman. He was formerly associated with the mission work among the Cheyenne Indians in Oklahoma and later served as pastor of the Los Angeles church.

Miss Aganetha Fast, missionary on furlough, was the guest of the Ebenezer church, Bluffton, Ohio, recently, giving a talk on the work on her field.

Dr. I. W. Bauman of Bluffton College and Prof. Detweiler of the same institution, were recent occupants of the pulpit of the First Church, Bluffton. Rev. A. E. Kreider, the former pastor, is now an instructor in Bethel College, Newton, Kans.

During the past five years the number of farms in this country has increased 8.3 per cent. It has been explained that much of this increase may be accounted for by a return to the land on the part of industrial workers and by the practice of part time farming by workers who hold city jobs on full time or part time and commute from farm to factory. While there has been an increase of farms, the value of farms has shrunk over 30 per cent. It is our observation that many of these commuting workers have little or no interest in churches or religion. What once was a very rare sight, people in rural communities, doing manual labor on Sunday, is not so uncommon now. Many of these part time farmers use Sunday away from the factory as one of their work days on the land.

Our friend, J. P. Habegger of Berne, Indiana, who despite his age, made a lengthy trip by airplane from his home to the state of Washington and return, was entertained in the home of Rev. and Mrs. P. R. Aeschliman in good old Swiss style at Colfax, Washington. Mrs. Aeschliman honored the guest by composing a poem describing his trip and expressing good wishes. The brother, whom the editor met in Seattle and enjoyed an afternoon's delightful chat with him, has been kind enough to forward a copy of the poem for his enjoyment.

Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, pastor of the Eden church, Schwenksville, Pa., with Mrs. Landis, Mrs. Swoyer, and John Fretz, made an extended trip by auto to the General Conference. He reports that they covered 10,280 miles and consumed 752 gallons of gas. On the trip he preached at Mountain Lake, Minn., Odessa, Wash., Los Angeles, Calif., Newton, Kans., and Sommerfield, Ill. He says that every mile of the trip was enjoyed.

The Herald of Holiness prints a quotation from the British Broadcasting Company's ban on jokes about religion. It excludes from the air all references to the Deity, religion in general, churches and clergy. Public personalities must not be ridiculed, there must be no "off color jokes," no reference to immorality, serious illness, or physical deformities, marital infidelities, effeminancy, or drunkenness. — Quite a suggestion to our American type of broadcasting.

The Lutheran News Bulletin calls attention to the fact that out of 15,000,000 farm children under twenty-one years of age, 1,600,000 are virtually pagan today. Rural America is rapidly becoming a great mission field—yet we hear much of the numberless abandoned country churches throughout the country. Include in these figures the number of city children of the same age who are without religious training and the fact becomes both startling and appalling.

The Historical Society of the Franconoa (Pa.) District (Old Mennonite) will hold its fifth annual meeting in the Souderton Meeting House, October 5th. Those participating on the program are Henry Bechtel, of Spring City, Pa., John Lapp of Lansdale, Pa., John C. Wenger of Telford, Pa., Abram Yothers of Deep Run, Pa., D. K. Allebach of Hatfield, Pa., S. F. Coffman of Vineland, Ont. Subjects to be discussed: Conrad Grebel and the Swiss Brethren Movement; The Anabaptists Through the Thirty Years War; Christian Funk; Mennonite Hymnology.

The following notice is called to the attention of the Western District Conference: The Treasury of the Western District Conference has for some time been overdrawn. Our Conference convenes again next October. The Conference sessions always entail certain fixed expenditures. After Conference session we will again have added expense of printing the minutes which expense item usually amounts to $100 or more. During the past Conference year fourteen churches have sent in contributions to the treasury. We ask that those churches that have not yet sent in gifts kindly do so at their early convenience. Money sent for that purpose should be mailed to the treasurer, J. E. Regier, Newton, Kansas.

The Mennonite Hospital Society Concordia, Winnipeg, Manitoba, announces that during the past year the institution has been able to function satisfactorily under God's blessing. However, gifts are still greatly needed. The organization urges that congregations celebrating their Harvest Home Festivals and Mission Festivals would consider remembering this hospital with generous gifts.

DEATHS

Catherine Pelsy Nafziger was born August 5, 1850, at Rhodes, France, and peacefully passed away September 8, 1935, at her home near Goodland, at the age of 84 years, 1 month, and 3 days. She was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Peter Nafziger in 1869, who passed away March 10, 1910. To this union were born the following children: Elizabeth, Julia, and Joseph, at home; Valentine, of Remington; and Rev. Peter D., of Danvers, Illinois. Two daughters, Magdalena and Helen, preceded her in death. She also leaves to mourn her departure, three granddaughters, Vivian, Berniece, and Helene, a large number of relatives, and a host of friends.

She united with the Mennonite church in early youth and remained loyal to the fundamentals of the faith until death. Throughout her suffering her faith and trust in God never wavered. She was always concerned about the welfare of her children, and always glad to have anyone come to visit her, many times desiring the Word of God read, and prayer in her behalf. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord—their works do follow them."

"Servant of God, well done:
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

"Softly and peacefully mother passed away
From earth to heaven, to make her stay;
Long and patiently she awaited His call,
Now in heaven she is waiting for us all."

Funeral services were held from the Zion Mennonite church, Tuesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Aaron Egli and Rev. Val. Strubhar. Burial was made in the Goodland cemetery.

VICTORIOUS CHRISTIANITY

Christianity cannot perish. Its nature is to live and conquer. It came to the world for conquest and redemption. It has had many battles, but never has been defeated.

The old Jewish ceremonial laws and Jerusalem lost their power almost twenty centuries ago, but Christianity has been growing ever since. Nineveh and Babylon and Rome have perished, but Jonah and Daniel and Paul live on in power and influence that will never cease.

The devil is king in the world of evil spirits. Jesus Christ came that He might destroy the works of the devil. He is the Son of God. He is King of kings and Lord of lords.

In old Galilee the devils confessed Christ and feared Him and fled from His presence. In the wilderness alone in single combat, Jesus of Nazareth won decided victory over Satan three times. This was the initial conflict in the dawn of the Christian era.

The prince of darkness sought to sift Peter as wheat and that night, to limited human vision, the case looked very dark, but at Pentecost and in the years that followed, the devil was put to shame and Christ was exalted above all others. The devil in his realm is potent for evil. Christ is omnipotent for good.

Those who become faint-hearted and fear that evil sometimes has won permanent victory have forgotten that God knows how to bring good out of evil and when the evil day is over the wings of righteousness will fly higher than ever.—E. W. C.

IF I HAD PRAYED

Perhaps the day would not have seemed so long,
The skies would not have seemed so gray;
If on my knees in humble prayer, I had begun the day.
Perhaps the fight would not have seemed so hard—
Prepared, I might have faced the fray;
If I had been alone with Him upon my knees, to pray.

Perhaps I might have cheered a broken heart,
Or helped a wand'rer on the way;
If I had asked to be a light to some dark soul today.
I would remember just the pleasant things,
The harsh words that I meant to say,
I would forget, if I had prayed when I began the day.

I think I could have met life's harder trials
With hopeful heart and cheerful smile,
If I had spoken with the Lord just for a little while.
And, if I pray, I find that all goes well,
All care at His dear feet is laid;
My heart is glad, the load is light; because I first have prayed.

EDITORIAL

Those of us who recall the early days of the World War when no one ever thought that it would be only a matter of months before the United States would get into it, recall with what satisfaction the information that wheat had gone to a dollar was received. It had been many years before such a thing had happened and the thoughtless were inclined to hail this advance in the staple commodity as one of the benefits coming to a neutral nation, while the combating people were doing their best to exterminate one another. It was our materialistic interests masquerading as ideals that got us into the war and as materialistic things must be paid for with substantial dollars, we have the prospect of paying and paying for the pleasure of having won the war, until the crack of doom.

It is a singular coincidence that with the outbreak of the war between Italy and Ethiopia wheat again has risen to the dollar point. Perhaps the producer who has experienced two or three crop failures in succession begins to feel that things are again coming his way with the rise of wheat. Unfortunately, when things that people need go up, they are generally out of the hands of the producer and the benefit is gained not by the one whose labor has produced the commodity, but by the one who stands between him and the consumer, reaping an unearned profit. Should the present difficulties continue in Africa, there will be a large market for commodities of various kinds. We wonder how long the law of neutrality which would bar America from selling to the fighting nations will be able to stand out against the great greed of the money makers. And it may not be long before people generally will say, Why be neutral when other nations are making the money we might make? Why keep us out of the markets that the war creates when we need all the business we can rake up? We do not know how America will stand up against temptations to make money out of some one's war, but we do know that yielding to such a temptation got us into the last war and ended by us having to pay for it. —G.

Some days ago nearly a hundred thousand people crowded into an arena, paying nearly a million dollars for the privilege of seeing a negro pommel a white man into helplessness. And this, when there are millions of unemployed persons receiving assistance from the government in order to live and when business is still very near the zero mark. One must surely conclude that there is money somewhere and that it exists in such abundance that men do not hesitate to use it in so-called sport, paying for a few moments of that kind of a thrill an amount of money that would purchase a man a week's good board almost anywhere. Someone remarked, "The American people are willing to pay well for their sports," whereupon another observed, "That shows that the American people are fools." Any sensible person must agree with the latter observation, at least that it applies to a large portion of the population. There is more than a debasing demonstration of the bestial in mankind when so many can find pleasure in such a thing as a prize-fight—it is inhumanly cruel when there can be permitted the waste of so large a sum of money at a time when there is hunger and distress such as this nation never experienced. —G.

Religious papers generally are making much of the 400th anniversary of the printed English Bible which marked the 4th of this month. No one can properly estimate the power and influence the Bible has had upon the world or the English Bible upon the English speaking people of the world. Ours is the language that is spoken by more people than any other language. It is international in that it is the language of several nations. It is, too, the language that has available more channels for the distribution of the Word of God than any other language, press, commerce, education, and religion all have something to do directly or indirectly with the distribution of the Bible. It was the printed Bible that fixed the language of the English speaking people just as in Germany Luther's Bible gave the people of that country a fixed standard of speech and saved them from the numerous dialects that might have been the distruction of the language and so the destruction of the nation.

They tell us that every house has at least one Bible, even though that one may be for show. We hope that every one of our readers has a Bible of his own and that one for continued use. Only Bible reading Christians will be Bible living Christians. No doubt someone treasures mother's Bible. It represents so much because of its association with her and her associations with it. What a blessing the Book was to her! It may be that there is an inscription on the cover that tells that father gave it to her. Here, then, is the secret of the Christian home revealed—a household in which the Bible has a conspicuous part in the lives and experiences of those who make up that home.

The other day we heard the remark: "Who would think that we are so near Christmas"? Of course, thinking of Christmas leads one to think of the joy of gift-giving. How about selecting a Bible for the next gift to your dearest friend? You will find that The Mennonite Book Concern is prepared to offer some choice copies at attractive terms. —G.

WORLD WIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL NEWS

North American Administrative Committee Meeting

The semi-annual meeting of the North American Administrative Committee of the World's Sunday School Association is scheduled to meet in New York on Thursday, September 9th. Dr. Luther A Weigle, Chairman of the World Council of the WSSA, will make his first report at this meeting concerning the very significant visit he made to China during the past winter. Dr. Frank Langford of Toronto will report on the recent meeting of the Board of Managers of the WSSA held in London. Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, General Secretary, will tell of the arrangements being made in Oslo in preparation for the World's Sunday School Convention to be held there next year. A number of additional guests are expected from several of the important fields in which the Association is working, including Rev. Francisco Galvez of Philippine Islands, Rev. A. Ebisawa of Japan, Prof. G. Baez Camargo of Mexico, and Rev. E. C. Lobenstine of China.

CHINA—Resolution adopted by the National Committee for Christian Religious Education in China regarding the visit of Dr. Luther A. Weigle to China—"The members of this enlarged annual meeting of the NCCRE assembled in Kuling desire to place on record their deep sense of gratitude to God for the visit of Dr. Luther A. Weigle during these past months since February, culminating in this present conference. We have appreciated the rare gifts that he has brought to this study of education for service in the church in China; his broad experience of church life, of the work of theological seminaries and of Christian education; his ready grip of the essential problems and quick insight into the needs of China; his open-minded hospitality to suggestions from any quarter; his power of lucid exposition as a preacher and speaker; his single-minded devotion to the work entrusted to him; and not least his persuasive friendliness and infectious humor. We believe that the labors of these six months in collaboration with the Survey Team will mark the beginning of a new period in the history of the church and that the report soon to be published will prove a classic that wil guide our policies for many years to come. We would, therefore, express our warmest thanks to Dr. Weigle himself for all he has done, to his colleagues of Yale University for their ready cooperation in giving him leave of absence, and to the World's Sunday School Association and mission boards in America which have fostered this project from the beginning and helped to make it financially possible."

PREPARATIONS AT OSLO FOR WORLD CONVENTION—Enroute to the meeting of the Board of Managers of the World's Sunday School Association, which was held in London on August 22nd, Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, General Secretary of the WSSA, visited Oslo. He found the local convention committees there busily engaged in preparing for the coming of the Twelfth World's Sunday School Convention which is to be held in Oslo, July 6-12, 1936. The Rt. Rev. Johan Lunde, Bishop Primate of Norway, received Dr. Hopkins, Dr. James Kelly, Dr. S. O. Sigmond and other representatives of the WSSA most cordially. Bishop Lunde is serving as the chairman of the Convention Committee. This World's Sunday School Convention will be the most representative world gathering of Christian forces that has ever been held in Norway. It is moreover the first time that the World's Sunday School Convention has been called to meet in a Lutheran country. To assist Sunday-school workers in visiting Europe in connection with their trip to Oslo a series of post-Convention tours have been arranged with very attractive rates. These tours feature the best fjord scenery of Norway as well as the attractions of the other Scandinavian countries. More extended trips include Germany, Switzerland, Italy, France, and Russia. The opportunity to visit these lands at this critical time in company with well-known religious education leaders is making an unusual appeal to Sunday-school workers. The convention delegation is now forming and early registration is highly desirable.

IRAN—From this remote country, which has long gone by the name of Persia, the WSSA has recently received the following report: "In connection with our two schools for Jewish boys and girls we have a Sunday School with an average attendance of 250 scholars, who are taught by native Hebrew Christian teachers. We also have daily Bible lessons in our schools and we are glad to say that a large number have been influenced for service in the cause of Christianity. Christ as the Savior and Redeemer has changed many lives, who have not kept silence as they wish to share their joys with those who are as yet in sin and far from the Kingdom. We aim to build Christian homes. We know that they will greatly help in the spreading of the light of Christ in Iran. We earnestly hope and pray as the church grows Sunday Schools will be established in every town and thus the fellowship will be a reality.'"

EGYPT—There were fifteen provincial training conferences held last year in Egypt at which six denominations were represented. More than one thousand teachers and two thousand visitors were in attendance. There is growing fellowship with the Orthodox Coptic Church, and the workers of that ancient church are taking much interest in the conferences with a view to improving their plans for the religious training of their children and youth. Street Sunday Schools are increasing rapidly in Egypt. In the Evangelical Churches there are regularly maintained about 200 schools enrolling 3,500 children; in the Coptic Church there are more than 1,500 students in Street Sunday Schools. There are over 120 teacher training classes throughout Egypt.

GREECE—Rev. J. Riggs Brewster, representing the WSSA in Greece, recently visited Patras on the west coast of Greece. At the Metropolitan Cathedral he visited a Cathetic School that proved most interesting. Many mothers were present with their boys and girls listening to the lesson. In this way the Bible lesson is going into many homes in Greece. Mr. Brewster later visited the only school which is attempting to conduct its work on a graded basis. The superintendent is a priest, Father Gervasios, who is very deeply devoted to his task among children. Upon invitation, Mr. Brewster spoke briefly telling about the Sunday-school movement in the United States and about the recent growth of the movement in Greece. All present were very deeply interested in his remarks.

BIBLE LANDS — The Bible Lands Sunday School Union for Christian Education has arranged that the books in the field library at Beirut shall be loaned to the religious education department of the Near East School of Theology. In this way the students may have the advantage of these excellent books for reference. They are also sending lists of the books to religious education workers throughout Syria, Palestine, Iraq (Mesopotamia), and Iran (Persia). The Union has added sixty books to the library sent by the WSSA and this makes quite a considerable library now available for use in western Asia.

BRAZIL—Dr. H. C. Tucker, for more than forty years secretary of the American Bible Society in Brazil and a vice-chairman of the WSSA, has just returned from furlough to Rio de Janeiro. He sends this word which will be of interest to all concerned in the work of religious education in Brazil: "I have never been more deeply impressed with the opportunity and the need of a thoroughly modern and wisely adapted program of religious education in Brazil than at the present time. One outstanding feature of Brazilian life today is the interest in education; and the clamor for a moral basis or the moral element in the program is most pronounced. Now that the Constitution makes provision for religious instruction to be given in public and government schools, the Protestant Christian forces have a great opportunity and a responsibility to set forth the full content of that term, 'Religious Instruction', and to help furnish that spiritual and moral element in the program that many are desiring. Sunday Schools, daily vacation Bible schools, week-day religious instruction, and special courses in mission schools, are our opportunities for getting over the full meaning and teaching of that content of the word, 'Religious Instruction.' I am sure Sr. Anders and his helpers are doing their best; but how we do need more capable men and women at work on the task."

NEW BOOKS ON MEXICO—The Friendship Press, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., is issuing two very excellent books on Mexico—"Around a Mexican Patio," by Ethel L. Smither (cloth $1.00, paper 75c) presents a splendid course for primary children. "Over the Mexican Border" by Mildred Hewitt (cloth $1.00, paper 75c) presents an equally fine course for juniors. Sunday Schools, particularly in North America, that desire to have primary children and junior boys and girls take the proper attitude toward Mexico will do well to make use of these interesting and informing courses. Both books make appreciative references to the Sunday-school work in Mexico which is fostered by the Worlds Sunday School Association.

Truth is beautiful and divine, no matter how humble its origin.—Wayside Pulpit.

THE OFFICIAL CALL FOR THE TWELFTH WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

To the Leaders of Christian Education and the Sunday School Workers in Every Land

Greeting: In the name of the World Counci of the World's Sunday School Association, we the Officers, invite Leaders of Christian education and Sunday School Workers from all Nations to attend the Twelfth Convention of the World's Sunday School Association, to be held in Oslo, Norway, from the sixth to the twelfth day of July, in the year of our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Thirty-six.

The Eleventh Convention of the World's Sunday School Association was held in Rio de Janeiro in the year 1932, and was the first to be held south of the equator. The Twelfth Convention likewise will be the first to be held on Scandinavian soil.

The theme chosen for the Oslo Convention is "Christ the Hope of the World." Surely no more appropriate theme could be found in these days of powerful disruptive forces when the great need is for world unity—a unity which can be finally achieved only through Christ Who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

The Sunday School must have a distinctive share in winning the world to unity in Christ, for it is seeking to win and teach and train the oncoming generation for the Kingdom of God.

To visualize afresh our great task, and gain new inspiration for its pursuit, we bid you welcome to "Oslo 1936," and assure you of the cordial warmth of Norwegian hospitality.

We confidently claim the continued intercessions of all who are interested in the work of Christian education throughout the world on behalf of those on whom shall rest the responsibility of preparing for the convention that they may be divinely guided in all their ways so that all that is planned and achieved may be to the greater glory of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Harold Mackintosh, President
Luther A. Weigle, Chairman
James Kelly, General Secretary
Robert M. Hopkins, General Secretary.

London, England, August 22, 1935.

The Board of Managers of the World's Sunday School Association is issuing the following important announcement: "In view of the critical conditions prevailing in many parts of the world in the work of the Christian education it is the desire of the Board of Managers of the WSSA that the Twelfth World's Sunday School Convention to be held in Oslo, July 6-12, 1936, shall make a very vital contribution to the Christian forces engaged in such service throughout the world. In order that the convention delegation may be formed with this purpose in mind, and also in order that the delegation shall not overtax the very generous arrangements for hospitality which the local committees are making in Oslo to supplement the limited hotel facilities in that city, the Board of Managers requests the British Administrative Committee and the North American Administrative Committee to inform their respective constituencies that all delegates irrespective of the source of their nomination must be officially and individually approved and credentialled by the General Secretaries of the Association before the arrival of the delegates in Oslo. Indeed persons desiring to participate as delegates in the convention sessions and special arrangements made for official delegates cannot be assured of such registration unless their names are received and approved in the Glasgow or New York offices of the Association on or before May 1st, 1936."

PEACE IN CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

(Concluded from last issue.)

What do we find as we turn to the twentieth century? Practically the entire world was submerged in a wholesale slaughter of human life and the desolation of acres and acres of fertile earth and the destruction of millions of dollars in homes, factories, magnificent cathedrals, and priceless works of art. Had Christianity failed? No. In the words of Bernard Shaw, "Christianity has never failed, it has simply never been tried." And how true it is! It is we who have failed in the application of Christ's principles.

War! Just what is war? Most people have only a sentimental idea of what war really is. They think of war in terms of dying men, broken homes, orphans, widows, wasted fields, demolished cities, blood and tears. Yes, war is that and more. Armies, navies, submarines, cannons, bombing planes, and poison gas are the instruments of political organizations, that is, of nations. In his famous definition, Von Clausewitz says, "War is nothing other than the continuation of politics with altered means." "War," he continues, "is under all circumstances not to be thought of as an independent thing, but rather as a political instrument. It is an expanded duel. Each seeks to coerce the other to the fulfillment of his will through physical force."

I believe it could be summed up far more concisely in just three words, "War is sin." This is the conviction expressed by scores of religious assemblies. "We believe that war is sin because it involves (a) the slaughter of human beings, (b) violation of personality, (c) lying propaganda, (d) deliberate breeding of the spirit of hate, (e) vast destruction of property, (f) it puts in the place of moral law the doctrine of military necessity, (g) it distorts the religion of Jesus into the religion of a war god." (The commission on world peace of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.)

It is unfortunate that in this country the burden of the struggle for peace has been almost entirely carried on by religious groups. In Europe and particularly England the labor movement has very closely identified itself with the fight for peace. Since this is the case our burden is made all the more heavy. Here, then, is the opportunity for the youth of the world and especially the Christian Endeavor Society. The most mechanically perfect instruments of warfare are useless without the man power to run them. We are the cannon fodder for the "next war," for it is inconceivable that presidents, kings, and capitalists would take to the field of battle to satisfy their feuds of honor, to amass great fortunes, or even "to make the world safe for democracy."

War is grounded in numerous complex causes the majority of which are probably economic. However, these causes are not static, but are constantly rearranging themselves or multiplying with each new situation. This has been our dilemma. What, then, is our alternative? If war is to be abolished it must be through a method which makes it impossible for nations to fight even though the most potent causes are exerting their maximum force. One of the greatest detriments to the cause of peace has been the willingness of people to fight for their governments. It would be inane for any government to declare war if it knew in advance that the public would not take an active part.

We half-heartedly tried disarmament, but all we really accomplished was the annihilation of a number of obsolete ships which were soon replaced by a larger and more efficient fleet. I would not, however, discourage any plan of disarmament, for if some good can be accomplished by a partial disarmament think what could be done if the nations would totally disarm. Of course, this might put a considerable crimp in the vast fortunes of the Schneiders and the Krupps, but I think they would be adequately taken care of. Even Samuel Insull has had his pension restored.

We have also seen that the signing of an armistice never permanently settled any dispute, but instead intensified the already existing hatred and desire for revenge. The most glaring example was exhibited at the close of our last great expenditure of wealth and humanity. The Treaty of Versailles was one of the most colossal political plunders the world has ever seen. And this plot of extortion was concocted by our expert political scientists! Man has made such tremendous progress (!) in the technique of mass murder that should he again choose to engage in another similar slaughter the ferociousness of it would make the last World War look like a Fourth of July celebration.

Perhaps you are familiar with Jacob Rile's fable of the spider that dropped from the branch of a tree spinning a strong cable behind it. After making an anchorage on either side, it wove its web at the intersection and set up business. The spider had chosen a good location where many succulent flies and moths passed. It soon became fat and prosperous. Then looking up and noting the cable one day, it said, "I don't need that any more," and cut it off. That is only a fable. No spider would be so foolish. It would know that everything depended on that cable. Only man is so foolish as to do a thing like that. He has taxed his ingenuity to the utmost in perfecting more efficient methods of exterminating life and then has turned them on his fellow men.

It was Emerson who said, "A drop of water has the properties of the sea, but it cannot exhibit a storm." If we as a handful of peace loving Christians attempt to act independently of the greater movement for peace, we cannot expect to be much more effective than a drop of water. If, however, we are willing to pool our resources with this larger group of like minded individuals, we may be as powerful as the sea.

As a step toward the realization of this goal we may expand our influence in urging the United States to become a participant member in the League of Nations and the World Court. Let us make every effort to abolish the R. O. T. C. in public High Schools and civilian colleges and universities. We ought also to advocate the establishment of a National Peace Department in the Federal Government. Dr. Albert W. Palmer has written a splendidly concise "Personal Non-invasion Promise" which, if presented to our legislative bodies in sufficient number, would have a very significant influence.

It is briefly this, "Reserving the right of national self-defense by such means as may seem to me wise, effective and Christian, I from now on definitely repudiate all aggressive war. I will cross no national boundary line to kill and destroy, nor will I support my government in sending its army or navy to do so." The particular genius of this statement lies in its all-inclusive nature and at the same time without becoming so vague as to be ineffective.

This in my opinion is the most effective manner of preventing a world catastrophe which another war certainly would be. We as Christian Endeavorers must go on record as absolutely refusing to sanction any future war or participate in warfare as an armed combatant. War is irreconcilable with the way of Christ and we cannot, therefore, give it our support in any shape or form. Circumstances do not alter the guilt of murder and rapine plunder. Why must we go on giving our sanction to such an atrocious practice?

After seventeen years of reflection this is the reaction of one who was caught in the frenzied atmosphere of war propaganda. "I renounce war. I renounce war because of what it does to our own men. I have watched them coming gassed from the front line trenches. I have seen the long, long hospital trains filled with their mutilated bodies. I have heard the cries of the crazed and the prayers of those who wanted to die and could not, and I remember the maimed and ruined men for whom the war is not yet over. I renounce war for what it compels us to do to our enemies, bombing their mothers in villages, starving their children by blockades, laughing over our coffee cups about every damnable thing we have been able to do to them. I renounce war for its consequences, for the lies it lives on and propagates, for the undying hatreds it arouses, for the dictatorships it puts in place of democracy, for the starvation that stalks after it. I renounce war and never again, directly or indirectly, will I sanction or support another"!

Thank God I have been spared that dreadful experience; but if it should come, and the prospects seem ripe, I shall renounce war until all my energies have been spent in the name of the Prince of Peace.

I close with this sonnet by William Loyd Garrison, dedicated to that staunch enthusiast for peace, William Ladd:

"The conquerors of the earth have had their day—
Their fame lies weltering in a bloody shroud;
As Crime and Desolation haste away,
So fade their glory and their triumphs proud.
Great advocate! A fairer wreath is thine,
Base Envy cannot soil, nor Time destroy;
Thou art enlisted in a cause divine,
Which yet shall fill all earth and heaven with joy.
To calm the passions of a hostile world;
To make content and happiness increase;
In every clime to see that flag unfurled,
Long since uplifted by the Prince of Peace;
This is thy soul's desire, thy being's aim,
No barrier can impede, no opposition tame."

OUR PUBLICATION WORK

"Praise ye the Lord. O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever."

"O sing unto the Lord a new song; for he hath done marvelous things."

Such feelings and thoughts welled up in the hearts and minds of the members of the Board of Publication since the days at Upland, California, when the conference treasurer reported that the diamond jubilee fund had reached a sum large enough not only to pay all conference debts, but also to insure a balance of considerable size. And, when on September 14, our treasurer notified us that he had received from the conference treasurer a check for $5800.00 with which to pay our burdensome notes and all debts past due, our minds were filled to overflowing with thoughts of gratitude toward our Heavenly Father who had so moved the hearts of thousands of our brethren and sisters all over the land that they were willing to lay their gifts upon the altar with the desire to wipe out our debts.

While we give God the praise for his wonderful help, I also, in the name of the Board of Publication, do sincerely thank every brother and sister in our Conference who through their contributions and their prayers have aided in the building up of the jubilee fund, also the members of the committee through whose special efforts the enterprise was carried out and brought to a successful end. May our Heavenly Father who is so rich in treasures that do not perish, graciously reward all friends who in one way or another have had a part in making this Jubilee year one of gladness and thanksgiving.

We were further gladdened by the resolutions which the conference passed in support of the work of puplication. They mean so much to our work and to the progress of our conference work in general that they bear repeating over and over. They read:

"Resolved: That the churches be asked to consider the work of publication as a missionary enterprise, and that they take at least one offering annually for the support of this cause.

"Resolved, that since we have our Book Concern and since the profits derived from this established undertaking have for a long time cancelled the deficits incurred by our church papers, we would urge and encourage our congregations, Sunday Schools and other auxiliaries to purchase their supplies through the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana; thus we will be helping ourselves to lift a burden that is weighing heavily on our Publication Board.

"Be it further resolved, that we encourage a renewed effort to put at least one of our church papers into every Mennonite home. It is only when members of a denomination take and read their church papers that they can be led into greater mission, denomination and church mindedness."

Greatly encouraged at being so decisively and strongly backed up by these wholehearted conference resolutions, and filled with gratitude for the relief from threatening debts, we shall with the help of God, earnestly strive to keep out of debt, to carry out the suggestions above, and to do what we can to improve the work intrusted to us. And we are confident that the leaders and the membership of our churches will cooperate with us in our efforts.

With this in mind we have some favors to ask:

Kindly order all supplies for Church, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, such as quarterlies, teachers' helps, charts, cards, books for libraries or for private use, programs, and any other literature through the Mennonite Book Concern.

Our manager is ready and anxious to take care of all your needs, and you may feel assured that he will charge you no more than any other concern, in some instances less, and yet will be able to make a little profit on your orders. And many such little profits put together will eventually amount to a great deal. The complaint comes from our business office at Berne that there are still a good many churches that fail to order their supplies through it. In such cases the profits go to some outsider. That is not cooperation.

In the attempt to put at least one of our church papers into every home in our Conference that does not yet subscribe, we shall try this plan:

We prepare from our subscription lists a separate list for every congregation, with name and address of each subscriber. Then we submit this list to the leader of each respective church, with the request to check it over, correct it where necessary, and then to supply us with a list of names and addresses of those families or parties that do not subscribe. These we shall then gently try to induce to join our company of subscribers and to share the bond of fellowship that binds us together in our missionary, congregational, and conference activities. We feel it to be our duty to do this as a piece of missionary work. There are probably few homes in our conference that do not take their local paper or even some cosmopolitan daily. Isn't the conference paper just as necessary to a Christian family for the sake of Christian fellowship?

The "Bundesbote," due to the economical management of its editor-manager, now holds its own. But it should reach many more homes than it does. The Mennonite has always been hardest on our finances, causing large deficits without ceasing, year after year. We must roll up our sleeves and earnestly try to increase the number of subscribers from 1500 to 2500. Here we need especially the help of the leaders and members of our English speaking churches.

How soon shall we have our own English Sunday School quarterlies which one of the conference resolutions calls for? Not for quite a while. The Board of Education which is to get the material for these quarterlies prepared feel that they need considerable time and thought to do this work, if it is to be worthy of recognition. But if we are not yet to have our own, our two Boards together will recommend to the churches one or two quarterlies, published by other houses, that in their estimation merit our use.

May we trust that the membership of our Conference will continue to remember our Board and the work of Publication in their prayers?

J. R. Thierstein,
Chairman Board of Publication.

ARMISTICE DAY—WHAT RESPONSE?

By the time this appears in the church paper it will be high time to plan definite projects for Armistice Day. True, Armistice Day falls on Monday, November 11th, so the churches can plan for the observance of the occasion either before or after the date. Only let us not permit the occasion to slip past without a proper observance. What will your response be?

The General Conference Peace Committee is anxious to have some well directed response in connection with Armistice Day in every one of our churches. What your response will be may depend largely on you who are reading this notice and the leaders in your church. The committee is herewith submitting a number of suggestions that might be used or adapted to local needs and conditions.

1. Arrange to observe a week as a week of prayer for world peace. War clouds in Europe are indeed dark. Let us take this to the God of Peace, who is a present help in trouble.

2. Form study groups for those who are interested in world affairs from a Christian viewpoint, centering on the Italo-Etheopian dispute as the most serious menace. Try to find out what is the real cause of trouble. Will you try it for three or four meetings?

3. Prepare a Peace Workers library, giving books and magazines that throw light on this question.

4. Devote Sunday evening, November 10, to a Peace Program.

5. Give Peace Readings. Appropriate poems and selections can easily be found. If you want to have one and cannot find any, write and we will gladly help you.

Who should do this? The Christian Endeavor Society may be the logical group to put on these efforts, or it might be the Men's Bible Class or the Brotherhood. Whatever organization, let us make a proper response to Armistice Day, and let Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace, be honored.

Very sincerely, for the Peace Committee,
A. J. Neuenschwander,
Secretary, Quakertown, Penna.

MINUTES OF THE 36th ANNUAL SESSION OF THE PACIFIC CONFERENCE

Held in the First Mennonite Church at Upland, California, August 2nd and 3rd, 1935

The 36th Session of the Conference was called to order by President J. M. Regier at 7:30 P. M. After the singing of hymn No. 154 and the reading of Eph. 2:13-22, the opening prayer was led by J. M. Franz.

After a few words of welcome by Bro. Regier, the choir of the Upland church presented a special selection of music. Following the order of business, the secretary read the minutes of the 35th session, which stood approved as read. The secretary read the delegate certificates that had been presented by the various delegates from their churches.

The following committees were appointed: Nominating committee—J. M. Franz, R. Evy, Mrs. J. E. Kaufman; Auditing Committee—J. H. Ensz, Homer Leisy, Elmer Widmer; Committee on New Churches—H. J. Krehbiel, C. Hege, D. D. Eitzen.

1st. Report of the Evangelization Committee was read by Brother S. S. Baumgartner. A very interesting paper was read by Bro. M. J. Galle on the subject, "Opportunities in the Field of Evangelism in the Pacific District Conference."

2nd. Report of the Treasury, prepared by Bro. John C. Jantz, but in his absence read by Bro. M. J. Galle. Then followed an open discussion on the evangelization work of the conference. Bro. Herbert Widmer reported on the work at Dallas, Oregon. Bro. P. R. Aeschliman reported on the work at Deer Park and Newport, Washington.

Resolution was passed that a committee of three be appointed to prepare some definite resolutions to work on, and present them at the morning session. The following committee was appointed: S. S. Baumgartner, M. J. Galle, J. E. Kaufman.

3rd. Report of the Field Secretary was read by Miss Emma Ruth. Following the reading of this report, Bro. M. J. Galle discussed the question, "How can the work of the field secretory be made more effective"? Resolved, that a committee of three be appointed to prepare resolutions regarding the work of the field secretary. The following committee was appointed by the chair: Miss C. Niswander, Miss Emma Ruth, Elmer Widmer. After arranging the time of the morning session to begin at 9:30, this session was closed with prayer.

Saturday, 9:30, Morning Session

Meeting was opened with the singing of hymn No. 157 and prayer, led by Rev. Mehl. Following the order of business the 4th. Report of the auditing committee was read as follows: We, the Auditing Committee, have checked the treasurer's books and have found them to be correct. J. H. Ensz, secretary. Resolved, that the report of the Auditing Committee be accepted.

5th. Report of the Committee on Recommendations concerning the work of evangelization was read by Bro. M. J. Galle.

Recommendation No. 1. We recommend, that Bro. P. R. Aeschliman continue to give his services to the Newport and Deer Park churches once a month or as often as he is able to arrange.

Resolved, that we adopt Recommendation No. 1.

Recommendation No. 2. We recommend, that the Pacific Conference pay Bro. Herbert Widmer the sum of $30.00 a month for his services at Dallas for one conference year. As to the matter of any changes to be made in their building, since the brethren have proven their ability so splendidly in the past, we trust that the local church can best devise some plan to meet this pressing need for more room.

Resolved, that Recommendation No. 2, concerning the work in Dallas, be adopted.

Recommendation No. 3. As to our work in Portland we find it a splendid opportunity to call upon the help of our ministers and talented laymen. Since the churches at Pratum, Albany, and Dallas, Oregon, are not too far away from this mission station, and since these churches have gifted workers in their membership, we would recommend that the Evangelization Committee with Miss Niswander confer with the three pastors of these named churches to make arrangements for supply preaching, and for all such service, our Evangelization Committee is to be permitted to reimburse the worker the sum of $5.00 a Sunday.

Resolved, that Recommendation No. 3 be adopted.

At a special meeting of the workers of the Pacific Conference, the following resolution was adopted to remunerate the workers who will be called to preach at the Portland mission.

Resolved, that the visiting workers at Portland be remunerated at the rate of $5.00 per trip, plus one cent per mile for the distance beyond 100 miles from Portland.

Recommendation No. 4. It is the practice of nearly all our churches to have occasional Protracted Meetings for the uplift of the church, and for the purpose of winning more followers for our Master. In our conferences we have a number of weaker, widely scattered churches, who in recent years have been unable to secure the services of a minister for such work.

Therefore we recommend, that any church in the Pacific District Conference which intends to hold such meetings may invite a minister of their own choice, from among our conference ministers, to conduct special meetings in that church, which may be of whatever nature the church desires, revival meetings, Bible lectures, or devotional meetings.

The Evangelization Committee will remunerate the minister at the rate of $25.00 a week for not more than two weeks a year, plus traveling expenses, provided the expense is not more than $25.00 a year.

When a church intends to hold such meetings it shall get in touch with the Evangelization Committee of the Conference and obtain its approval. The church is expected to take up a free-will offering, making it as generous as it can, to be sent to the treasurer of the Conference.

Resolved, that Recommendation No. 4 be adopted.

6th. Report of Bethel College representative was read by Bro. L. J. Horsch. The following five recommendations were made in this report by our college representative:

1. That every congregation in this Conference set aside the second Sunday in October as Bethel College Day and that this day be observed annually with appropriate exercises.
2. That every congregation make some provision in its annual budget for the financial needs of Bethel College.
3. That pastors and young people's leaders make strenuous efforts to interest students in Bethel College.
4. That the Conference in its budget make some provision to help defray the expenses incidental to attendance at the sessions of the Board of Directors of Bethel College on the part of the representative of the Conference.
5. That the Conference encourage each congregation to establish a Bethel College Fellowship.

Resolved, that we adopt the report of the Bethel College representative. Resolved, that the fourth recommendation of this report be included in the Conference budget.

7th. Report of the Committee appointed to form resolutions regarding the work of the Field Secretary, was read by Miss Emma Ruth. The following five recommendations were offered:

1. That the plan of financing the projects of the Conference by dividing the required amount into smaller sums and asking organizations and individuals to be responsible for them be continued.
2. That each state make an effort to hold its own Y. P. Retreat. This retreat to be sponsored by the S. S. and C. E. Convention of that state.

3. That we approve a Christian Workers' Conference as suggested by Rev. Galle in connection with the annual Pacific District Conference.

4. That Vacation Bible School and Teachers Training work be encouraged in every church during the coming year.

5. That the field secretary or some one appointed as a substitute be requested to visit the churches during the coming year in the interest of S. S. and C. E. work. This trip to be financed by special offerings in each church to be sent to the Conference Treasury.

Resolved, that these five recommendations be adopted.

Resolved, that in the future a committee of three be appointed to take care of the Conference budget.

Resolved, that we revise the Conference budget of last year that it be appropriate to meet the needs of the coming year.

Resolved, that we appropriate $600.00 for the work of the Portland Mission.

Resolved, that the other items of the budget, for Dallas, Newport, and the work of the Field Secretary remain the same, but with the added amount of $60.00 to defray the traveling expenses of our Bethel College representative.

Resolved, that the Pacific District Conference in session at Upland is agreed that the amount of the permanent fund of the former sanitarium near Upland, which has been taken over by the General Conference at Reedley in 1917 be fixed at an even $20,000.00 and be so interred into the books of the Trustees of the General Conference.

The Committee on New Churches recommended that the First Mennonite Church at Shafter, California, be received into the Conference.

Resolved, that the First Mennonite Church at Shafter, Calif., be accepted into the Conference. Election of Conference officers now followed.

The result of the election is as follows:

President, D. D. Eitzen; Vice President, J. E. Kaufman; Secretary, M. J. Galle; Treasurer, J. C. Jantz; Evangelization Committee, J. M. Regier, 1938; Field Secretary, Emma Ruth; Business Committee, Homer Leisy, 1938, J. H. Ensz, 1936, Lester Hostetter, 1937; Trustees: Elmer Widmer, 1938, Ed. Leisy, 1938.

Resolved, that we unanimously accept the invitation to have the next Conference at Pratum, Oregon.

Resolved, that our 1936 Pacific District Conference meet from Thursday night until Sunday, to be followed by a Workers' Retreat from Monday to Wednesday inclusive.

After the closing prayer by Rev. Albert Claassen and the singing of "Blest be the Tie That Binds," it was resolved that this Conference be adjourned. J. M. Franz, Secretary.

SECOND QUARTERLY MEETING OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Pine Grove Mennonite Church, Bowmansville, Pennsylvania, was the scene for the Second Quarterly Meeting, September 19th. Distance seemed to be no handicap with good roads and willing hearts. The sixty miles one way was something, when many of our churches lie within a radius of twenty miles. Of course, for the Pacific District Conference goers, sixty miles is barely a good start where conference churches are 1000 miles apart!

In the check-up on the programs made by the churches in working out the Conference Resolutions, it was discovered that a good beginning had been made, but that such subjects as Peace, Temperance, and Sabbath Observance need more attention. In the discussion that followed, it was emphasized that church people need to be definitely informed about these threatening issues. Almost half of the year is past, the treasurer reported, but only one-fourth of the budget support has come in. It is hoped that each church will make a sincere effort to send in their offerings, since our mission work must suffer if it is withheld.

The three papers presented, showed alertness, keen analysis, and a grasp of the assignment that was stimulating to those present. Rev. Howard G. Nyce, in his paper, "The Catechetical Problem," took us into the sacred task of laying the foundation stones of faith for our young people. Material and methods were discussed, but the heart of the problem seemed to be, how to make the proper approach and presentation of Jesus Christ as personal Savior to these young people. Rev. Nyce stated it as his conviction that when some of our young people lost vital contact with Christ and the church, that in a large measure the blame ought to be paid to ineffective, poor and hasty catechetical instruction. The Conference agreed that more was necessary to make sure of a real conversion experience than a mere going over of the various subjects in our catechism. Some ministers reported that they have an unhurried conference with each catechumen concerning his soul-salvation before the final rite of baptism is administered.

Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, in "Bible Exposition," showed how the Pauline Epistles: Romans, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, and Colossians, were each written to meet a particular human need. The exposition was conducted with the idea of finding the essentials of salvation in each epistle. Human needs called these epistles forth, Rev. Swartz asserted, they met them then and meet them now, if the reader comes with a sincere desire for the truth.

Avoid hobbies and preach the whole council of God, was the keynote of Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander's paper on "The Homiletic Problem." It was pointed out that a homiletic hobby was a pet theme that is brought into every sermon. While the pet theme may be very good in itself, if presented constantly tends to narrow and limit the range of preaching that is the minister's definite task. To remedy this, the speaker asserted, ministers need to plan their sermon themes ahead and studiously insert into these series of sermons every biblical theme. Delivery is a vital phase of a good sermon, but the thought and motive of a shedding radiance and glory on Jesus Christ is of greater importance. At all times the minister should not permit himself to be in the foreground, but Him in whose name he is laboring.

Mrs. Jacob R. Fretz, president of the Orphan Society, briefly gave the history, development, purpose and plan of the Society. The coming Orphan Society meeting, October 12th, at First Church, Philadelphia, was also announced.

The supper hour at the home of Brother and Sister Musser, will long be remembered as a pleasant occasion when we gathered around the family table and enjoyed the bounties that had been provided. Pine Grove Mennonite Church is not large, but a lively organization is maintained in every phase of church work, by Rev. Raymond V. Stubbs and his willing helpers. The church joined General Conference in 1872. The building is not very large, but the simple dignity of the architecture makes a pleasing impression on every worshiper.

A. J. Neuenschwander, Conference Secretary.

Rosthern, Sask.,
September 24, 1935.

It may be generally known that after so many years of crop failures on account of drouths, our expectations of a good crop this year have again been frustrated in many parts of Canada where our immigrants live, by hail, rust and frost, and many of our people will again be badly in need of help in the way of clothing, etc.

In view of the approaching winter, I would again urgently solicit help in the way of clothing, particularly for our many families who are again this year in need of help.

Trusting that our brethren, who have already so often helped us by their willingness to assist in relieving suffering on account of exposure, I am,

Fraternally yours,
David Toews.

CORRESPONDENCE

Sugar Creek Mennonite Church, Sugar Creek, Ohio. Dear Readers: Greetings! On July 21, our pastor, Rev. Wm. Stauffer, and Miss Esther Baldwin of North Jackson, Ohio, were married by the Rev. Mrs. James D. Wyker, with a large attendance of friends and relatives. The church was the scene of a beautiful and impressive service. The reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Buck. Rev. and Mrs. Stauffer left shortly after the wedding on a tour through the western states, where they attended the General Conference at Upland, California. During Rev. Stuffer's absence the pulpit in our church was supplied by Russel Mast of Walnut Creek, Ohio, a student of Bluffton College.

The former pastor of our church, Rev. Lester Hostetler of Upland, Calif., is here on a visit for a month. The chief purpose of his visit is to harvest the peach crop on his fruit farm. We are glad to have him with us and to have him preach for us.

Ten of our young people attended the retreat at Lake Shipshewanna. They report a week of inspirational work.

The church purchased a parsonage on Maple Street.

Rev. and Mrs. Stauffer are residing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Buchey, where they are comfortably located until the parsonage is ready for occupation.

On Thursday evening, September 19, a large group of friends gave the pastor and his bride a rousing, good old-fashioned serenade. In turn the pastor has invited the serenaders to an ice cream supper, to be held in the church basement on Thursday evening, September 24.

Our Harvest Home services will be held on Sunday, September 29. The morning worship will be in charge of the pastor, Rev. Stauffer. In the afternoon we hope to have neighboring churches furnish us with some special music. The Brethren will furnish a special speaker for the evening service. We hope to have this as a real Rally Day for our church.

On October 13, we will have our fall communion. This will also be an opportunity to unite with the Fellowship of the church. The pastor will be happy to receive names from anyone who knows of people who would like to unite with us.

Beginning on the first day of October, and then every Tuesday evening at eight o'clock promptly, the pastor will conduct a round table Bible Study discussion. Anyone who is interested in a fuller understanding and appreciation of the Holy Scriptures is invited to attend. It will be very important for those attending to be there for the first evening for the introduction and background of the life and letters of the Apostle Paul.

With the passing of the vacation months we again turn our attention more to the activities of the church. We lag during the summer months and then start with a new life in the fall. We trust that our church as well as others may be blessed with a decided upturn.

Mrs. Homer Schrock, Corr.

Butterfield, Minnesota, September 30, 1935. To the Editor and Readers of the Mennonite and Christian Evangel: The time has come again when we are supposed to give a report of our church doings. We are again at the fall of the year where our Lord has blessed us with our bodily needs, has given us a good crop, and all we need. To Him be all praise! The Lord has blessed us in our spiritual needs also. We had the opportunity during the last three months to have missionaries with us. July 7, Mission and Children's Day were observed. Rev. J. Bartel from Mountain Lake spoke on home mission and missionaries J. R. Derksen from India and W. Bartel on foreign mission. In the afternoon the children gave the program, after which Mrs. Derksen spoke very interestingly to young and old. A lunch was served afterwards.

July 14, we partook of the Lord's Supper. Rev. J. Bartel had charge of it all.

July 21, missionary W. Bartel spoke in the morning. It was of great interest to listen and hear about the heathen.

July 28, missionary Kathryn Dick from Africa gave an interesting talk about her work.

August 8, Mrs. R. J. Friesen underwent an operation at the Mountain Lake Bethel hospital. We are glad to state that she is improving.

About the middle of August we had our relatives, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Linscheid and family from Arlington, Kansas, visiting us, which we enjoyed very much.

August 21, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Linscheid and family from California arrived here and intend to make their home here on their father's farm. We are more than pleased to have them in our midst after an absence of eight years.

August 25, Rev. D. G. Dick spoke in the morning, and missionary J. Dester from India spoke in the afternoon. Mrs. Dester showed us a number of articles which were made by the heathen.

September 1, Rev. J. Bartel gave a report of the General Conference which he attended in California. It was of great interest to listen to him and we are very thankful to him. Rev. Bartel was our delegate to the conference.

Rev. J. Stoesz from Mountain Lake filled the pulpit on September 13, in the morning in the German language.

A few times this summer no one offered to have the Ladies' Aid, so we came together in church, had our services and paid our dues, and had no lunch. We were very much blessed, and it seems it works fine.

Our sister, Amalia Rupp, who fell about three years ago, is very poorly. She has suffered very much these years, and now she seems to be worn out. May our dear Lord help her to keep faith to the end and some day to live where no pain will be any more, is our wish and prayer. Mrs. Gust. Miller, Corr.

The Effect Of Alcohol On Society

Isaiah 28:1-8

In the discussion of last week we considered the effect of alcohol on the body, now today we will discuss its evil effects upon society. This topic should be discussed from angles social, moral, and religious.

Questions

1. Has Repeal removed the evils of alcoholism?
2. What is the relation of drink and crime?
3. What is the relation of drink to poverty?
4. What does the saloon and drink do to our youth?
5. What will drink do to the manhood and womanhood of our land?
5. Why should the church of Jesus Christ be concerned about the liquor menace?
7. What can young people do to cure our land of alcoholism?
8. Why do otherwise sane men favor the continued repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment?

Some Facts Concerning Prohibition and Repeal

In a recent high school questionnaire of 1000 high school students, 923 believed that moderate drinking would injure their chances to succeed in business, and 739 thought that it would hurt their chances of success in business.

At the time of the Repeal, Dr. E. W. Hunt, President of Bucknell University, said: "Conditions here at this institution are several hundred per cent better than they were ten years ago."

Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army said in the days of Prohibition: "The children were ragged and emaciated representatives of a condition that has ended. Eighty per cent of the suffering of the families of the common laborers of our cities was wiped out by prohibition."

Kathleen Norris, one of our popular authors, has this to say: "Alcohol is the greatest single evil in the world. Poverty, crime, slums, squalor, cruelty, hunger, want, prisons, almshouses, and insane asylums are all supported by it. Without it all these things would be quickly reduced to controlable proportions and would disappear. A world without alcohol would soon be a world almost without suffering."

"At Adolph Stein's saloon the room was filled with a noisy crowd until 4:00 in the morning, and at the Blue Light Cafe the bartender was busy at 1:30 filling orders for a hotel upstairs and a public wine room in the rear."

What Christ Means To Me

(A Testimony Meeting.) Philippians 3:7-11

It is a psychological fact that we do not truly possess any truth until we have expressed it. A faith kept to one's self soon becomes a dying faith. We have too often robbed ourselves by keeping quiet when we had the opportunity of speaking a word for our Lord. The editor of this department feels that the greatest need of the Christian church is a deeply evangelistic faith founded on the ever seeking self-giving Savior Jesus Christ, who came as the supreme gift of an all-loving but righteous, sin-hating heavenly Father.

Paul was at one time in his life an avowed enemy of Jesus and the cross, but after his Damascus conversion he was willing to pass through all manner of persecution and hardships for his Master, and when he meditated on what Christ meant to him he went into ecstasies, turned on the organ with full power, pulled out all the stops, and there came forth a riotous music which has thrilled thousands of Christian souls.

We need the Christ of experience, it is a privilege to see what He has done for us. Did ever a God give himself as our God gave Himself through Jesus Christ? He showed us how to live by word and by example, and He gives us the power to live the abundant life. This comes to us as a gift, for it is by grace that we are saved, it is a matter of faith, when we see Him on cruel Calvary and know that He is counting on us, and desires to work through us, we being the vessel through whom He works, then we can understand that we are "the sons of God and it doth not yet appear what we shall be." Yes, Jesus is all the world to me." Is He to you? If not, why not accept Him now?

In planning for this service you might use a number of warm evangelical hymns, and the exposition of a few of the ecstatic outbursts of Paul and his faith. The greater part of the hour should be spent in everybody giving a testimony of their faith in their Lord and Master.

What Wars Do In The World

(Armistice Day)—Isaiah 13:6, 7, 17-22

Perhaps not for a decade has Armistice Day been filled with meaning as it is this year with war threatening in all quarters. We as Mennonites do well to consider the basic reason why we oppose war. It is not merely a sentiment but is rooted deep in the spirit, life, and gospel of Jesus Christ. War is not limited to the nations involved, but the whole world and all peoples are effected thereby.

Questions

1. What are some of the reasons why nations go to war?
2. What are some of the evil results of war?
3. In case of another world war, what should be the attitude of Christians when called to service?
4. Why are some men eager to answer the call to war?
5. What methods of war propaganda are used to make war popular?
6. What does Jesus teach about peace and war?
7. What are the implications of non-resistance?
8. What good, if any, ever comes from war?
9. What can young people do to rid the world of war?

Rom. 1:1-16

The first seven verses of our lesson text form the salutation of Paul's letter to the Romans. Verse 1 states the writer; verse 2, the gospel to which he has been separated; verses 3 and 4, the person to whom that Gospel testifies; verse 5, the particular service to which the writer has been called; and verse 6, 7, the people to whom this message is now sent.

Verses 8-15 are called the thanksgiving verses. Observe that for which thanksgiving is offered, verse 8, and how that the thanksgiving is mingled with prayer, verse 9. A special petition in this prayer is indicated, verse 10, and the object of that petition, verse 11. The modesty of the great apostle is beautifully illustrated in verse 12, the reason for his delay in visiting them, verse 13, and the obligation he feels toward them, verses 14, 15.

The theme on Paul's mission is found in the sixteenth verse. Why is he not "ashamed of the gospel of Christ"? "It is the power of God unto salvation."

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

Pre-Prayer

Request: Pray, just now, a silent prayer, for our brothers and sisters in Mexico and Russia.

Most of the countries of the world are tolerant of all religious faith. There are two notable exceptions to this rule, Russia and Mexico. Russia has as her goal the extirpation of every remaining house of prayer in the land by 1937. This anti-God movement is spreading rapidly to other countries. Mexico is now in the midst of a religious war, and this anti-religious movement of that country affects, not only the Roman Catholic church, but the missionary efforts of all denominations.

Mexico is predominantly a Roman Catholic country. Ninety-five percent of church goers in Mexico are of that faith. The Catholic church has been for so long a controlling organization that it has built up vast wealth and power. The church has controlled education, and its leaders have become rich, while the people became poor.

Protestant missions have struggled for freedom from ignorance, superstition, and church denomination, and have made remarkable headway during the years.

The blow of the anti-religious movement is falling heaviest upon the Catholic Church, and the rulers are determined to disestablish that church and drive its clergy from the country. No religious teaching is allowed, and the Bible is excluded from all the schools. All church properties have been "Federalized" by the Mexican government and the Mexican flag is now flying on the steeples of Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Catholic, and other churches.

In the United States, 500 Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish ministers have signed a statement giving "moral support to those who labor for freedom of worship in Mexico." Nine-tenths of those signing represent 26 Protestant and 3 Jewish denominations in 41 States and Canada. Because such a large percent of church goers in Mexico are of Catholic faith, the Protestants and Jews are asked to take the initiative in a plea for religious freedom in Mexico.

Questions

1. Can a nation endure long without God?
2. Has history proved that they can or cannot endure? Give illustrations.
3. What is our greatest sin here in America?
4. Would I want to live in a Godless nation?
5. Is it true that when a church has been increased in riches and worldly wisdom, she has correspondingly decreased in spiritual power and piety?

What Is The Harm Of Drinking,

Prov. 23:29-32 (Consecration Meeting)

Drink is American Enemy No. 1

"Abstain from all appearance of evil."
I Thess. 5:22

Pre-Prayer

Ask God to help you to abstain from all evil and that you may remain true to Him.

To spend money for drink is to waste it. It is a bad bargain to spend even five cents for strong drink, because the purchaser always gets cheated. It is a poison to the body.

Liquor is a habit forming drug. The steady drinker soon becomes an unsteady drinker.

To drink is to offer one's personality. There is an impairment of one's mental powers, a slowing down of nervous response, a tendency to clumsiness, and, as one loses control of oneself, to talkativeness, staggering, nausea, and sleep.

The man who drinks a little, drinks too much Water quenches thirst; alcohol creates thirst.

To advertise the liquor traffic you never see an exhibit marked, "Before and after taking.'

It is unchristian socially because it does not take into account its effect on others.

What Great Men Have Said

"I am a total abstainer from alcoholic liquors I always felt I had a better use for my head.' —Edison.

"There is no cottage in this city humble enough to escape it—no palace strong enough to shut it out. It defies the law when it cannot coerce suffrage. It is the mortal enemy of peace and order; the despoiler of men, the terror of women, the cloud that shadows the faces of children. It can profit no man. It can uplift no industry, revive no interest, remedy no wrong. It comes to destroy."—Henry W. Grady, great editor, journalist, and statesman.

"My success depends upon my brain being steady. No one can take alcoholic liquors without blunting these physical powers, which I must keep always in edge. As a surgeon I must not drink."—Dr. Lorenz.

What God Says—

"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness." Hab. 2:15. Also read Prov. 20:1; 23:20, 21; Eph. 5:18; I Pet. 2:11, 12; Isa. 5:11, 22; Rom. 14:21; Isa. 28:7; Dan. 1:8, 12, 15.

One has written, "I have known unborn babes to be cursed through booze; little children to starve because of booze; young people to be stunted for life through booze; gifted women to become imbeciles through booze; leaders in industry to become beggars in the street through booze; wedding rings to be sold for booze; fortunes to be squandered for booze; girls to become outcasts through booze; boys to become criminals through booze; women to be hanged because of booze; men to go to the electric chair because of booze. Therefore, I am against booze." So say we all!

An exchange says, alcohol will remove stains from summer clothes. That is correct. It will also remove:

The winter, spring and fall clothes not only from the back of the man who drinks it, but from his wife and children as well. — Alcohol will remove: Furniture, rugs, and food from the home, lining from the stomach, liver from the side, hair from the head, and sight from the eyes. — Alcohol will remove a good reputation, a man's business, a man's friends, a happy look from the children's faces, a prosperous man to a pauper's grave, a man from respectable society to the penitentiary, and man from the highway to heaven to the road to hell.

As a remover of things alcohol has no equal!

What Did Jesus Mean By, "Love Your Enemies"?

Prov. 24:17, 18; Exod. 23: 4, 5

(Armistice Day)

"Bless them which persecute you: bless and curse not."

Pre-Prayer

Pray that this love may abide in our hearts.

A little girl attended regularly the preaching service of her father, who was the pastor of the church. He was a bit confused in his belief, and in an effort to get around certain teachings of the Bible, he, in expounding the Scriptures, offered endless explanations, which greatly bewildered the little girl. Finally, she could stand it no longer. Climbing, one day, into her father's lap, she said, "Father, if God didn't mean what He has so plainly said in the Bible, why didn't He say what He meant"? There was no answer to the little philosopher's reasoning.

When Jesus said, "Love your enemies," He meant exactly, and literally, what He said.

Hatred of your neighbors of other nationalities is foreign to the teaching and practices of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Suppose God was as slow in forgiving our sins as we are in forgiving others. Suppose God forgave us as imperfectly and half-heartedly as we forgive others. If there is ill-will in our hearts toward anyone it would be hollow mockery for us to utter the petition which Jesus has taught us to pray, "Forgive as we forgive"! How quick are even God's people to defend their rights, so-called, and be resentful of every slight, which is often more imaginary than real. How unlike Jesus is this attitude! He never defended Himself! He never gave like for like! He never retaliated!

David Lloyd George, former Prime Minister in England, said: "The supreme task of the rising generation is the abolition of war. Youth must substitute organized justice for organized violence. We old fellows were brought up in a world that regarded armaments with occasional wars as a part of the grim essentials of human civilization. The most horrible, the most devastating, and the greatest war will yet have to come unless youth tears the idea from the heart of civilization."

The best possibility of doing away with war comes through a widespread stand of individuals to apply the Christian principle of love to all situations. The time to "love your enemies" is before they are your enemies; the time to prevent war is in times of peace. The spread of international friendship and brotherhood, the renunciation of violence, the promotion of deeds of honor and justice between nations, and the progress of missionary work—all these are in the direction of peace.

Questions

1. What is the only solvent of human hatred?
2. Is it true that even God's people are slow to forgive and love those who may have wronged them?
3. If we do not forgive and love those who wrong us, are we true Christians?
4. Is it true that we often times take Jesus teachings, which are plain, and make explanations to fit our case or excuse ourselves?
5. If we "love our enemies" does that mean we must, beside loving, be willing to help him? Rom. 12:20.
6. Do we speak highly of our enemies or do we always speak evil of them? Read Matt. 5:43, 44; Rom. 12:14, 17; I Pet. 2:23; Luke 23:34; Ps. 18:48.

Topic.—Today's Call From Other Lands

Acts 16:9, 10

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark 16:15.

"The field is the world." Matt. 13:38.

"Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest."' John 4:35.

Jesus spoke these words many years ago. Would He say the same today? We know He would. There are still people in all parts of the world who are not saved and we know that Christ loves them as He loved all the people of the world so long ago.

Some time later, when Paul was a missionary, Christ told him by the Holy Spirit that he must go far away to those who had not heard. You may have heard of the time when Paul was on one of his journeys expecting to preach in certain places and the Holy Spirit would not let him. Then one night he had a vision. He saw a man from a country farther on saying, "Come over into Macedonia, and help us"! Paul knew that the Lord had sent this message and quickly made ready to go. Many people were saved because Paul obeyed.

We often hear missionaries today speak of the Macedonian call. They are thinking of this call that came to Paul and want so much to have us see that people in other countries are still calling for missionaries. The natives have little or no joy in their old life. A man in a far-away land one day went to a heathen priest to confess his sin and find how he could get rid of it. The priest told him to drive nails into the soles of his shoes and walk five hundred miles. How his feet did hurt! After going some distance he had to sit down to rest. As he sat there, he heard a missionary telling about Christ and how he could forgive sin. The poor man threw his shoes far away and gladly gave his heart to Jesus.

The call for missionaries comes from many lands. First let us think of Africa. There are missionaries in this country, but large places have not been reached. We hear so much of sickness and sadness there. Some of the people are afraid of white missionaries because of cruel workmen who have been there, but they soon find that the missionary loves them and has come to help them.

When we hear of China, we think of its millions of people, so crowded that some live in boats. While some of China's people are very poor and do not have schools, others have money and education. Missionaries are in danger because of bandits, yet China is calling for help and many, both poor and rich, have come to love our Savior.

You have all heard of India, another land to which missionaries have gone, but where more are needed. Then there are Japan, Russia, and the islands. To be sure, the Russian leaders do not want God, but there are people there who do and we should pray for the Christians there that they may be real missionaries.

Coming nearer home, we think of our neighbor, South America. For some reason, we do not hear so much of that. Is it because it is so near? They do need missionaries there badly. They need to get the Bible and to hear of Christ who saves all who believe on Him.

Ask God to show you just what He wants you to do. It isn't too early to begin to get ready by studying His Word and learning of those who need Him.

Plans for the Meeting

For this meeting you will want either a globe or a map of the world. Interest the Juniors in as many needy fields as possible, telling a story concerning each field that they may see something of the need and the power of the gospel in those lands. Instead of the usual questions, assign a country to each of several Juniors, asking that they get missionary information concerning that country.

Topic.—Interesting Facts About The Bible

Psa. 119:105; John 21:24, 25

(Consecration Meeting)

While riding in a street car this afternoon, a stranger handed me a tract with these words at the top. "Why and How You Should Read the Bible." As I read the tract, I thought of our subject and said to myself, "Here is one interesting fact about the Bible." There is no other book so important that people everywhere tell of it in this way. Here is the first item on the tract, "The Bible is the message of God to man." Do you know that in the Bible itself we are told over 3000 times that it is God's word?

Here are more interesting facts: 1. The truths of the Bible are so simple that any of us can understand enough to be saved, yet there is so much there to think about that the wisest of men have not grasped all. 2. We tire of most books after reading them a few times, but the more we read the Bible the better we like it. 3. It has just the right message for everybody. From the time it was written, rich and poor, educated and ignorant, old and young could find what they needed in the book. 4. There are no mistakes there. We may think there are when we read only a few verses or do not read carefully, but those who know God and let Him help to understand, know the Book is true. 5. It tells all we need to know about heaven and how to get there. 6. It tells the awfulness of hell and how to avoid it. 7. The Bible is a whole library in itself. It contains books of history, books of poetry, books of prophecy and biography. 8. Verses in the Bible compare it with many other things. It is a lamp (Psa. 119:105), a seed (I Pet. 1:23), a fire and a hammer (Jer. 23:29), food (I Pet. 2:2), a sword (Eph. 6:17), water for washing (Eph. 5:26). 9. There are far more copies of the Bible sold each year than of any other book and no other book has been translated into so many languages. 10. It contains unusual promises, made by One who keeps His word.

"The Word of God is what we need;
To it at once we should give heed;
It shows us as we really are;
It cleanses by its mighty power.

"It feeds our souls and lights our way;
It tells us when we go astray;
It washes us and keeps us clean;
It's pure, and it has always been."
—Poem Selected.

Plans for the Meeting

Of course this will be a real Bible meeting. In addition to the study already suggested, take time to have the Juniors turn to some interesting verses and chapters. The longest verse, Esther 8:9; shortest verse, John 11:35; four verses alike, Psa. 107:8, 15. 21, 31; two chapters almost alike, 2 Kings 19 and Isa. 37, the middle verse, Psa. 118:8; verse containing the whole alphabet (excepting one letter) Ezra 7:21; longest chapter, Psa. 119; shortest chapter, Psa. 117.

Questions

1. Why are so many people interested in the Bible?
2. How do we know that it is God's Word?
3. How is the Bible a lamp? A sword? A hammer?
4. Why do Christains never tire of it?
5. Why is the Bible especially interesting to you?

Topic.—Why Christians Are Trying To Get Rid of War.—Psa. 79:1-3; 120:6, 7

Tomorrow we celebrate the day when the terrible World War ended. War is so cruel that we hate to think of it, but there are so many reminders that we can't forget. It would be bad enough if it ended when peace was declared, but it doesn't. Even you who were not here during the war have seen enough of the results during the depression and we have not finished paying for it yet. If we were likely to forget, a visit to one of the many hospitals for sick and wounded soldiers would again remind us that war is cruel. Many men who came home alive are still in hospitals or crippled or sick that they can never enjoy life again. Others who are well enough to be in their own homes have been left with weak bodies.

We are told in Jas. 4:1, 2 that wars come because of sin. Although the Bible warns us that there will be wars, Christians know that war is wrong and we hate it. We are looking forward to the time when Christ shall come as King, then there will be peace. Until that time we should be busy telling people of Christ who brings peace into the hearts of those who believe, also of the wrong of war and the sin that causes it.

Plans for the Meeting

In studying this lesson, use the Bible verses that tell of the wrong of taking life. Boys and girls should see sin and cruelty, not glory in war.

Questions

1. How are people today suffering from the World War?
2. Why do wars come?
3. Why do you hate war?
4. Why should Christians not go to war?
5. When will there be no more war?

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

Rev. Wm. B. Weaver, Danvers, Illinois

Later Prophets and Leaders of Judah

October 20, 1935

The Message Of Jeremiah

Lesson Text.—Jeremiah 7:1-11, 21-23

Golden Text.—Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people. Jeremiah 7:23.

In our last Sunday's lesson we studied the call of the great prophet Jeremiah. In this lesson we study the message he gave to his people. Jeremiah began to preach five years before the reforms of Josiah were inaugurated. The Scythians were overrunning Europe and were threatening to come south and east to Palestine. The people of Judah were vassal to Assyria and were living in idolatry and immorality. Jeremiah from his home in Anathoth rebuked Judah for her sins and warned them of the danger of the Scythians. Josiah then became king and the notable reforms began which abolished idolatry. During this time Jeremiah is silent, but moves to Jerusalem where he will be better able to study the political and religious condition of Judah. Josiah was killed in 608 B. C., where he with his poorly trained army tried to check Egypt from coming north. At Josiah's death the king of Egypt put Jehoiakin on the throne of Judah. Again the religious abuses which Josiah had abolished returned. In this critical period Jeremiah began to preach again and delivered his "temple sermons," from which our lesson is taken. He foretells the destruction of the temple and of Jerusalem because of the wickedness of the people, but they ridicule him and declare that Jerusalem can not be taken. Isaiah had taught earlier that because Jerusalem was the city of Jehovah, it could not be taken and the people believed the city was safe forever. Jeremiah is commanded to stand at the gate of the temple and proclaim the truth, that if the people will not turn from their idolatrous ways their city will be destroyed. He says, "You people trust in lying words saying the temple is of the Lord and cannot be destroyed. The people are substituting a past creed for active obedience to Jehovah. But Jeremiah's message was to no avail. His sermons were literally cut to pieces by the king, he has a trial in which the friends of Jeremiah acquit him, but later he is scourged and put in the stocks, so passers-by can ridicule him. Of all the prophets Jeremiah was the most persecuted. He was of all prophets the truest forerunner of Christ. There is one emphasis in Jeremiah's teaching which is very important. Up to his time the Hebrews had emphasized the nation rather than the individual. The family was the smallest unit. The people believed God's eternal purpose was for the nation as a whole. Now the nation is on the verge of collapse, and Jeremiah begins to emphasize personal fellowship with God. As the state was on the verge of shipwreck, he found God within the soul of the individual. Although the nation may be destroyed and the temple go to ruins, the individual can still worship God.

This emphasis was of tremendous importance during the captivity when all national and political hopes were at a low ebb. This individual emphasis is one of the outstanding truths of Christianity.

Where did Jeremiah get his message?

What to your mind is the central truth of his message?

Belshazzar's Feast

Lesson Text.—Daniel 5:17-28

Golden Text. — Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. Proverb 20:1.

The feast of Belshazzar is set in an historical situation that needs interpretation. In the first place this scripture is taken from the book of Daniel. This book was written in the second century before Christ during the awful persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, Syrian king of the Jews. The first part of the book relates incidents in the history of the Hebrews where men like the three in the furnace and Daniel stood firm and remained true in spite of persecution. So also is this incident which we are to study. The author of Daniel relates an incident that occurred when the Babylonian empire went to pieces and the Medes and Persians gained control.

Belshazzar, the son of Nabonidus the king, and undoubtedly prince regent, made a banquet to his lords and generals and officials of his kingdom. At this banquet they used the sacred vessels that had been brought from Jerusalem and the temple when the Jews were taken into captivity. The author relates it because Antiochus Epiphanes had also been very sacriligious and had used the sacred things in the temple for secular use. At this banquet, while they were feasting and drinking, a mystic hand appeared and wrote on the wall. None of them could read it and so the queen suggested they call Daniel. Daniel came and interpreted the writing on the wall which announced the downfall of the Babylonian empire and the victory of the Medes and Persians.

Of course, in the mind of the author of the book of Daniel this incident revealed two things: first that Jehovah will punish people who profane or make secular that which has been consecrated for spiritual uses. In the second place that God is still alive and is interested in His people, and that He will bring judgment on those who harm God's people. Our scripture also makes clear the fact that pride always leads to destruction.

Who is Belshazzar?

How would this incident encourage the Hebrews who were under severe persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes?

What are some of the outstanding works of pride in a life?

Judah Taken Captive

Lesson Text.—II Kings 25:1-12

Golden Text.—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people. Proverbs 14:34.

We have now through character study traced the history of God's people from Abraham to the time of the captivity. We noticed how their history began with Abraham's family, then increased to Jacob's clan, and finally in Egypt they developed into a large tribe although in bondage. Moses led them out of bondage in Egypt and brought them to Mount Sinai where the law was given and the nation of Israel born. Joshua led them into Palestine where the process of conquest and unification went on under the Judges. Finally Israel became a kingdom with its Promised Land, Palestine, and its ruler a king. The united kingdom had three rulers, Saul, David, and Solomon. At the death of Solomon the kingdom divided into Israel of the north with ten tribes, and Judah of the south with two tribes. These two kingdoms existed side by side from 937 B. C. until 721 B. C.

In 721 B. C., the Assyrians destroyed Israel of the north and took many of the people into captivity. These lost ten tribes of Israel are really lost and were absorbed by the heathen nations. The kingdom of Judah continued until 597 B. C., when Babylonia came and carried off into captivity the choice young princes of Judah, among whom were Daniel and Ezekiel. Then in 586 B. C. the Babylonians came again, completely destroying Jerusalem and the temple, thus ending Judah as a nation politically. This is what we mean by the captivity. Here in the captivity the Hebrew nation becomes Judaism. The emphasis is now not on a land, or a temple, or political state, but upon a people of the Law. Here the synagogue arose to teach the law and the scribes became the writers and interpreters of the Law.

The Babylonian captivity which seemed to be a defeat for the Hebrews, became one of the most fruitful periods of their history. Most of the Old Testament was written and compiled here. Some of the results of the captivity were: First, it spiritualized their worship, brought about a higher conception of God, and gave a new idea of the possibilities of Israel's service to the world. It stimulated literary activity, and gave the Hebrews a Bible.

What are the causes of Judah's downfall?

Was it a hindrance or a help in carrying out God's purpose for them?

What are some of the results of the captivity?

The Word of God is both regenerating and illuminating. If there are things about your life that need correcting, go to the Word of God for the corrections.—H. L.

I esteem the Gospels to be thoroughly genuine; for there shines forth from them the reflected splendor of a sublimity proceeding from the person of Jesus Christ of so divine a kind as only the divine could have manifested upon earth.—Johann von Goethe.

JOTTINGS

The First Church, Philadelphia, celebrated its Seventieth Anniversary, October 6 to 13. There were meetings every evening during the week. Dr. J. E. Hartzler was the speaker at all of the meetings. Neighboring churches and churches of the Eastern District Conference were invited to participate.

The annual meeting of the Orphan Society of the East District Conference has been called for October 12 in the First Church, Philadelphia. This is in connection with the anniversary celebration. Dr. Hartzler is the speaker.

At the Sunday School Convention of the Eastern District Conference the following officers were elected: President, Jacob Solt, Allentown; Vice President, Norman Bergey, Schwenksville; Secretary, Margaret Stover, Philadelphia.

After visiting the General Conference and churches in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Kansas, Miss Frieda Sprunger, missionary to the China field, returned to her home in Berne, Indiana.

The Bluffton News gives an account of the translation of a rare old Hebrew manuscript by Prof. J. Quiring, who for years was a member of the Bluffton College faculty. The priceless document is expected to shed some light on the times preceding the time of John the Baptist. It was salvaged from the limbe of forgotten manuscripts and has been the subject of study by Prof. Quiring for the past eighteen years. According to Prof. Quiring, the nine priceless sheets of parchment reveal a vivid and unforgetable picture of the Jews in 172 B. C., trying to keep faith and standards as Greek paganism swept over Palestine. Historically this year is near the close of Old Testament times. Written with flaming pen, this tract was intended for circulation among synagogues of faithful Jews. It warned them to beware of the Syrian tyrant, Antiochus, and his hireling, Joshua, who were leading the people into pagan wickedness. The writer was one of the loyal Jews who had fled to the region of Damascus. The nine parchment sheets from which Prof. Quiring made his translation are a medieval copy from the original vanished work. It dates from about the tenth century. Copied by two medieval scribes, one a little more careless than the other, the work is badly spelled and the pages are mutilated. The very last word is smeared with a greasy thumb print so plain that the police would have no trouble in identifying the careless bookman were he alive today.

Miss Martha Burkhalter of Berne, Indiana, who, after spending some time in further preparation for future work and a year as Dean of Women of Bluffton College is planning to return to the field in India. A reception was given to her recently in the shape of a cousin party, that is, those who attended, were all cousins of Miss Burkhalter.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of Berne, Indiana, undertakes to send quantities of dried fruit to missionaries on the foreign field, where it is greatly appreciated. In Berne arrangements were made to receive contributions for this fund in one of the business houses of the town.

Students enrolling in the freshman class of Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio, numbered 73, which is a 25 percent increase over last year.

Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, a member of the First Church, Philadelphia, and a recent graduate of the Hartford Theological Seminary, will enter the mission field, going to China. An ordination service will be held in the First Church on Sunday, October 13. The pastor, Rev. Carl Landes, will officiate.

Miss Justina Schmidt of Buhler, Kansas, a graduate of the Bethel Deaconess Training School, Newton Kansas, left for the mission field, Nigeria, Africa, September 18.

The Western District Conference will be held in the Newton, Kansas, city auditorium, October 23 to 25 The Ministers' Conference will be held in the Hebro church, October 22. Besides the regular business o the conference there will be a Young People's program and a Women's Mihssionary program.

Let us keep our conscience bright before God an man. Discharge every duty to save others, and mak your life a pattern of good works.

ONCE MORE OUR TREASURY

Dear Mission Friends:— Yesterday our Executive Committee had a meeting, and among other things the time of sailing of the two Sisters, Burkhalter and Schmidt, to India, and that of Brother and Sister Boehr and family to China, was considered. In view of the fact that about $5000.00 for salaries are due this month, but the money to pay is not in the treasury, it was decided to send no missionaries back to the field before we can pay this salary. We think salaries should have the preference to sending out missionaries.

It was also decided to make another appeal for the traveling money for the workers mentioned, who with the children will need eight and one-half tickets, totaling about $3300.00.

The gifts for this year have come in better than last year. We have about $7000.00 more than we had last year at this time, for which we thank the Lord and the donors. But there have been more expenses this year, and so we make this appeal. If the number of tithers would increase, all this could soon be paid.

In the name of the Board,

P. H. Richert, Secretary.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The regular lesson for that Sunday is the "Fall of Judah," and the Peace Committee has selected as the sub title the "Fruits of Militarism." This lesson calls attention to the militaristic policy carried on by the nation of Judah and its result, and points out the possible parallel of today. NOTES FROM THE BETHEL RETREATER

Held at Bethel College, August 24, 1935

Draw nigh unto God and He will draw nigh unto you.
James 4:8

"Seek and ye shall find."—Benny Bargen

This is a universal law. "Be careful of the desires of thy heart, for they shall surely come to pass." The real treasures of life do not lie on the surface. We must dig deeply and God will reveal truth. We may find something better than we sought. "Knock and it shall be opened unto you." Do not pound on the doors of life. Knock gently and the door of friendship, the door of useful life, and the door of truth will open. Jesus is the true pearl. Let us sell out to Him.

Mennonite Principles.—Rev. A. R. Keiser

A creed is the result of an inner experience and may be termed a yardstick of faith. Mennonite characteristics have distinctive qualities, some of which are, however, merely "driftwood." Among real principle are separation of church and state, adult baptism, the simple life, adherence to the Bible as guide of faith, non-resistance, and non-swearing of oaths.

Missions.—Rev. Freeman H. Swartz

A few suggestions thrown out were: Take notes; have a missionary scrap book; make maps; study a particular field, its political history and geography; study missionary history, comparative religion and biography and build a missionary library. Rev. Swartz gave us a perspective, gave us the "why" of missions, showed us a glimpse of the field, gave us the order of method used and facts of great missionaries. To what has God called me? What is my ability? What is my preparation?

Young People's Work—Mrs. E. L. Harshbarger

We must expand our educational program and build on childhood and youth. The week-day schools, Sunday Schools, Daily Vacation Bible School, and Bible Study for credit in high school are movements designed to realize this end. Our teachers must be better prepared, our methods must be more adapted to the child and our vision must be broadened.

About ninety retreaters were regularly enrolled in this, the tenth Bethel Retreat. Several from Nebraska and Oklahoma were present as well as from western Kansas. The fine cooperation made the Retreat a real answer to prayer in being a success spiritually as well as financially.

MISSIONARY RALLY

The East Swamp Church near Quakertown, Pa., was the scene of an inspiring Missionary Rally of the Young People's Union of this district, for the P. J. Boehr family.

Arthur Mohr served as song leader, while devotions were led by the Misses Claasen and Unruh of Bowmansville. Rev. E. J. Bohn, of Souderton, gave the address, basing his message on Isaiah 61:1. Appropriate responses were made by both Rev. and Mrs. Boehr, while the special music was furnished by Harlegih Rosenberger, trombone and Richard Hager, violin and vocal solos. Miss Elsie Schimmel favored the audience with one of her delightful readings, while a Father and Son Quartet, composed of Rev. Boehr, John Boehr, Earl Hallman,, and Pershing Hallman, furnished two numbers of music.

Representing the Foreign Mission Board, Rev. Howard G. Nyce gave the audience a brief word picture of the need confronting this board, and expressed his appreciation of the efforts made by both Young People's and Sunday School organizations in meeting the problem in a practical way. The day before the latter organization, in annual convention, at Allentown, had pledged to raise Five Hundred Dollars toward the returning of the Boehr family to China.

Guests of especial interest present were Miss Linda Brown, daughter of Missionaries Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Brown, now in China, who joined the Boehr family in singing several hymns in Chinese, and Mr. Edwin Miller of Freeman, S. D., who with Miss Brown, is a student at Biblical Seminary in New York.

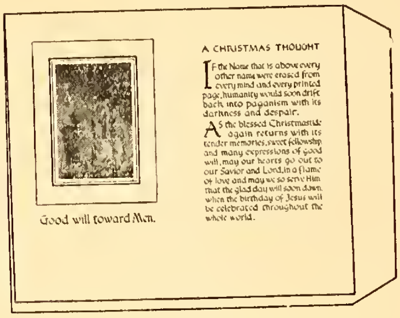
LOOK AHEAD TO CHRISTMAS

This Most Attractive Christmas Greeting

has found popular favor with pastors, teachers, superintendents, church visitors, officers of organizations, and others who desire to extend a Christian greeting to their friends and church members at Christmas time.



A CHRISTMAS THOUGHT

If the Name that is above every other name were erased from every mind and every printed page, humanity would soon drift back into paganism with its darkness and despair.

As the blessed Christmastide again returns with its tender memories, sweet fellowship and many expressions of good will, may our hearts go out to our Savior and Lord, in a flame of love and may we so serve Him that the glad day will soon dawn when the birthday of Jesus will be celebrated throughout the whole world.

Good will toward Men.

EDITORIAL

NATIONAL COMMEMORATION OF ENGLISH BIBLE

These last few months of 1935 give the church a fine opportunity to emphasize the importance of the Bible. Four hundred years ago October 4, 1535, was printed the first English Bible translated by Miles Coverdale. This important event is to be celebrated by Christian organizations throughout the world from October 4 to December 8.

The result of this commemoration should not only be a material one, of the selling of more Bibles by book companies, but church people raise the question as to what place the Bible has in the life of society.

The Bible as a library of sixty-six books, has three outstanding values: In the first place it is a book on religion. Religion is the life of God in the soul of man and the Bible from Genesis to Revelation is an account of the religious experiences of men and women. It came out of life and therefore is valuable for life. The religious experiences recorded there were experienced and lived before they were written. This is essential in our interpretation of the Bible. How often we try to make it speak in fields in which it does not pretend to be an authority. We do not turn to the Bible primarily to discover and study geology, philosophy, history, or even to discover charts of future events. It is a book on religion and in the field of religious experience it is absolute authority.

In the second place the Bible is the history and literature of a chosen people. It records the religious experiences of the Hebrew people. Every author of the forty is a Hebrew except one Luke. Its environment in the Old and New Testament is Jewish. It is Hebrew history, but the purpose of the history is not primarily to relate historical facts, but to reveal through history of a people God's eternal and redemptive purpose for mankind. This is of inestimable value because Christianity has its roots deep in Judaism. Jesus was a good Jew and Christianity is the religion of Jesus.

In the third place the Bible is a Book of Life. It came out of life and is an authority on life. An ancient poet said, "The Bible is the book that finds me." How often when we read it do we say to ourselves, "I am the man," "I have sinned." We say with the Psalmist, "Thy Word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee." May this Word ever be precious to us. Its value does not lie in its transient forms, but in its abiding message. It lies not in its outgrown forms, but in its reproducable experiences. —Weaver.

WHY READ THE BIBLE

The great mass of Americans neglect this splendid book because it is regarded as entirely a religious composition. This is a great mistake. Even if we do not care to read the Bible because of its religious nature, we will find in it the purest English undefiled that has ever been set in type.

The Bible is the most quotable book in all literature; all of the greatest classics taken together have but a fraction of the sayings in the Bible that fasten themselves in the mind.

Everywhere throughout this amazing volume are the most extraordinary experiences of every kind. It is the most interesting Book ever written. It is more entrancing than the Arabian Nights.

The King James or Authorized Version of the Bible is not the product of individual genius, like Shakespeare's plays, for it was the work of forty-seven men, not one known outside this performance for any superlative talent. Individual genius, such as Shakespeare's, we may allow to come in great creative epochs in the course of nature; but that forty-seven men could have brought such a marvel to birth, and that after no very long gestation, was such a wonder that the most skeptical mind must stand humble and aghast at it.

Its effect on English literature was immediate and has lasted to the present day.

In no book are wonderful stories as beautifully told and noble thoughts so ably expressed. It is a book that should be used in all our public schools, high schools and colleges. It is elevating in thought, its purity of English commends itself to every thinking mind.

Dr. Frank Crane in an article on "Why the Bible Is the Best Seller" stated: "It is not the Jew's Book, nor the Catholic's, nor the Protestant's, nor the Orthodox's, nor the Heretic's; it is Man's Book and wherever a soul is born into the world, this Book is for him and in that final hour that comes to all men, when the spirit shudders forth into the unknown, this Book alone brings the Word, like a bell in the fog, from Him who says: "I am the Resurrection and the Life.' "

Wherever the moral standard is being lifted up, wherever life is becoming larger in the vision that directs it and richer in its fruitage, the improvement is traceable to the Bible and to its influence. The Book of Books has lived and grown through the centuries; we have celebrated the Three Hundredth Anniversary of the King James Translations. It has stamped its impress upon the map of the world; its boundaries are clearly marked.

The immense moral influence of the Bible, though, of course, infinitely the most important, is not the only power it has for good. In addition, there is the unceasing influence it exerts on the side of good taste, of good literature, of proper sense of proportion, of simple and straightforward writing and thinking.

The Old Testament, when considered in the light of a historical document, has frequently been slighted by scholars, who have regarded it simply as a romantic legend of the ancient Hebrews. Today, however, modern scientific investigation is constantly making discoveries which confirm many of the events set forth in the venerable Book of Books.

The most recent of the Biblical stories to be affirmed by archeological research is that of the great deluge in Mesopotamia, about 4000 B. C. Dr. C. Leonard Woolley, director of the joint University of Pennsylvania Museum and British Museum expedition into Ur of the Chaldees, offers a parallel story of the flood, written by the surviving people.

The Harvard University recently decreed that no man can receive his A. B. in that institution without a Bible examination. They rank the Bible as a work of literature, without which no adequate appreciation of English letters is possible.

The sales of the Bible continue to be larger than those of any other book. It meets all the questions of life. It is harmonious throughout and is applicable as a final authority in all matters of human conduct, to all ages and every country.

There are about eight surviving copies of the so-called "Gutenburg" Bible, which was printed some six hundred years ago and so highly are these remaining copies prized that it was reported one was sold to an American collector, recently, for $100,000.

THE MENNONITE GIRLS' HOME IN SASKATOON, SASKATCHEWAN, CANADA

Introduction

Until the last emigration of our people from Russia to Canada, the Girls' Home, with its two main objectives, namely, to secure work for the unemployed girls in the cities and to give them spiritual guidance during their sojourn there, was unknown to our people both in the Old Country as well as in Canada and the United States. This was due to the fact that the people who were more or less well to do, engaged in farming and living in compact settlements, had no need for institutions of this kind. It was the desire of all Mennonite families to give their children employment and bread in their own homes. Therefore, except in very rare cases, the girls did not go to the cities to find work. The parents tried to keep their children at home, under parental influence as long as possible, and nowhere did the children feel happier than in their own homes. The love of home was taught not only by the parents, but also in our schools, and it was with sincerity that the following song was sung:

"Wo's Dörflein dort zu Ende geht,
Wo's Mühlenrad am Bach sich dreht,
Da steht im duft'gen Blütenstrausz
Ein Hüttlein klein, mein Vaterhaus.

Da schlagen mir zwei Herzen drin,
Voll Liebe und voll treuem Sinn,
Mein Vater und die Mutter mein,
Das sind die Herzen fromm und rein.

Drum tausch' ich für das schönste Schlosz,
Wär's felsenfest und riesengrosz,
Mein liebes Hüttlein doch nicht aus,
Denn's gibt ja nur ein Vaterhaus."

A high ideal of our people was to keep our homes sacred and pure. It was when the war and the Russian Revolution broke out with their terrible consequences, when families were mercilessly reprived of their simple rights, children being roused against parents and parents against children, and the authority of the family was physically and morally destroyed, that thousands of our people left their homes in Russia to look for a country where they could work peacefully and live according to the principles of their faith. So it was that these families, bitterly poor, turned their steps to Canada. Many hospitable homes were opened to them, but soon they were busy establishing homes of their own. Circumstances, however, were none too favorable and it was found necessary for the children to leave their parents in order to find employment elsewhere so that they could help them in their struggle for existence. In the majority of cases it was the girls who left home. It was with reluctance that the parents sent their children out into the world to fight their own battles, for they knew well that their high ideal of a home with the children under their guidance was endangered.

In a short time a number of girls were found working on farms and also in the cities. Because of the fact that the wages were higher in the cities, a large majority of the girls went there. The parents appreciated the extra income that the girls brought home, but at the same time they became uneasy at the thought that, under the influence of city life, these girls might eventually lose the faith of their fathers. So the idea of establishing, in the larger cities, Mennonite Girls' Homes, with a family in charge, originated. This idea was finally realized by the Home Mission Board of the General Conference of North America when the first Home was opened in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Opening of the Girls' Home in Saskatoon

Because of financial difficulties, it was impossible to organize a Girls' Home in Saskatoon at the same time. However, the ministers of the Rosenorter and Nordheimer congregations held church services for the girls and the Mennonite families in Saskatoon. It was in the year 1930, thanks to the cooperation of the Home Mission Board on the one side and of the Mennonite families in the city and the girls working there on the other hand, that a permanent worker was engaged, and on the 29th of January, 1931, the Mennonite Girls' Home in Saskatoon was opened. On this occasion Rev. J. J. Klassen of Dundurn and Rev. David Toews of Rosthern were the main speakers. The latter suggested the following motto for the Home:

"O selig Haus, wo man dich aufgenommen,
Du wahrer Seelenfreund, Herr Jesu Christ!
Wo unter allen Gästen, die da kommen,
Du der gefeiertste und liebste bist.
Wo aller Herzen dir entgegenschlagen,
Und aller Augen freudig auf dich seh'n,
Wo aller Lippen dein Gebot erfragen,
Und alle deines Winks gewärtig steh'n."

Through the foundation of the Girls' Home, the work of the congregation changed entirely. The girls' gatherings, Sunday School, Christian Endeavors, and the regular Sunday church services were all duly arranged and the work became quite systematic.

Letter of Thanks

The girls who were present at the opening of the Girls' Home, presented the following letter of thanks to the Home Mission Board through Rev. David Toews:

Dear Mr. Toews: In the year 1923, due to the Russain revolution and its consequences, our Mennonites from Russia emigrated to Canada. As you understand, the conditions and circumstances under which the movement was made possible caused our people to be scattered throughout Canada. Without any means, our fathers and mothers came to Canada and took up their struggle for existence. Because the adult members of the family wished to help their parents materially, it was quite impossible for the families to remain together. The boys found work on farms and the girls in the cities.

The Home Mission Board of the General Conference of North America showed intense interest in the welfare of the girls in the cities, and tried to give them a home in the city as a substitute for the parental homes they had left. In Winnipeg a Mennonite Girls' Home was organized, whereas in other smaller cities the local minister visited the girls regularly. It was impossible to arrange for a Girls' Home in Saskatoon at the time, but the girls have never felt neglected. We thank you, dear Mr. Toews, that traveling ministers have visited us here, and we thank the Messrs. D. P. Enns, Bennon Toews, and J. J. Thiessen for recreational services given us on Thursday nights. And because today we are celebrating the consecration of a Mennonite Girls' Home in Saskatoon, we cannot say how much we appreciate the fact that the wish of the girls for a Home in Saskatoon has become a reality.

We wish to express our appreciation to you, the representative of the Home Mission Board, and also to any one who has helped to make the plan for a Mennonite Girls' Home a reality. We, the undersigned, wish you to extend our heartfelt thanks to the members of the Mission Board who have helped to make this possible.

Our Aims and Achievements

The two chief aims, which we had in mind, were: Firstly, we endeavored to find work for the unemployed girls, and secondly, we wished to give them the necessary spiritual guidance. Our first aim was attained by means of our employment bureau, the second by means of gatherings at the Home every Thursday and Sunday, also by means of church services and private conversations held on quiet evenings. It has always been our desire to procure the best positions possible in the city for our girls, not only because there the salaries are higher, but because in the larger homes the girls are able to gain more experience. The positions in hotels and restaurants are not recommended by the Home. It may be said, the ladies employing our girls value their diligence, faithfulness, honesty, and modest ways. They appreciate the fact that they are able to receive recommendations from the Home for the girls they wish to employ. The relationship existing between these ladies and our Home is a desirable one. Many women are greatly pleased if the girls visit the Home regularly.

The second objective is certainly of much greater responsibility and importance. To clarify this phase of our work, I shall add a few remarks regarding our Home "family." Our girls consist both of immigrants and Canadian Mennonites. The ages range from 16 to 44 years. The education these girls have received varies considerably. Some have visited a good school in the Old Country, others again have obtained an education in Canada, while there are still others who have had no opportunity whatever to receive any schooling. Many of these girls who were wealthy in the Old Country, are confronted with reversed conditions here. With these many individual differences, it may be easily understood that there are many different views regarding the matter of what is right and what is wrong. The city, with its many attractions, such as show windows, theatres, fashions, and jewelry, tempts many girls who had to leave their parental homes while still very young. This, therefore, is the main task of our Home, to warn these girls against the dangers and pitfalls of city life.

This is not always a simple matter. It requires much courage, love, and wisdom from above to understand each girl individually. We find the pedagogical principle "to individualize and not to generalize" holds true also in our work. We fully realize that we may have not always been successful in our undertaking, but we can say with a clear conscience that we have at all times strived to do what was right. As the Apostle Paul says, "For though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more." (1 Cor. 9:19.) Of the one hundred and ten Mennonite girls in Saskatoon about ninety visit in the Home. Considering the fact that these girls have to work in the daytime, we hold our regular Sunday church services in the evening.

The day of rest for these employed girls is Thursday. To enjoy this day as fully as possible the following time table is usually followed: In the afternoons the girls do the necessary shopping and visiting, at six o'clock we have lunch at the Home, from seven to eight o'clock we hold discussions of the Bible, after which the singers leave to attend choir practice, whereas the remaining girls stay until ten o'clock. On these Thursdays much hand work is done, which is later sold at the mission sales, the proceeds of which go for mission work, our Home, the needy in Russia, and for the sick and poor. Through the reading of the weekly Mennonite papers, the girls are keeping in touch with and are more closely united to the work of our Mennonite congregations throughout the world.

In our work we endeavor to remain with the motto: "Our people's aims, our aims; our people's needs, our own needs." In the close cooperation of the congregation, the press, the girls, and the parents of our girls, we are able to uphold this work, to keep our employed girls in our congregations, and to lead them on to a Christian life. With God's blessing everything will go well. He will lead and guide us!

With the sincerest thanks for the kind support we have received,

J. J. and Katherine Thiessen.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH OF PHILADELPHIA CELEBRATES SEVENTIETH ANNIVERSARY

The First Church of Philadelphia enjoyed a season of unusual blessings, October 6 to 13, 1935. In keeping with a suitable observance of the Seventieth Anniversary of the church, Dr. J. E. Hartzler of Woocester, Ohio, delivered a series of nine sermons and lectures, leading us to a clearer understanding of many biblical truths which were so clearly stated and applied. Thursday of the week was known as Community Night when the pastors of the neighboring Protestant denominations, five in number, were present. Saturday evening was Eastern District Conference Night on the anniversary program.

Our Pastor Emeritus, N. B. Grubb; Rev. E. J. Bohn, Conference President; Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Conference and our former pastor; and Rev. C. J. Landes, our present pastor, participated. These were followed by Hartzler's lecture.

Sunday morning was an impressive service with a good attendance. Dr. Hartzler preached the communion sermon. During the service period the pastor, Rev. C. J. Landes, ordained Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, a member of our congregation, to the office of missionary in foreign fields. Miss Kuyf is affiliated with the Hartford Mission Fellowship, the Foreign Mission Conference of North America, and the Eastern District Conference recognized this high calling. She has been accepted for work in world missions in China.

This service was very impressive and while memory lasts will not be forgotten.

It is to be hoped that the work of our church will continue and that the efforts will be richly blessed.

LAKE SUPERIOR REGION

On October 13th, the Secretary of the Northern Bible Society had a most unusual experience. In company with a Finnish minister I drove out into the country eighty miles and took part in the burial services of a communist. This man was over seventy years old and had lived in a community where almost everyone is an avowed hater of God, the Christian church, and of our government. Picture the scene that met our eyes. A large settlement of Finnish people located in the backwoods, no churches, no religious activities are ever held there. The funeral services were held in a large dance hall, over two hundred people had gathered and were awaiting our arrival to hold the Christian burial service. A Christian school teacher had held a Bible school for the children during the short period last summer, which fact accounted for a desire on the part of the bereaved family to have a Christian burial for the deceased. As I stood in front of the audience with the Finnish minister, my heart was deeply touched. How destitute these people are of the things which make life worth while—faith in God and the blessed hope of eternal life with Jesus Christ our Savior. The very atmosphere seemed dark and gloomy because there were no Christian homes in the community. (There is an atmosphere of hope and joy in a community composed of Christian homes that seems to permeate the very air we breathe.)

The funeral service began with the Finnish minister singing a song in his mother tongue, and then read a portion of the Scripture. The Christian school teacher with several of the children followed with a song in English, after which the minister preached the funeral service in Finnish. Then I was called upon to give the message in English. I felt very keenly the importance of this opportunity to give a direct Gospel message to these atheists. I prayed that God would speak to their hearts. Then the casket was placed in an old truck, and we two, with the neighbors followed the body to a nearby graveyard, where a few of the community's dead lie buried. What a lonely, gloomy spot — and what poor, benighted people! How different the burial of one who is God's own!

After the service the minister and I were invited to the home of the bereaved for lunch. A large number of their friends had gathered in the house and before we left the minister again asked me to speak and offer prayer. The handshakes in farewell showed me that we had been a blessing that day and that the words spoken had not been in vain. We feel that these poor, unfortunate souls can be won for Christ.

The Northern Bible Society is now arranging to place a Bible in each one of the homes in this community and to give each child a New Testament. We pray that God will speak to their hearts as they read His Book.

We have here in the north in the Lake Superior region a great many settlements of this same type — many of them with over one hundred families and entirely neglected religiously. We have learned the best way to win them into the right way of living is through the method of work our Society employs — "distributing the Bible." We do need substantial help to carry on more rapidly the work of the Lord in these needy districts. Won't you help? Pray for the work.

DR. JAMES M. GRAY CALLED HOME

The Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., LL. D., whose name for forty years has been linked with the expanding work of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, was at midafternoon on Saturday, September 21, released from earthly life. Though in his eighty-fifth year, he had shown remarkable vigor to the last, having addressed a large audience in the Institute auditorium on Friday of the previous week. He was seized with a heart attack early on Sunday morning, the 15th, in his home, and was later removed to the Passavant hospital, where his death occurred.

For the past year Dr. Gray has carried the title of president emeritus of the Institute, the man of his choosing, Rev. Will H. Houghton, D. D., of New York, having assumed the duties of president last November. The year was one of great activity for the venerable teacher. His engagements for Bible conferences took him to the Atlantic seaboard, to the distant South, and to Canada, meanwhile he carried heavy class work at the Institute and edited, as for many years, the Moody Bible Institute Monthly.

The body lay in state in the Institute auditorium for three hours on Sunday afternoon, when thousands of friends and students passed before the casket of him whom they revered as teacher, counselor, and friend. Private funeral services were held at the late residence on Monday morning, the immediate family and a few invited friends and co-workers giving reverent attention to the deeply devotional and comforting words spoken by Dr. Houghton.

Interment was made on Tuesday, the 24th, in the Woodlawn cemetery, New York, the city of Dr. Gray's birth, and where his wife and son, James M., Jr., rest. Surviving are three sons: Dr. Hugh B., of Boston; Curtis R., of Holland, Mich.; and Philip M., of Ridgefield, Conn. His daughter-in-law, Florence Ryder Gray, and grandson, James M., III, have been his home companions for the past sixteen years.

Dr. Gray's long and eventful life was given without stint to the defense of Bible truth by both voice and pen, as well as in training many thousands of young men and women to proclaim redemption through Christ in all parts of the world. Two generations of students have shared the rich inspiration of his teaching and influence.

As a teacher, Dr. Gray came into prominence many years ago as the author of what is known as the Synthetic Method of Bible Study. In book form his Synthetic studies have stimulated unnumbered thousands in an understanding pursuit of Bible knowledge. As an author he leaves some twenty-five volumes and booklets on doctrinal themes to continue his ministry. Next in importance to "Synthetic Bible

THE FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH OF PHILADELPHIA

SEVENTY YEARS OLD

(The following paper was prepared from records available by Joseph B. Bechtel, Senior Deacon of the First Mennonite Church of Philadelphia and read during the Anniverarsy Program, October 12, 1935.)

To the vision of a pioneer in the Unification Movement of Mennonites in the early sixties may, in a measure be ascribed the founding of the Church of the Denomination in this city, whose seventieth anniversary we are celebrating this 12th day of October, 1935.

It was during the summer of 1862, that Rev. Daniel Hege, a minister of scholarly attainments and strong convictions, who had been appointed by the General Conference to present the project of a Mennonite training school to congregations represented in conference and to solicit subscriptions when practicable, visited churches in eastern Pennsylvania. While visiting among families in this city who held membership in country churches, he became convinced that there were enough members of the denomination here to form the nucleus of a church organization, and recommended strongly the beginning of preaching services to lead eventually to the formation of such an organization. An interest having been aroused, services were held from time to time in the homes of members. The recommendation gave encouraging signs of bearing fruit when on October 27, 1865, a service was held in a small frame chapel on Diamond Street, between Germantown Avenue and Fifth Street, by Rev. Moses H. Gottshall, elder of the Schwenksville charge.

Representing, as Rev. Hege did, the General Conference in the early years of its existence and effort, it may in truth be said that among the first fruits of this body stands this influential congregation of the Eastern District Conference.

The congregation was organized with Rev. Moses H. Gottshall, of Schwenksville, Pa., as elder, and David Taylor, a member and deacon in the East Swamp congregation, as deacon. Services were at first held bi-weekly, morning and evening, in the rented chapel on Diamond Street. Shortly afterwards the building was sold to the East Pennsylvania Eldership of the Church of God, and then the services were held in a rented hall on Germantown Avenue near Norris Street. On January 12, 1867, the chapel in which services were first held, was purchased, and regular morning and evening services, supplied by visiting ministers, were continued. At first the congregation was considered as a mission of the conference and was represented in conference by two delegates.

From the foregoing you will readily see that this congregation is a born child of the General Conference and therefore we should never shirk, but ever regard it an unusual privilege to still be a part of the conference.

We should also feel constrained to lend every possible aid to the General Conference projects, whenever opportunity presents itself.

January 27, 1872, the first by-laws or rules and regulations under which the affairs of the congregation were to be conducted, were formulated and accepted. The intent of this procedure no doubt was good, but the outcome was not so good, because in the application of these newly adopted rules a dispute about the use of the English language arose which within two years, or about 1874, caused a split in the membership and about half withdrew and organized the Second Mennonite Church. It was not very long before the then known Second Mennonite Church merged with the Fifth Moravian Church. Records show that one by one a good many of these members came back and again identified themselves with the First Church.

Our congregation was admitted as a member of the Eastern District Conference at the May session of 1872.

The church building in which we now worship and in which we are this evening assembled was erected during the summer and fall of 1881 and was dedicated the third Sunday of January, 1882. It was erected at a cost of $9,000.00.

The ground on which our church stands was bought January 12, 1867, for the sum of $1,500.00.

Our congregation became an incorporated body July 9, 1881.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the church was observed during 1890, at which a membership of 204 was reported.

During 1894, our congregation began expansion by establishing a mission Sunday School, which in the course of four years developed into the Second Mennonite Church at Franklin Street and Indiana Ave. The lot at this corner was bought for $3,000.00 and the church building erected at a cost of $5,547.75, or a total cost of $8,547.75. The Second Church was dedicated April 4, 1899, at which time thirty-six members from our church transferred membership to the Second Church.

Until 1912 the Second Church was owned and financially aided by the First Church. During this year the First and Second Church made one united effort and the financial obligation resting on the Second Church was reduced to a point where they could assume the full responsibility. A full and complete transfer of the church property was therefore made that year.

During the summer of 1900, while our pastor, Rev. N. B. Grubb, was vacationing in Europe, a guest of the N. Snellenburg Co., our pipe organ was installed at a cost of $1,658.87, and was first played at Rev. Grubb's home coming service in September of the same year.

Rev. Grubb, having been a newspaper publisher before he took the pastorate of this church, naturally believed in the free use of printers ink, with the result that with January 1891 and for five years following a thirty-two page report of the activities of the church appeared. This was followed by a twenty-four page monthly, known as "The Mennonite Endeavor" and was published by the Christian Endeavor Society for a period of five years. This publication was substituted with the weekly bulletin, which has been issued ever since, and which makes last Sunday's issue of October 6, 1935, No. 33 of the 34th volume.

To this church and the untiring efforts of our Pastor Emeritus, then our active pastor, goes much of the credit for the beginning and early development of the Zion Church of Souderton, and which today is the largest in our Eastern District Conference.

Our church was also a major influence in the establishing of the Mennonite Home at Frederick, Pa., and again Rev. Grubb saw a need and had faith to believe that it could be accomplished. He bought the Home property, then had an Eastern District Conference called, and sold it to them at cost. The price was $1,150.00; of this amount our congregation contributed 66 percent and the Conference the balance. This whole enterprise, I am sure, has been very much worth while and has been a blessing to all who lived there.

MEMBERSHIP—At time of our twenty-fifth anniversary we reported 204 members. At the time of the fiftieth anniversary we reported 465 members. At the last annual congregational business meeting, January 1935, we reported 364 members on the active list and 56 on the associate list.

The pastors who served this congregation, were: Rev. Samuel G. Clemmer, April 5, 1868, to February 16, 1870; Rev. Levi O. Schimmel, March 10, 1870, to April —, 1873; Rev. Albert E. Funk, February 1, 1874, to July 1, 1882; Rev. N. B. Grubb, October 1, 1882, to January 1, 1920; Rev. N. B. Grubb (Pastor Emeritus), January 1, 1920, to date; Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, February —, 1921, to August 11, 1929; Miss Mary E. Bakewell, B. D., September 15, 1929, to April 20, 1930; Rev. Carl J. Landes, August 3, 1930, to date; Rev. Reed F. Landis.

The deacons who served the congregation, were: David Taylor, 1856 to 1878; Abraham S. Weiss, 1875 to 1882; Nathan Sleifer, 1883, to 1898; Joseph B. Bechtel, 1892 to date; Casper Hett, 1872 to 1880; Peter R. Kline, 1878 to—; Reuben S. Strunk, 1893 to 1908; Harrison Landis, 1908; Seward M. Rosenberger, 1916 to 1925; Abram B. Bartin, 1925 to date; Isaiah W. Gross, 1917 to date.

FINANCES—Much could be said on this subject, but suffice it to say that from all available records the First Church has always done her reasonable share when the need presented itself.

In reading our Fiftieth Anniversary Souvenir book of 54 pages and 20 years of weekly bulletins, I discovered some very interesting items. For instance, I tarried to carefully read the financial report of our congregation presented at the annual meeting in January 1920.

For information and encouragement to the younger folks present and absent, I quote from this report:

Total receipts for home use		$3456.42
Total receipts from Contingent Fund		27.00
Total receipts from Mission Collector		885.78
Total receipts for Mennonite Home
Current	$ 238.35
Endowment	1008.00	1246.35
Total receipts for Charity Fund		21.18
Total receipts for Educational Fund		21.50
Total receipts 106 Red Cross Members enrolled		106.00
Total subscriptions to Eastern District Conference Thanksgiving Fund		11710.00
Grand Total for 1919		$17274.23

Of this amount only $3456.42 was used for our church, the rest was missionary.

In our Church Bulletin of February 24, 1924, I find a committee appointed to consider ways and means to provide additional Sunday School space, and, if necessary, buy the adjoining property. In July 13th bulletin we find the committee authorized to solicit funds. We find the annex was bought and settled for September 4, 1924, purchase price $7,000.00 plus improvements at a cost of $2,751.51, making the total investment $9,751.51. Of this total amount there remains unpaid at this time the sum of $3,700.00, which is the entire obligation against the annex and main building. The annex was first used Sunday, March 29, 1925.

In January 1924, the request came from the Foreign Mission Board of General Conference for contributions equal to $4.00 per member. While we felt we could not raise this much, we promised to make efforts to raise $1,000.00.

From the foregoing statements you will see that the First Church was always willing to lend a helping hand in no mean proportions. I believe that we as a congregation have learned the very practical lesson that the reward of work, well done, is more work and we were blessed in proportion.

Duplex Envelope Plan of Financing

The first visitation was made March 26, 1926. Among other things, Rev. Neuenschwander made this suggestion in his remarks. Tomorrow history will have been made for the Mennonite Church and the church bulletin of April 4, 1926, reveals that 252 pledges were signed to the amount of: Home use, $3,401.26; Benevolences, $1,206.20. The system has served us well and is still with us.

The First Church always believed in Christian activities and here are some of the auxiliaries:

The Sunday School was organized May 3, 1868, and the first session was held on May 10, 1868. The following served as superintendents in rotation as named: James L. Reber, Jose Schimmel, Rev. Albert Funk, Joseph B. Bechtel, Seward M. Rosenberger, Wm. Kremer, Rev. Samuel C. Clemmer, John C. Egley, Charles H. Moyer, Andrew S. Bechtel, Erwin S. Weiss, Robert Ross, Michael Kratz, present superintendent.

The Ladies' Aid Society was organized in March 1882 and has been rendering a valuable service ever since.

Young People's and Christian Endeavor Societies

When a Young People's Society, May 24, 1886, was authorized it was done with the provision that the meetings be held in church. On October 18, 1892, this Young People's Society was changed to a Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and has been busily engaged in the Master's work, sometimes a bit more actively and then again at times not as active but still functioning. In later years were added the Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls organizations.

A few of the fruits of the efforts put forth in the First Church. List of members who entered the Christian ministry: J. Shelly Myers, Cornelius H. Wedel, William H. Grubb, Otto Lichti, Albert R. Schorman, Andrew S. Bechtel, Arthur S. Rosenberger, Henry A. Frederick, Silas M. Grubb, Samuel M. Musselman, Frank F. Gabel, Harvey M. Shelly, Ann J. Allebach, thirteen in all. Missionary, ready to leave, Wilhelmine Kuyf; evangelists, several of the members were licensed evangelists.

In closing, may I say that as I look back over the years since I have been affiliated with this congregation, which is since February 1890, we have undergone many changes. We had many blessings and happy occasions, but naturally, also some bitter experiences.

It seems to me that this brief review of 70 years of our church life should be a real challenge to continue the work so well begun and so ably carried on by our elders.

With the better facilities of today and much better intellectual qualifications, I am wondering if we are doing our job in the same proportion better.

If Dr. Hartzler's lectures of this week have gripped us as they ought, I am sure the seventy years just ahead will be even better than the seventy that are behind.

If during this week's program, celebrating the seventieth anniversary of our church, we have learned to know a changeless Christ in a changing world and a God-consciousness, the work will go on and prosper. May it be so!

BETTER THAN THE BEST FEELINGS

Joyous feelings are not the best blessings God gives us. For our joyous feelings may leave us, but there are blessings that can never leave us. Facts are better than feelings; feelings can change, but certain facts cannot. There are three words each beginning with the letter F, and it is important to keep them in their proper order. Fact, Faith, Feeling. God tells us of certain facts connected with Himself and every believer which cannot change. Our faith is to believe those facts. As Evan Hopkins said long ago, feelings come third; they follow facts and faith. In faith we are to keep our eyes fixed on facts, and never take our eyes off the facts in order to turn in the opposite direction and look at our feelings. To do this means a faltering faith. A writer speaks a needed word: "How often we miss God's best, and fail to 'possess our possessions,' just because our faith falters, and we forget the covenant which God Himself has made with His people! Our changing feelings rob us of th enjoyment of a changeless fact—the fact tha God is faithful who promised His mercy from everlasting to everlasting upon that tha fear him." Let us turn utterly and foreve from our feelings or lack of feelings, and loo unto Jesus. He is our unchanging Savior, ou very Life; and He is "the same yesterday, an today, and forever."—S. S. Times.

MY BIBLE AND I

We have traveled together, my Bible and I,
Through tempest and sunshine I still kept thee nig
Though dark were the days, thy comforts were stron
"Fear not, I am with thee" I still made my song.
My solace and comfort when trouble was nigh.
We were still close together, my Bible and I.

My stay and my comfort, by day and by night,
My treasure, my succor, my comfort, delight;
My solid foundation from earth's rudest shock,
I am safe in the shadow of thee, blessed rock.
With thee for my guide, I can Satan defy;
We will hold to each other, my Bible and I.

Thou sword of the Spirit, revealer and guide,
My doubts are dispelled when I've thee by my side.
The Master, himself, soon put Satan to flight
When appearing to him as an angel of light.
With thee I can conquer, and Satan defy,
We'll keep closer together, my Bible and I.

So now who shall part us, my Bible and I?
Shall Satan's temptations when age dims the eye?
Come storm or come sunshine, come sleet or come rai
My stay in the past, I will trust thee again.
Be my song in the night, when preparing to die,
We will still be companions, my Bible and I.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

It is a gratifying sign of the times, that th world is apparently returning more and mo to the Bible. Innumerable voices are raised t summon the world to this return. Even Jou nalism is not idle. Daily papers are printin extracts from the Scriptures. And a moveme is in operation to induce the daily papers t publish regularly Biblical passages. Read wha the Bible says, read with open eyes and heart and without looking through the enlightene spectacles of others, read and judge for you selves. Many boast that they know the Bibl thoroughly; but it is not true at all; most them do not understand it and do not want t understand it; and those who do, cease to war against it, because they realize how much they still have to learn from it. —Selected.

An Alaskan girl was found by her teacher admiring a beautiful sunset. When it was suggested that she try to put the scene on canvas, she replied: "Oh, I can't draw glory." — No words of ours can tell the beauties of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the Rose of Sharon, the Lily of the Valley, the Bright and Morning Star, the One Altogether Lovely. Let us ask Him to clear our vision, taking away everything that obscures His loveliness.

CORRESPONDENCE

Odessa, Washington, October 21, 1935. Rev. P. R. Aeschliman visited the Menno and Ruff churches Sunday, October 13. He spoke at Menno in the morning and at Ruff in the afternoon. Rev. H. S. Wannamaker of the Congregational Conference spoke at Menno in the evening this same Sunday.

Yesterday, Sunday, October 20, we had our annual "Home-Coming-Day" in the Menno Mennonite Church. Very many of the members who now live at great distances and can not attend our regular services any more, were present. Many of our former members also were present, but have since joined other churches due to the fact that they live nearer other churches. The church was filled both for the morning and the afternoon sessions. At the morning services, Bro. W. C. Rhea, whose wife is a former member of our church, preached the sermon. In the afternoon there was a joint program rendered by the Junior and Y. P. C. E. Societies, which was followed with a communion service. Large audiences were present at all services. A Fellowship Luncheon was served at noon. People came as far as 150 miles.

The church choir of Menno is preparing to render the Christmas cantata, "Chimes of the Holy Night," by Holton, at some time during the Christmas season.

The Elementary Sunday School is preparing a sacred dramatic Christmas cantata, entitled "The Story of a Christmas Gift," by Ruth Dale. This also will be given during the Christmas season. Rev. M. J. Galle.

Mountain Lake, Minnesota, October 15, 1935. The last month our little city has done justice to the word "Cooperation." For on September 15, the Christian Endeavors in and around this community held a Union Conference. The theme for the day was "Go Ye," according to Matthew 28:19-20. The Rev. R. L. Moyer of the Northwestern Bible School of Minneapolis was the guest speaker. The other features of the program were orchestra numbers and songs in various forms by the different societies.

On October 13, Mountain Lake held its annual "Hospital Day" program for the financial benefit of our local institution. The guest speaker was Rev. M. M. Horsch of Beatrice, Nebraska.

During the morning service of October 13th, the Bethel congregation celebrated the annual Harvest Festival, Rev. Horsch addressing the audience. His theme was based upon the Scriptural lesson told by Jesus in Luke 12.

We trust that these programs may have been a blessing to spiritually hungry hearts, and that we may all strive to work more faithfully for our Master. Bethel Church, Ass't Corr.

Normal Church Notes, Normal, Ill. Our pastor conducted one week's services at Home Sweet Home Mission.

The Primary Department observed promotion day.

October 9, Rev. E. A. Sommer gave a very interesting description of a missionary conference in the Belgian Congo and discussed a few of their native problems.

The Women's Missionary Society held its annual Birthday and Guest Night meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Springer, October 11.

Rev. Litwiller is recovering from a major operation at Mennonite Hospital.

Revival services conducted by Rev. Earl Salzman, began Sunday morning, October 20, and will continue for two weeks.

The Bible lessons taught by Rev. Weaver and Rev. Hartzler were well attended, closing October 21.

Newton, Kansas. Dear Editors and Readers of the Mennonite and Christian Evangel. On July 7th, our pastor, Bro. J. E. Entz, preached a very earnest sermon. In the evening in the adult C. E. Society Mrs. Leisy, nee Krehbiel, gave an address on "Ladies work for peace," giving a historical sketch of ladies' work for peace. Br. C. A. Lehman from Chicago was at the meeting, but had to leave before he could sing for us.

On Sunday, July 14, Professor Goertz of Bethel College preached German and English.

Wednesday evening, July 17, missionary Kuhlman from China spoke in the basement of the church to the Ladies' Missionary Society and others very interestingly about their work. Mrs. Kuhlman showed very pretty embroidery.

Sunday, July 21, Missionary Duerksen from India spoke German and his wife in English, very interestingly.

Wednesday evening, July 24, a men's quartet from the Los Angeles Bible Institute gave a program in our church. There were not as many in the audience as we might have wished for the excellent program.

During the absence of our pastor at the General Conference on Sunday, August 4, Rev. B. Regier preached an excellent German sermon and Rev. Keller English. The next Sunday Prof. Goertz preached, and on August 18, our pastor made the introduction in German and Rev. F. Swartz from Schwenksville, Pa., preached in English.

Sunday, September 1, was a blessed day for the congregation. After Sunday School, where the Apostle Paul was the subject, Rev. A. Kreider from Bethel College preached on "All things are yours," showing the precious promises God has given us. At two o'clock in the afternoon, after a thunderstorm which detained many from a distance from coming, was the ordination for elder of Missionary S. F. Pannabecker. Three members of the board for foreign missions were on the platform. Rev. J. E. Entz opened the meeting, emphasizing the need of prayer. Each of the members of the Board of Missions spoke very suitable and encouraging words. After the ordination the president spoke to Brother and Sister Pannabecker. They both gave a short but impressive message. It was a very solemn and edifying occasion, which those who were present, will not easily forget. If only more of the many friends of our mission could have enjoyed it! In the evening was the meeting of the adult C. E. Society. The subject was prayer, in harmony with the forenoon and afternoon meetings. The great importance of prayer in the life of the Christian was emphasized.

On September 8, our returned assistant pastor, Dr. A. Warkentin, preached.

On September 15, in the evening, Rev. Ramseyer, representative of the Northern Bible Society, spoke of the importance of the Bible in our time.

On Thursday, September 19, Sister Frieda Sprunger from China spoke at the prayer meeting about their work.

On September 22, Rev. Warkentin preached. On September 26, Rev. B. Harder from Germany spoke about his work, chiefly among the Russians, emphasizing the hunger for the Word in spite of all persecution, severer than any before.

Sunday, September 29, our pastor preached. In the evening Rev. H. T. Unruh of Halstead gave a report of the International C. E. Convention in Philadelphia to the C. E. Societies.

Fraternally yours,
C. van der Smissen.

Aberdeen, Idaho, October 4, 1935. Dear Editor: On March 5th and continued through to March 10th, our congregation enjoyed the sermons of Rev. Balzer very much.

A short dedicatorial service was held by the Sunday School on March 10th to dedicate the hymn books presented by the late Miss Lizzie Wiebe. The dedicatorial prayer was given by Rev. J. E. Kaufman and the Sunday School sang the hymn "Praise Him" as an opening number. Later the song, "Shall we gather by the river" was sung softly in memory of the donor, the late Miss Wiebe.

Baptism services were held in our church, when fifteen members decided to accept Christ as their Savior. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Friesen were welcomed into the church by the right hand of fellowship.

Sunday evening, May 25, the Ladies' Mission Society celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary. The charter members were especially invited, as some of them are not members of our church anymore. Each charter member was presented with a pink rosebud after a short talk of welcome from Mrs. J. L. Toevs. The collection was to be used for the Diamond Jubilee Fund.

Our church decided to try to hold a Retreat, both for old and young. It began on July 4th and ended on July 6th. Due to it being the first one, it was decided to make it brief. Quite a few attended, some stayed the whole time and some just came for the evening. Many of our young men were busy with irrigation and they couldn't possibly leave for such a length of time.

Seven of our members were delegates to the conferences held in Upland and Los Angeles, California: Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Wiebe, Edith Giesbrecht, Alice Lehman, and Herbert Hege. Both parties went per auto. Very interesting reports were given at the services Sunday morning, August 25th.

We have had many visitors here this summer. Some of them talked in our church. Rev. Edgar Toevs and Prof. Hirschler spoke one evening. Dr. Dester and Miss Schmidt talked to us on a Wednesday night. Mrs. Dester had some interesting displays and she gave a short talk after the service, concerning them. We are always glad to have and to hear visitors.

Another treat we had this summer was listening to the Bethel A Capella Choir. They rendered a program Saturday evening and one Sunday morning. After the Sunday services, a fellowship lunch was held in the basement of the church, served cafeteria style. More than 200 people were served. Everyone seemed to have enjoyed it a great deal.

At the Ladies' Aid the Ruth Hege "Travelog" is enjoyed very much. It is read by one of the members while the others quilt. It was decided to hold an all day meetnig next Tuesday in order to finish some quilts that the Aid has promised to quilt.

Mrs. John Becker has been quite ill for the past two weeks, but we are hoping she is on her way to recovery. Corr.

Anchor Mennonite Church, Gibson City, Illinois. Miss Elizabeth Schertz and her brothers, Dan and Earl, visited at the home of George Schertz and family, Wednesday, October 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Sommers and son, Clarence, of near Pekin, visited the former's uncle and sons, Mr. Julius Unzicker, and Walter, Ezra, and Roy, and their families, September 28 and 29.

Mrs. Walter Unzicker and Otto Unzicker went to Mercy Hospital at Champagin, Sunday, September 29, to get Mrs. Otto Unzicker, who had undergone a major operation. Mrs. Unzicker is recovering nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Schertz and little daughter, Evelyn, spent September 21 and 22 at Metamora, Illinois, visiting the latter's father and brothers.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Schertz worshiped in the Normal Church, October 13, then visited the latter's sister, Mrs. Amelia Swartz, and family. They also visited their son's wife, Mrs. Harold Schertz, who is at the Mennonite Hospital, who underwent a major operation some time ago. She is recovering nicely.

Mrs. Aaron Augspurger, Mrs. Edgar Gingerich, Miss Elizabeth Schertz, and their brother Earl attended the funeral of Norris Springer at Stanford, Friday, October 10.

October 6, we observed the Lord's Supper. Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Weaver and daughter worshiped with us. Rev. Weaver gave a very impressive message on the sacredness of observing the Lord's Supper, stating that that is one occasion when we are either doing a great thing in respect of our Lord, if we really are living true to Him. On the other side, if we partake of such a great feast unworthily, what a sad thing it will be for us. Rev. Weaver and family took dinner with Carl Young and family. In the afternoon Rev. and Mrs. Augspurger accompanied them to the North Danvers Home Coming.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Augspurger of Bloomington brought Rev. and Mrs. Augspurger home October 8, and visited at the home of Miss Elizabeth Schertz and her brothers, Dan and Earl.

Mr. Charles Shippert has been having a severe attack of siatic rheumatism. Let us remember him at the throne in prayer, as he surely needs our prayers.

The Ladies Aid met at Mrs. J. Garber's, October 2, and knotted a comforter for Rev. Lantz's mission, also donated food and used clothing.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Roth, Mr. and Mrs. Claris Roth and Claris Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Roth and Velma Schertz worshiped with us September 30, and spent the day at the home of P. A. Schertz.

Sunday, October 13, we had the pleasure of having quite a number worshiping with us from the East Bend Mennonite Church. Their church was closed because they are redecorating it.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Schertz and Evelyn visited with their sister, Mrs. Harold Schertz, at the Mennonite Hospital, October 13.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Bronn and her mother, Mrs. Mary Garber, and two sons, Elmer and Morris, visited at the home of John Garber and family.

PRAYER

Henry Van Dyke

These are the gifts I ask of Thee, Spirit serene—
Strength for the daily task;
Courage to face the road;
Good cheer to help me bear the traveler's load;
And for the hours of rest that come between,
An inward joy in all things heard and seen.

These are the sins I fain would have Thee take away—
Malice and cold disdain;
Hot anger, sullen hate;
Scorn of the lowly, envy of the great;
And discontent that casts a shadow gray
On all the brightness of a common day.

A MEDITATION

Fellow Traveler, on the pilgrimage of the Christian life, what is your success? Are you a radiant Christian? Have you been victorious over moral evil? Have you found real enjoyment in the Quiet Time? Has your life been kept open to God? Have you been able to overcome selfishness and pique and does the Holy Spirit give you guidance?

So many of us Christians are fellow pilgrims with the Hebrews (6:1), we are still busy with the rudimentary principles of the Christian life or perhaps have become dull and listless when we should be going "on unto perfection." We have read again and again the parable of the sower and were unmindful that we belonged to the seed-class sown among the thorns (Luke 8:14). Perhaps our fault has been that we have harbored a sense of moral sin and could not or would not break from it. When imagination and evil are in conflict, imagination always wins—at such times imagination must be centered on God, Calvary, goodness, and helping others.

Let us meditate upon what Christ would have the Holy Spirit do in our lives. When tempted, let us turn our evil imaginations to God and make a long nose at the devil. Let us practice the Quiet Time more faithfully and expect guidance from the Holy Spirit who desires to direct us into all truth. Ere long it will surprise you at the new joy and radiance which will be yours. You will want to bring souls for Christ. You will have a new sense of righteousness and a new experience of being guided and used of God. Do you desire to be a son or daughter of God? You may have this high place if you will. Will you begin? He will do His part.

INSPIRATION

(In memory of the first General Conference Retreat, 1935)

I walk alone to the point of inspiration,
And with the omnipotent God commune;
In this life of great preparation,
His loving kindness to my soul is a boon.

"Ye believe in God, believe also in me,"
Thus is the Saviour's plea.
How can my heart troubled be
When to Him I can flee.

The mountains are as a fortress, ours is God,
We shall soon go down to the valley deep,
Our daily life to plod.
Fear not, we are His sheep.

This spot on earth is so wondrous,
But in His Word I find the promise
Of a greater place—"My Father's house."
That will be real paradise.

It is up to us to keep the windows of our souls so clean that the light of hope and joy can shine in".

Investments In Health

Proverbs 4:20-27

This topic is not to be a Red Cross lesson on health, neither is it to be a day when the health nurse comes to school, nor a lesson in hygiene, although each one of these is very much worth while. Our topic tonight should show the relationship between true Christian conduct and personal health. When we read the divine precept that "the soul that sinneth it shall die," we know what is spoken concerning the soul is also meant for the body. Paul writes to the Corinthians (6:19), "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own"?

The writer of Proverbs exhorts him who would live the abundant life to attend to his words of admonition and warning and hold steadfastly to those truths. He tells us that his words are life and will result in health to the body. The child of God is not to be too careful of his body even unto selfishness, but neither should we burn our candle at both ends. Anything which hinders the full life—physically, morally, or spiritually—becomes sin either if it be our own body or the life of someone else that is affected. That is the reason why the church of Jesus Christ should be mightily concerned with all problems which have to do with intemperance.

In planning your program do not forget to stress the devotional aspect of the service. It would be well to have periods of sentence prayer and urge members and others to offer a brief prayer. It is a sad index to a Christian's life if he must confess that he cannot pray.

If possible find a Christian doctor or nurse who will address your group on the relation of moral evil to physical health.

Questions

1. How thankful should we be for good health?
2. How are persons effected who have lost health or some member of the body like the eye or a foot?
3. What is the relative importance in regards to physical health and spiritual health?
4. In what ways is it true that "the soul that sinneth he shall die"?
5. How careful should we be of our health?
6. What are some of the outstanding evils effecting health today?
7. To what extent can bodies be healed by faith today?

What Great Things Hath God Wrought For Us?

(Thanksgiving) Luke 8:26-39

This Thanksgiving topic was made famous because of its being the first message sent over the telegraph lines after Samuel Morse had made his wonderful discovery. It is to be found in its original form in Numbers 23:23, "It shall be said of Jacob and of Israel, What hath God wrought"? Our Scripture portion relates the incident of the Gadarene demoniac and the words of Jesus when He sent the healed man away, saying: "Return to thine own house and show how great things God hoth done unto thee."

Material blessings are an evidence of God's love and care. But in reality things material are secondary. Quite often we think the only reason why we should be thankful is if our granaries and storehouses are all filled, and if every crop was abounding in plenty. If one crop is lacking we hear someone say, "Why should I be thankful when our cabbage was such a total failure"? Just as though cabbage is of greater importance than the love of God and the abiding presence of the Holy Spirit enriching and enobling our lives.

Or perhaps our reason for being thankful is because we happen to have more of some tangible goods than our neighbor. If that is the case we have not gone deep enough to make our thankfulness mean a thing. We are just as snobbish as the Pharisee who thanked God that he was not as other men. True thankfulness springs from the heart which has full fellowship and communion with the Divine and acknowledges suffering as just as much of an evidence of a sympathetic and loving Father-heart as full granaries and good health.

Questions

1. Give a brief history of our American Thanksgiving Day.
2. Is Thanksgiving an evidence of plenty or should it be an attitude and a relationship?
3. In what way should Luke 8:39a be a rightful spirit of Thanksgiving?

4. What are some wrong attitudes in the Thanksgiving season?
5. Can we be truly thankful without sharing?
6. In what ways may suffering be a cause for thankfulness?
7. Show how the Christian Gospel is our greatest gift.

Simple Things

Give me the simple things close to my home,
The things that are familiar, old and dear.
I do not have to wander far, or roam
The Seven Seas—when I have splendor here.

Let those who will seek promised lands afar,
For treasures so remote I shed no tear.
Why should I strive to reach a distant star
When heaven with all its beauty is right here?

What Makes A Movie Helpful Or Harmful?

I Cor. 15:33; I Tim. 4:12

"See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil."

Pre-Prayer

Help me to say nothing that I would be ashamed of saying if Jesus should come; do nothing that I would be ashamed of doing if Jesus should come; go to no place where I would be ashamed of being found if Jesus should come.

The first thing that we should do is to distinguish between moving pictures as to what we include in movies. Most generally we think of the pictures shown in the theatres, and often other places of community meeting in the smaller towns, as movies. These are merely for entertainment. There is another type of moving pictures known as educational pictures. The helpful characteristics of this type of pictures are namely: the portrayal of historical events, with characters true to life and possessing character points that may be attractive; use of travel scenes, showing customs and peoples of other lands; and teaching of moral and religious lessons by dignified and well-supervised films.

This type of picture is not shown as much and used more in the educational system as our method of teaching.

The evils of the movies overbalance, by far, any good that can be claimed for them. It is true that in recent times the movies have reached a new low level in evil. This situation has given rise to an organization, sponsored chiefly by the Catholics, whose purpose is the purification of the screen. Because of the millions of children and young people who daily attend the movies, and because of the demoralizing influence of some of the pictures, it is to be hoped that their effort for betterment may be crowned with a measure of success.

Movies could be made a power for good, but it is doubted seriously whether there will ever be any great lasting improvement in their moral tone. As the situation now is, the forces of evil are largely the producers and promotors of the moving picture industry. In their mad quest for money, they do not even scruple to keep their doors open on the Lord's Day. It is said that a stream can never rise higher and purer than its source. Though there may be exceptions, the moral tone of Hollywood, where most American films are made, is not such as could have the approval of the followers of Christ. A sort of halo of glory and a glazing-over of respectability, as given the divorce evil, because of the pace set by the Hollywood stars who marry and separate at will. Surely a movie is harmful which includes off-color scenes of immorality where the sacredness of the home and the marital relationship is minimized; surely a movie is harmful which includes scenes of banditry, or of murder, and where the criminal is often made the hero. These things are so harmful that Oriental countries and Turkey recently forbade the showing of movies of this type in their countries.

As relates to the movies and the Christian's relation thereto, we are ever to keep in mind that we are our brother's keeper, that we are never to offend, or afford occasion for stumbling to our weaker brother for whom Christ died, and that where there is a doubt as to whether a thing is right or wrong, we should always give Christ the benefit of the doubt.

Questions

1. If young Christians follow Paul's advice to

Timothy would there be any place for movies in his or her life?

2. In what way have commercialized amusements hindered the proper use of the Lord's Day?
3. Should movie places be allowed to remain open on Sundays? Why?
4. Have movies affected the home life of America?
5. Can a person be a true Christian and lust after the things of the world?
6. Is there anything else in which I could spend my time and money, and be profited more than by attending a movie?

What Makes A Radio Program Helpful Or Harmful?

James 5:10; I Thess. 1:8

"I will do marvels, such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation." Ex. 34:10.

Pre-Prayer

That we may have the power to stand for the things that are high and noble and that we may not allow ourselves to drift from "assembling ourselves together" as Christian people.

In this day and age we have come to see one of the greatest agencies for the dissemination of information. Its possibilities for good in the preaching of the Gospel of Christ to shut-ins, to prisoners, to those on the high seas, and to others in out-of-way places is beyond the imagination of man to compute. Only when the scroll of eternity is unfurled will it be fully known how many hearts have been cheered and inspired because of the soulful hymns of the church which go out over the air.

A radio program is helpful when it brings good music, inspiring address, historical information, current events of importance, political happenings, clean dramas, poetry and entertainment. It can widen one's knowledge of affairs near at home and afar off and give inspiration from travel, school, home and church.

A radio program is harmful when it is vulgar in its language, when its music is cheap and uninspiring, when its drama is bloodthirsty and sordid. It is harmful when it advertises through the spoken word those things which oppose physical and moral well-being, such as cigarettes, liquor, and gambling. It is harmful when it belittles religious and sacred things, when it makes light of sacred institutions, such as marriage, the home, and the church.

The radio, too, has the harm of overindulgence. It may be a foe to the study of home lessons for students, and it may create a taste for unwholesome habits of thought and recreation.

Watch that the daily devotional programs coming over the air, while of untold value, are not substituted for times of personal, private devotionals, when God speaks to us as we read His Word, and when we speak to God in prayer.

Watch that radio programs, however good, do not interfere with times of quiet and meditation in the home. In this stressful day, our nerves become overwrought and taut. They need relaxation and quiet, at times, and for this purpose God established the home.

Watch that a religious service broadcast over the air is not a substitute for our attending the public worship service of our churches when it it physically possible for us to attend. There are no substitutes for the collective assembling of God's people in the house of the Lord. There we receive the encouragement and help which comes by contacting with our fellow Christians. There the warmth of our handshake and contagion of our smile encourage other hearts.

Questions

1. What type of radio program do I listen to, and why?
2. Is the radio helping to fulfill Jesus' command that the Gospel should be preached to every creature?
3. Has the radio helped to get people to go to church or do they substitute radio worship service for church worship service?
4. Can one be a Christian and consistently absent himself from the house of the Lord on the Lord's Day?
5. Is it possible for the radio gospel messages to help us to live better and nobler lives during the week?

Bearing one another's burdens is very different from bearing down on them.

The hardest thing in the garden of life is digging up the root of evil.

Topic.—God's Gift To Me

Acts 17:28; John 1:16, 17

Six of God's gifts to me are mentioned in the Daily Readings for today.

My body. I Cor. 6:19, 20. How often have you thanked God for your body? Most of us are well and strong. I hope we think of our strong bodies as a gift from God instead of just taking them for granted. There are people whose bodies are never well, yet often we find these people happy and praising God for other blessings.

"One night during one of the Chapman Alexander meetings, a poor paralytic was wheeled down the aisle and placed just before the platform. During the song service, Mr. Alexander caught sight of him, and asked, 'What is your favorite hymn? We will sing it.' Immediately he answered, 'Count Your Blessings.' There was no wail, no complaint from the poor cripple. He had a heart full of thanksgiving to God for the hundred other blessings which God had showered upon him, and he was not complaining because he was crippled.

"If we have sound bodies, we should thank God for them. If, however, we are called upon to suffer sickness and disease, we should still thank God for other blessings which He has bestowed upon us."

The mind of Christ. Phil. 2:5. A blessing often not thought of is the fact that God can change our minds and cause us to think rightly.

Salvation. Rom. 6:17, 18. Several times during the past year I have heard a group of people sing a chorus which begins, "It's a great thing to be saved." They always sing it happily. Could anything be better than this one of God's gifts? What a blessing it is to know that we are saved and that salvation is for all who believe on Christ! That changes the whole life. A woman in a meeting one night heard John 5:24, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." She gave her heart to Jesus and went home very happy, for she knew by that verse that she was saved. But the next morning she was worried. The happy feeling was gone and she feared that she was not saved after all. Her little boy said, "Why, mother, has your verse changed"? Of course it had not. The mother's heart was filled with peace then as she realized that God's Word does not change and she had salvation because she had taken Christ as her Savior.

Confidence. Rom. 8:28. Many times we have experiences that we would avoid if we could. Things happen that seem all wrong and it is hard to see how this verse can be true. Even at such times we should remember that God has not forgotten. One night there was a terrible storm on the Newfoundland coast which endangered the lives of fishermen. About midnight the home of one of these men burned to the ground. In the morning after the men had landed safely, the wife told her husband about the fire. She was surprised to find that the light had led them to shore. Otherwise they must have died. I wonder if they thought of Rom. 8:28?

What manner of love! I John 3:1. It is not necessary to say much about this verse. We need only remind ourselves that everything worth while that we have is given to us because of God's great love.

The Savior. John 3:16. As we near Thanksgiving Day and try to count God's gifts to us, we must thank Him for our Savior, who lived and died for us and is now living and coming again.

There are many other of God's gifts not mentioned in the Daily Readings. Another is the Bible, of which we spoke two weeks ago. Along with that we think of the church.

Then we do not want to forget the more ordinary gifts, such as food, clothing, home, friends. See how many you can think of.

Plans for the Meeting

Have each Junior bring to the meeting slips of paper on each of which is written one of God's gifts. Each Junior may bring as many as he wishes. Have these placed in a box prepared for the purpose. One or two adults should take charge of the box and after all Juniors have made their contribution, sort the papers, laying aside all duplicates. Now make a list of all the gifts named. The superintendent will find plenty of material here for a talk or study. When making the assignment a week before the meeting, quote Jas. 1:17, which shows that everything good is a gift from God.

Questions

1. How does counting our blessings help us to appreciate them?
2. How may I show my appreciation for God's gifts to me?
3. Why has God given us so many gifts?
4. How would God have us use these gifts?
5. How may we share them with others?

Topic.—Living Thankful Lives

Eph 5:1, 2, 20 (Thanksgiving)

There is a story told of two men who had been ill. One day when both were feeling better they were asked how they were feeling. One said, "I am better today." The other said, "I was worse yesterday." He had not learned to be thankful.

What is a thankful life? Is it one that takes a great deal of time to thank God on Thanksgiving Day and then forgets all about it the rest of the year? No, indeed! It is good that we have this one day to think especially of His goodness to us, but a thankful life is one that lives as well as says, "Thanks." If you are really thankful to your father or mother for a gift you say, "Thank you," then take good care of the gift and try real hard to please the one who gave it.

That is the way we should live thankful lives before God. Thank Him with our lips, then use wisely all that He has given us and try to please Him. Last week we spoke of some of His gifts. Today we think of how we may prove that we are thankful.

We all know the story of the ten lepers that Christ healed. Only one thought to say "Thanks," and Jesus sorrowfully said, "Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine"?

In Acts 3, we read of a lame man who was healed. He praised God before the people. All knew what God had done for him.

As we read of Paul, we find another way to live a thankful life. He showed his gratitude to God by going about preaching and working that others might be saved. He never tired of telling what the Lord had done for him.

We have, then, another group of three ways to live thankful lives. First, thanking God in words, then telling others of His goodness, and lastly, by serving Him faithfully.

Plans for the Meeting

As you think today of ways of showing gratitude to God, plan to bring cheer to someone who has less than your own Juniors, for which to be thankful.

Questions

1. What is a thankful life?
2. Why should we live thankful lives?
3. Tell of Bible men who showed gratitude to God.
4. What is the good of a special Thanksgiving Day?
5. How do you think we should spend the day?

About Giving Thanks

There are some people who give thanks unto the Lord in their hearts. This is a very good thing to do. When we thank the Lord in our heart it is not a put-on thankfulness. It is a real thankfulness, for that which is in the heart is real, whether it be good or bad.

But even though we have a thankful heart for the goodness of the Lord to us, that is not enough. He wants us to bring praise unto His worthy name by thanking Him as well with our lips. It is a help to others when we thank the Lord in their hearing sometimes. The Psalmist David said, "I will give thanks in the great congregation: I will praise Thee among much people." (Psa. 35:18.)

Are we ashamed to thank and praise the Lord when we are in a company of people? If we are, the Lord will be ashamed of us before His Father and all the holy angels. If we are ashamed of our Lord, we do not love Him very much.

A certain hymn says we shall count our many blessings and name them one by one. But we cannot do this, for they are too many to count. Many of our blessings come to us in ways which do not seem like blessings. Therefore we would not think of counting them among our blessings. But if we are thankful for ALL things we cannot miss any of them, and thus the Lord will be pleased. —Selected.

Devotion to duty is a fire that warms us, but worldly ambition is a fire that consumes us.

Ezekiel Teaches Personal Responsibility

Lesson Text.—Ezekiel 33:7-16

Golden Text.—So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Rom. 14:12.

Last Sunday we studied the downfall of Judah as a nation in Palestine. The Babylonians captured the city of Jerusalem and took the people into captivity. There were three groups of Jews after 586 B. C. The largest group remained in Palestine in the rural territories and under the rule of Babylonia. The second group was taken to Egypt where they formed the nucleus of that large group of Jews surrounding and in Alexandria from 200 B. C. to the time of Jesus. In this group was Jeremiah. The third group which was the smallest, but the leaders of the Hebrews, went to Babylon. In this group were such as Daniel and Ezekiel. The destruction of Jerusalem marked the division between Hebrew history and Jewish history. In Hebrew history the prophets were the dominant figures, but now during the captivity and after it is the influence of the priest. The Hebrews never again had a political rule except the brief one hundred years of the Maccabees from 163 B. C. to 63 B. C. They now devote their energy to religion rather than national and political hopes. They become a church rather than a nation. They live under the Babylonians, Persians, Greeks, Syrians, and Rome. As a place to live Babylonia was better than Palestine. Babylonia was a rich plain where crops grew bountifully. Navigable canals brought moisture to the soil as well as serving as arteries for traffic. Such a canal was the river Chebar, where Ezekiel had his vision. The Jews were treated kindly by the Babylonian government. As long as they paid their imperial tax and did not rebel they were free to keep their customs and their religion. There was only one restriction: they could not go back to Palestine. The captivity had a great effect on Judah's religion. They lost the faith in their nationalism and their faith became more spiritual. Their Jehovah now became the God of all the nations. They looked upon their experience in Babylonia not as a defeat, but as a sifting time, a time of purifying, through which God was getting them ready for a great spiritual task. This, of course, was not true of all the Jews in captivity. Some become so interested and absorbed in the good soil in Babylonia and their prosperity materially that they lost their faith and accepted the worship of Babylonian gods. This is the environment and atmosphere in which Ezekiel did his work. Ezekiel was the master mind of the Jews while they were in captivity. He was a priest and the son of a priest of the temple at Jerusalem. He, therefore, had splendid training for his task. He was born during the reign of Josiah and undoubtedly often heard Jeremiah preach. It was obout five years after he was in Babylonia that he had a remarkable vision and call to his life work. He was a prophet by nature and a priest by education. He at once became the spiritual leader of the exiles. Ezekiel saw that nationalistic hopes were gone, and so he set about to build a church instead of a nation. He was a preacher, pastor, writer, and organizer. One of the outstanding truths of his message to the exiles is personal responsibility for their sins. To us this seems so common that the statement is almost a platitude. But to the time of the exile the emphasis was on the nation. Israel sinned and Israel as a nation would be punished. But now Ezekiel emphasizes that the individual is responsible to God for his life. This very emphasis gave rise to the teaching of the law to all. As before mentioned, the Jews now become the people of a Book, the Jewish Scriptures. The result of this was two-fold. First it was during the exile that many of the books of the Old Testament were either written or compiled. In the second place it gave rise to the school for the Hebrews. Here they not only worshiped and read the Law on the Sabbath Day, but also taught the Law through the week to the children as well as adults. All this because each person was responsible to know the Law and to obey it.

Who was Ezekiel?

What did the captivity do for the Jews?

What definite contribution did Ezekiel make to Judaism?

How does Ezekiel emphasis on personal responsibility compare with that of Jesus?

The Return From Captivity

Lesson Text.—Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm 126:1-6

Golden Text.—The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad. Psalm 126:3.

The Sunday School lesson of October 27 historically should have come between last Sunday's lesson and this one. The Jews were taken into captivity in 586 B. C. under the Babylonian king Nebuchadnezzar. When he died, there was a succession of weak monarchs, the last of whom was Nabonidus, whose chief interest was in unearthing the treasures of the past rather than governing. That is why his son Belshazzar was prince-regent. During the weakness of these Babylonian rulers there was a new figure rising in a little province of Anshan, belonging to Media. He became so strong he finally seized the throne of Media. As King of Media Cyrus went on conquering until he became king of Persia in 549 B. C. Then he turned to Babylon, which was supposed to be impregnable. He, however, through the treachery of Babylonian priests, captured Babylon without a blow in 538 B. C.

Cyrus was one of the greatest men of history. He had a high personal character and was well trained. He was big-hearted, tolerant, wise, ond daring. He was a born leader. Even one of the Hebrew writers refers to him as the Messiah. He particularly had a genius for getting loyalty from his subjects. He allowed freedom to his subjects, ruling them through their native princes. So it was that the Jews were allowed to go back to Jerusalem which we call the Restoration. He not only returned the sacred vessels of the Jews, but encouraged them to rebuild the temple in Jerusalem.

There were three returns the first under Zerubbabel, the second under Nehemiah, and the third under the scribe Ezra. Our lesson deals with the first return. Not very many of the Jews cared to return. The journey to Jerusalem was eight hundred miles and full of danger; Palestine was desolate; there would be no homes awaiting their return. On the other hand it was much more difficult to earn a living in Palestine than in Babylonia. A large majority remained in Babylonia. Let it be said, however, that they furnished the finances for the minority to go as well as financed much of the building of the temple. But a small group did return with joy under Zerubbabel, the grandson of Jehoiachim, and of the house of David. This return particularly brought joy to the older ones as they saw their homeland again. It was after all out of this remnant that returned that five hundred years later Jesus came.

What circumstances brought about the return of the Jews?

Why did not all the Jews wish to return?

Was Cyrus led of God to allow the Jews to return?

What significance is this return to us as Christians?

THE BIBLE IS GOOD READING

Bible reading is not only of importance to religious people, but is education and profit to everyone.

Everywhere throughout this amazing volume are the most extraordinary experiences of every kind. It is the most interesting Book ever written. It is more entrancing than the Arabian Nights.

"The immense moral influence of the Bible, though, of course, infinitely the most important, is not the only power it has for good. In addition, there is the unceasing influence it exerts on the side of good taste, of good literature, of proper sense of proportion, of simple and straightforward writing and thinking."

"Wherever the moral standard is being lifted up, wherever life is becoming larger in the vision that directs it and richer in its fruitage, the improvement is traceable to the Bible and to its influence. The Book of Books has lived and grown through the centuries; we have celebrated the Three Hundredth Anniversary of the King James Translation. It has stamped its impress upon the map of the world; its boundaries are clearly marked."

The Bible is the most quotable book in all literature; all of the greatest classics taken together have but a fraction of the sayings in the Bible that fasten themselves in the mind.

It meets all the questions of life. It is harmonious throughout and is applicable as a final authority in all matters of human conduct, to all ages and every civilized country.—Selected.

The increased enrollment at Bethel College, Bluffton College and Freeman Junior College is very encouraging. The figures for Freeman are not available, but the latest reports show that Bluffton has a total enrollment of 210 and Bethel has 315 students. It is particularly gratifying to note the increase in the number of Mennonite students. Bluffton has over 80 Mennonite students and Bethel over 190.

On December 24, 1884, he was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth McQuarry. They were permitted to share the blessings of married life for more than fifty years and celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last December in the circle of friends, with a program of praise and gratitude to God for His blessings. One son, Samuel L., was born to this union.

Brother Gerhart was for 41 years an active and influential member of the First Mennonite Church of Philadelphia, serving as trustee, treasurer, Sunday School teacher, and assistant superintendent. In 1916 he moved to a farm near Worcester in Montgomery Co., and when Grace Mennonite Church in Lansdale was organized, he became an active member of this new congregation.

Brother Gerhart died on August 5, 1935, aged 76 years, 11 months, and 2 days. He is survived by his wife, one son, three grandchildren, and one sister. Her father died and is buried in his native country, but her mother came to America with the remaining members of her family in the year 1852, settling in Ontario, Canada. A few years later she moved her family to Jefferson County, Iowa. Here Mary grew to womanhood. She accepted Christ as her personal Savior in her youth, uniting with the Amish Mennonite church, later transferring her membership to the Mennonite Brethren in Christ church of Trenton, Iowa. On February 15, 1875, she was united in marriage with Clayton Scheffel. This union was blessed with two daughters; both preceded their mother in death, Catharine died in her childhood, Mary lived until about seven years ago. None of the immediate members of her family remain. In her declining years she made her home with relatives. During her last illness she was in the home of her nephew, John Wenger, near Wayland, Iowa, where she passed peacefully away October 12, 1935, lacking only a few hours perhaps of being 84 years of age. She leaves one granddaughter, six greatgrandchildren, and a large number of other relatives to mourn their loss.

He was a member of the Mission Church at Cleveland, Ohio. He came to the Mennonite Old Peoples Home, August 4, 1932, and was regular in his church attendance here as long as his physical condition permitted him to do so. His wife preceded him in death. He leaves to mourn his departure four daughters and five sons: Anna Koch, Cleveland, Ohio; Esther Bauerle, Clifton, N. J.; Elsie Peterson, Salina, Kansas; Genevieve Weindel, Salina, Kansas; Otto Weindel, Cleveland, Ohio; Howard Weindel, Cleveland, Ohio; Carl Weindel, Cleveland, Ohio; Elmer Weindel, New York; Herbert Weindel, St. Joseph, Mo., also seven grandchildren and a host of friends.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

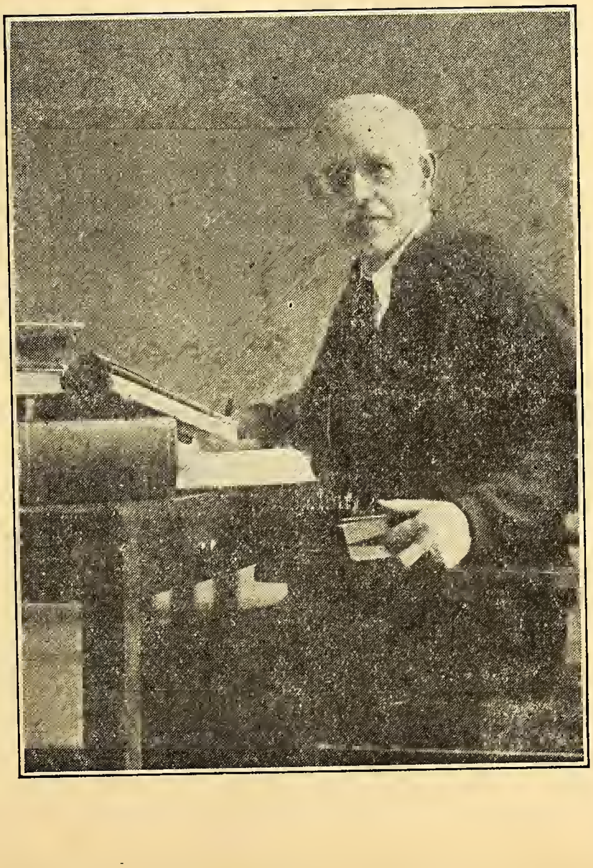
is our senior missionary, Lame Deer, Montana. He has worked among the Cheyennes for forty-four years, and has reduced their language to writing. After giving them a large dictionary and numerous minor translations, he finished the New Testament this year, and had it printed by the American Bible Society. The photo shows him at his work table.



The American Bible Society, New York, has just sent him the following letter, of which we received a copy:

"At a recent meeting of the American Bible Society you were voted a life long honorary member of this society, as a recognition for your translation of the New Testament into Cheyenne.

"It is a pleasure to send you the enclosed certificate as a token of the high esteem which you have with our society on account of your long time service among the Cheyennes, and the special work in which the Bible Society gladly participated.

"May strength and health be given you for future days of widened happy and fruitful service among the people where you so long have been permitted to further the interest of the Kingdom of God."

(The New Testament in Cheyenne can be bought for $1.00 as a souvenir.)

The two Sisters Martha Burkhalter and Augusta Schmidt are leaving November 15, for India on the S. S. "Coolidge" from San Francisco. May the Lord protect them on the journey!

JUBILEE MISSIONARY NUMBER

The Jubilee Conference has passed into history, but the Jubilee Year is not yet over, and so it seems fitting to make this number a Jubilee Number. All missionaries have been asked to send in both a pictorial and a written contribution to represent themselves to the mission friends, so that also those who could not attend the conference may the better share in this celebration.

The cuts have practically all been sent in (or photos), but the articles have not all come, which makes it necessary to use extracts of the Jubilee Mission Report.

It should perhaps be explained that the cuts are mostly property of the missionaries, and so do not cost us much. Some cuts are somewhat old, but to most of the readers they are new, and they will enjoy them just the same. We must save even on such a mission number. If it were not for that, we would reprint the whole mission report as read before the conference, but that would be quite expensive.

Read, Please, This Whole Number

When the first two foreign missionaries, Paul and Barnabas, gave their first mission report to the church at Jerusalem, 50 A. D. (which was also a kind of jubilee year), the record says: "They reported the conversion of Gentiles, and caused great joy among all the brethren." That is even today the purpose of these reports, to cause joy among the mission friends, because "The joy in the Lord is our strength." And we certainly need all the strength we can get, to continue our work. We need strength of faith and love and hope in order to pray, work, and give as we should. Therefore we plead with our mission friends to read the mission reports, and also the conference report, which contains the Jubilee Report.

The Plan for Systematic Giving

This is also in the conference report. But it ha already been published in our church papers. Systematic giving is the easiest and most adequate giving as experience shows. Read also the testimony as i will appear in the papers (or may have appeared whe this issue is printed). The plan has been accepted b the conference for presentation to the churches fo final action.

3481 Souls Have Been Saved on Our Fields

That is worth more than all it costs. Who woul not rejoice over them! If the angels in heaven rejoice over one sinner who repents, how much mor should we rejoice over these 3481!

Thank the Lord for All Gifts!

And we thank also the donors. The fact that we could celebrate this jubilee after 75 years of work without debts is a special reason for rejoicing. Now let us see to it that no more debts are made.

We are glad to report that we could make all payments this year when they became due, and that we can begin to return furloughed missionaries. The two Sisters Martha Burkhalter and Augusta Schmidt are planning to leave November 15th from San Francisco on the S. S. "Coolidge." Brother and Sister Boehr are planning to leave a little later, if their health permits. We will yet need about $10,000 for this year.

In the picture of the mission group at the General Conference you will find three persons marked by crosses. From left to right: A. E. Kreider, new Board member; Mrs. R. A. Goerz, and Mrs. Regier Entz, officers of the Women's Mission Societies.)

LITTLE YU JAN'S VISIT TO HEAVEN

Frieda N. Sprunger

(Yü Jan is pronounced like "Yü Rän")

It was a happy day for Suen Yü Jan when it was told her she might enter the Hua Mei School at Kai Chow as a pupil. Just how that longing to be able to read came to her, we do not know. It may have come to her as her father, who is a Christian, daily gathered his family about him for family evening or morning worship, when each one who was able to read his or her verse in turn. She could not read, but longed to do so, especially as she, too, had learned to love the Lord Jesus.

She was such a little bit of a girl—scarcely more than nine years old. The fact that her parents were very poor and it was often hard for them to feed their little flock of children, may have had something to do with little Yü Jan's undernourished, undersized condition. It may have been due to the fact of the great poverty in the home that her parents were very anxious that someone undertake the school support for their little girl, for then not only would she learn to read and write, but would be fed as well.

Attending school and learning new things every day was all so different from staying at home constantly taking care of the baby, or going out to gather dry weeds, leaves, stubbles, and sticks that were to serve as fuel with which to cook their meals. How eagerly she went to classes, and with what joy she mingled with the other girls on the playground and in their bedroom (which was shared by about ten girls) as they prepared to retire for the night! Always there would be a radiant smile on her face as we met, accompanied by a deep, graceful bow with which she tried to show some of the gratitude she felt.

Thus passed the greater part of the first happy year in school. Before the year was quite completed she took ill and was taken home. The parents took care of her as best they could, but finally brought her to the hospital. Here the doctor and nurses also put forth every effort trying to combat the pneumonia that had laid its hold so heavily upon the little girl. Efforts seemed futile and the battle a losing one, for the little girl became weaker every day. The devoted father wept as he stood by the bedside, realizing that there was little hope for his little daughter's recovery.

"Do not weep, father," said Yü Jan, "I am going to Jesus, and it will be so much better there than here."

For some time she lingered, but gradually her breathing became slower. The eyes took on a peculiar glazed, set appearance and then closed slowly. The father, bending over the little form to note the last signs of life, could detect no motion or heaving of the breast, and felt that all was over. In a few moments the attending nurse would be drawing the sheet over the little face and the body be removed from the hospital room.

Suddenly the eyes opened, the lips moved, and little Yü Jan was speaking once more:

"Wo hui lai liao"! (I have come back), she said simply.

Slowly but surely her condition improved from that time on, to the surprise of those about her. As her strength returned, she would tell of what had taken place on the day when she had nearly "slipped away."

"I had come up to the very door of heaven," she would say, "and caught a glimpse of what was within the gate. I saw Jesus there, and He saw me. I saw Dr. Chai (who had died recently), and many others that I knew. Oh, it was all so beautiful"!

"But," she continued, "I was there only a very short time when Jesus came to me and said, 'Return to earth, little Yü Ran, go back to your home and to your studies. Prepare to serve me well and after you have labored for me for a while, you shall come here again.' And so I am here now."

Pray for little Yü Jan, that she may in truth come to be a true servant of God and that if He so will, the way may be open that she may continue her preparation, soon.

THE MOSLEMS IN OUR DISTRICT AND OUR OPPORTUNITY

The General Conference of Mennonites of North America is working a district which is in the extreme southern part of what is now called Hopei Province.

In the northern part of this district is a very large population of Mohammedans. The south suburbs of Tamingfu city, which borders this district, almost the entire suburbs is said to be Mohammedan.

When I first went to China in 1917, I had no idea that there were Mohammedans in China. I had heard of the "Three Religions of China," Confucianism, Fascism, and Buddhism, but that there was a "Fourth Religion," as Dr. Zwemer calls it, I had no knowledge of. My first acquaintance with Moslems was made in the central part of our field, at Kaichow (P'u Yang Hsien). Twice a week children's meetings were conducted on a certain street in this city and the children of a few Mohammedan families also attended. They were dressed like the other children, but their features were a bit different from those of Chinese children. Their eyes were big and bright and shiny black, and their faces were a bit angular. I visited their folks in their homes and found them and their kinsmen to be butchers. My first impression was that they commanded respect. — somewhat retiring and reserved, but friendly.

Later, when our place of worship was removed to another section of the city, I lost that contact and the Moslems were wiped out of my interest for a number of years.

A few years after my return from my first furlough they were brought to my attention again in another city of our district, farther north. However, I saw only an occasional woman in the courtyard. Their silent figures were a mute appeal and challenge to my heart.

Two years later I moved to another city, still farther north, and there I found a Mohammedan woman, a member of our church there. On visiting her home, I realized that I was in a Mohammedan section. Again those mute doors and closed courts presented a peculiar challenge to me. The Arabic hierogliphic script in white on a purple paper slip pasted on the lintels of their doors and on the door posts set them off from that of the Chinese homes.

I was introduced to several homes. I was received cordially, but here again was that same reserved and somewhat aristocratic bearing in men and women alike. My work occupied so much of my time that it was impossible for me to get better acquainted with them. But I would like to give the impressions I received as I went about my regular work in the church and the community.

They appear to be a distinctive people. There seems to be an air of wholesomeness about them, of character and stability and dependability. They are stronger built and better nourished than the average Chinese, who have a tendency to slouchiness. The men present a more manly appearance. Those of the scholarly type are slender and have oblong faces and the laboring class are rather sturdy, with square faces and big black eyes, alert and with a humerous twinkle in them. They look industrious and daring, or alert, as though they have a purpose which is worth working for.

They are engaged in various businesses: keepers of inns, of tea shops and other shops, traders of hides and animals; but those I came in closest contact with were the cartmen and butchers. As cartmen they revealed a jolly disposition, ever open to a good joke or jest. They usually had well fed animals of a better breed and they proved good cartmen. In winter they were dressed in sheep or goat skin furs, sometimes unlined, and caps of the same fashion. Their athletic jump, as they jumped off and on the cart, as they urged on their animals, made them more akin to the Europeans, in contrast to the sluggish and somewhat phlegmatic movements of the Chinese.

It occurred to me then, that they were of a different race, but I learned, on inquiry, that my Chinese friends were ignorant on this subject, although in their reference to the Moslems, they always evidenced an attitude of aloofness, as one would towards a foreigner, they were unconsciously strangers to them. Why it had not dawned on their conscious mind was perhaps due to the fact that the Moslems have absolutely adopted their dress, even bound feet, the plan of their homes and furnishings, and their food; differing only in that they abstain from pork and idol worship and that on their door post and lintels they have not the customary Chinese ideographs, but have the Arabis script. These were the outstanding outward appearances noticeable to the average Chinese and to us. They are further distinguished in that they have their own "Li-pai Sii" (temple), in which they worship.

The Moslem women also seem to be better built than the Chinese, their faces are somewhat large and angular, with prominent cheek bones. Their features seem to be even more distinctive than those of the men. They are rather retiring and quiet and yet there is a dignity about them that commands respect. They wear a black veil or a white cloth, turban fashion, wound around their head. They are unveiled. Their homes are neat and orderly in general, devoid of pictures and incense urns. Their children seem to be better nourished than the Chinese children. The women also present a cleaner appearance than the average Chinese women. One often finds the women dressed in gray, in contrast to the Chinese women who dress in the various shades of blue or black.

Although the houses and courts follow the plan of the Chinese home, as said, those I got into were different, in that I usually found in the courtyard hides spread out to dry, mostly cow hides, and piles of bones of sheep and goats, getting them ready for trade or sale.

For the winter of 1933-1934, I was called to a city in the extreme northern part of our field and was amazed to see the large Mohammedan population in the south suburb of the big city of Tamingfu. Here again I had the same experiences. It overwhelmed me to think that absolutely nothing was done for them, and I felt that we were neglecting a very important task God had laid at our very doors.

What could I do for them? was my next question I was confronted with difficulties. Here was a people who received me so wholeheartedly, unbiased, unprejudiced. They seemed to feel that missionaries had something in common with them, for did we not worship only one God? And did we not, like they, disapprove of idols and idol worship and the burning of incense? They knew about Jesus and Abraham and Isaac and Mohammed. I did not want to spoil that feeling of unconscious fellowship. There was something homey about it all. It drew me to them and my heart longed to get nearer them, and enter into their spiritual life.

As I entered their homes, they gave me the feeling which might be described as "Here is somebody who understands us." The women were not of the curious kind one usually finds among the uneducated Chinese women. In their faces was expressed an intelligence which was ready for teaching, if wisely and tactfully administered. They seemed of calm and undisturbed disposition and revealed a certain superiority, dignity and strength, perhaps intensified by their somewhat masculine faces and well built bodies.

I realized I had to be wise in my approach, lest I do the right thing in a wrong way, or as father would say: "Try to open the door the wrong way," push open the door when it needed a pull, or pull it when a gentle push would do it. My concern was: which way does the door open to give me entrance into their hearts?

This made me realize that I must review Mohammedanism, and in a special way study Mohammedanism in China, and I resolved that it should be my aim to study the subject as soon as the opportunity should present itself to me. I enrolled in the class on the study of Mohammedanism and particularly on "Moslems in China," which is to be followed up in closer study of the Moslems in our own field, should I return to China. I shall then try to get into personal contac with them, more so than I have been able before. shall try to establish friendship with them and try to understand their inner life.

As it is, I have to say with one of the other missionaries to the Mohammedans: "I know next to nothing" of the beliefs of the Moslems in our own field. Jus how do they carry on their worship in China? I know they have a mosque in each of the cities mentioned How much does it mean to them? How much do they get out of it? How much of a part do the women have in these worship services? Are they allowed to attend the services in the "Li-pai Sii," or temple, at certain hours? In what are they interested? I must get interested in what they are interested in, if I want to get them interested in what I am interested in. And I must become a friend to them, for people do not want the religion of their enemies.

Somehow I feel we are not only missing a great opportunity, but we are falling short of the great task God has laid at our very doors and some day we will have to give account for the neglect of this duty.

There are said to be 230 million Moslems in the world. In China the estimate is about twenty million. The magazine "Friend of Moslems" has an article in which the author, Hajj Muhammed Shakin Shaj Kugin, says, "that the last census of 1931 estimated fifty million Moslems for China." Hopei Province, the Province in which our General Conference has its mission work, has the largest Mohammedan population, and a province next to Hopei Province has the next largest population.

There are numerous mosques and schools in China, and Peiping even has a special mosque for women.

The Moslem women in China are not suppressed like the Moslem women of other lands, although they, too, occupy an inferior position in the home, but not as inferior as that of the average Chinese women. This makes it comparatively easy to get acquainted with the Chinese Moslem women and girls.

This article has been written in particular with the view of studying the Moslem people from a perspective, study the religions of China as a whole, in order to face my missionary call and task anew, and see where I might have failed in the fulfillment of this my mission, because of lack of understanding the people of the land. I have found this review most beneficial. It has been a serious rethinking of my missionary purpose and aim. I feel, we as a group of missionaries have fallen short of the great commission, "Go ye out into all the world, even the Moslem world, and preach to them also the Gospel, for we have a holy duty towards them and a great responsibility to make Christ known and outstanding to them, as the One who is far above their prophet Mohammed.

We are not only concerned about the 50,000,000 Moslems in China, but we should be just as much concerned about the children and the children's children, as one author puts it.

The Moslem is capable of change and modification. They are ready for a change. These changes are due to the influence and contacts with different races and customs of other countries. One author says, "that the spirit of the world during the reformation and renaissance, is the spirit of the present modern Moslem world."

Over a year ago four Moslem students from China were sent under escort of a leading middle school professor, named Sha, to enroll in the ancient Moslem University at Cairo. This University, Al-Azhar, is the educational hub or heart of the entire Moslem world. The student body then totalled 9,200. The The President Az-Zawahiri, of the Board of Directors, has two great aims: 1. To conserve the ancient system in which the student may choose and regulate his course of study without limit of time. 2. To establish and foster a modern system divided into four divisions: A primary; a middle (high school); collegiate; and normal. The primary covers four years; the middle five years, and includes, besides theological and Arabic, courses in history, civics, and hygiene. The collegiate covers four years, leading to the degrees in arts, law and philosophy; finally there is the normal department for two years, which comprises teaching and preaching.

Al-Azhar was founded in 972 A. D. and has five branch schools. These have more than 10,000 pupils and they come from various countries, like Afghanistan, Irak, Yemen, Syria, Hedjaz, Palestine, Turkey, Jugo-Slavia, Roamia, South and West Africa, etc.

The Moslems in Egypt on hearing that Moslem students were coming from China, were very much elated. Within one week the fame of the Chinese Moslem students spread all over Egypt. The presence of these students in Cairo should be of great interest to the missionary body. It will mean a reformation for the Chinese Moslems.

Little schools on modern lines are springing up wherever there are mosques in China and are evidences of a new day. The old fashioned school still struggles on with flocks of orderless youth still sitting about in the mosque enclosures chanting with glorious din Arabic phrases written by their teacher on their wooden pallets, but these schools are fighting a losing battle. (Extracts from Geo. K. Harris article in the "Moslem World"—Al-Azhar through Chinese Spectacles.)

Moslems hold important positions in Central Government offices, Provincial offices, on newspapers and in schools in almost every province, and there are more than ten kinds of Moslem magazines and papers in Chinese.

Should all this not present a tremendous challenge to us to get them in contact with and under the influence of the Gospel? They seek salvation in the five meritorious acts of Islam: Creed, prayer, fasting, alms, and pilgrimages. Why not present to them Christ, the One who gives salvation, free and freely?

They long for fellowship with people of kindred spirits and they feel that spirit of likemindedness among us missionaries due to our common belief in One God, and the dispproval of images. Why not give them this fellowship and learn to understand them and meet their need and get them interested in what we believe, and thus link them up with that higher and deeper fellowship, with the Divine Christ, even their Lord and Savior.

The Moslem students are beginning to study their religion, and they will modernize much to suit the present situation, and we must be aware of this and keep our eyes open. A great help along these lines are the magazines "Moslem World" and the "Friends of Moslem," then we must be familiar with the Moslem papers and magazines. And above all, we must be thoroughly familiar with our own Bible in order to give them intelligent answers to their questions. And we must be familiar with their Koran and their belief. And we ourselves must be sure of our own faith and belief and know that we stand on rock foundation and so be able to give a clear testimony of the faith within us.

DEDICATION OF NEW WOMEN'S WARD AT BETHESDA LEPER HOME

P. A. Penner

Champa, C. P., India.— The tenth day of September was a red letter day in the Bethesda Leper Home. On this day the Commissioner, Mr. C. F. Waterfall, C. I. E., I. C. S., laid the cornerstone of the Rani Mankumari Devi Silver Jubilee Ward. This is to be a brick ward containing three rooms each 12x14 feet, and having two verandas running lengthwise on either side of the building. Each room is to house four leper women. But, suppose we start at the beginning. In the month of April, Mr. Waterfall visited the Leper Home and gave it not only a thorough inspection, but inquired minutely into the further needs of this growing institution. He left us with this impression that the government might be willing to help us in the erection of needed buildings. That not many gifts came from Indians, who really ought to help their own people, surprised him, and although I have no authority for saying so, he may have mentioned this fact in the presence of well-to-do Indians. Perhaps in some other way the urgent need for more accommodation for lepers in this Home came to the notice of the better class Indians of this area. Be that as it may, about a month after the visit of Mr. Waterfall, the Rani Mankumari Devi of Pandaria graciously offered a sufficient sum of money to erect a ward for twelve women lepers. The cornerstone of this ward was laid on September 10th.

September is a rainy month in India, and hence some fears were entertained lest our ceremony be drowned. Sure enough, on the evening of the 9th of September it not only rained, but poured, and during the greater part of the night heavy rains fell. When morning dawned, clouds were still hanging low, and shortly after six o'clock rain came down in torrents. We were somewhat disappointed, but my wife tried to cheer us by saying, "Rain before seven stops before eleven." It did. At ten, the clouds lifted and at the fixed time of eleven o'clock A. M., our invited friends were in their places in the commodious church in the Leper Home. Invitations had been sent to prominent Indian friends, Hindoos, and Mohammedans, as well as to a number of Europeans. Unfortunately only the missionaries of Janjgir could be present. The others were unable to share our joys because of either being on the hills or the impassibility of our mud paved roads.

On the platform were Mr. B. A. Smellie, the Deputy Commissioner, an Indian Christian; next to him was Mr. C. F. Waterfall, the Commissioner; to his left was Mr. Ramsaran Singh, the Zamindar of Champa; last the Diwan (Manager) of the Rani Mankumari. The Rani herself was unable to be present. On either side of the platform sat the invited guests, and in the front about 425 lepers. The church was well filled.

After a rousing song by our lepers, and invocation, the chairman, Mr. Smellie, introduced the Commissioner, who was to give the main address besides laying the cornerstone. Mr. Waterfall began his address with a quotation from the Bible and then went on to show the terrible condition of the leper in olden times and the pitiable condition of lepers in our days, dwelling upon the ostracism which lepers are compelled to endure. Then he continued to show what is being done for the 20,000 lepers of our province and the opportunities for service still open. All that heard Mr. Waterfall, realized that he is a warm friend of lepers.

Following Mr. Waterfall, the Superintendent of the Leper Home gave a brief history of this institution, showing how from 2 lepers on April 27, 1902, and a few ramshackle bamboo huts the institution has grown to 560 inmates, living in comfortable wards. The superintendent made it plain that this is a Christian institution, although attendance upon divine services is not a condition of admittance.

The chairman then made a few concluding remarks, and Mr. M. M. Mohanti, the Christian Manager Court of Wards, moved a vote of thanks to the Commissioner for his presence. The whole audience then went to the site of the contemplated ward. Here Mr. Isaac took charge of the ceremony. He had so suspended the simple stone that with little effort the stone could be lowered where it should rest. Mr. Isaac, who is the builder of this ward, as indeed in charge of all building operations, led in a word of prayer and then the Commissioner said: "In the name of the Mission to Lepers and at the request of the Rani Mankumari Devi of Pandariya, I place this stone upon the foundation of the Rani Mankumari Devi Silver Jubilee Ward." A little spreading of cement under the stone concluded his part of the ceremony. With the help of a mason or two, Mr. Isaac put the stone in its proper position. Then while standing at attention those that could sang "God Save the King."

Here is going to be the first building erected by funds from an Indian lady of wealth. May the Lord bless her for her share in alleviating suffering.

Although the Rani Sahiba could not be present, yet we were her guests at tea and sweet meats served on the veranda of our bungalow. She was also thoughtful enough to give a good helping of sweets to our large leper family—560 members.

The erection of this ward has been begun, and the Lord willing, it will be formally opened and dedicated during the first week of the new year. We hope to have with us at that time Mr. W. H. P. Anderson, the General Secretary, London.

Our prayer is that all those suffering women that will occupy this ward, may find Him who was a friend of lepers—Jesus. W. F. Unruh led in closing prayer.

TWO URGENT REQUESTS FOR PRAYER

A Special Occasion for Intercession

On the mission field of our church in India the annual Missionary Conference is to convene from November 22 to 27, 1935.

The first two days are set aside exclusively for Bible study, meditation, testimony, and prayer in preparation of what is to follow. Sunday comes in between as a further day in special close fellowship with God to strengthen the spiritual equipment. The last three days will be devoted to routine business.

During this transition period difficult problems loom up that are hard to solve. Therefore all churches are sincerely urged jointly to burden in prayer for all that can emerge from a conference of this nature here on the field. Prayer changes things!

In the name of the staff,

P. W. Penner, Secretary-Treasurer.

Janjgir, C. P., India, October 3, 1935.

Another Similar Need for Intercession

At the recent Jubilee Session of the General Conference it was agreed upon that all the churches on the different mission fields hereafter shall be regarded as members of that church body. A step in the right direction indeed!

Thus such churches in India have set aside November 27 to December 2, 1935 for their annual conference to convene. This session will deal with serious questions hard to settle. These sessions are profusely interspersed with spiritual meetings of a high degree.

The churches are young, the conference is still considerably younger. Therefore, in a very special way the call comes to each one to consider it HIS duty that this babe be much remembered in prayer these pressing days. The interest for a far-reaching evangelism will to a great extent depend on the zeal shown at this conference.

In the name of the conference,
P. W. Penner,

MOTTO: "LORD, SEND A REVIVAL, AND BEGIN WITH ME"

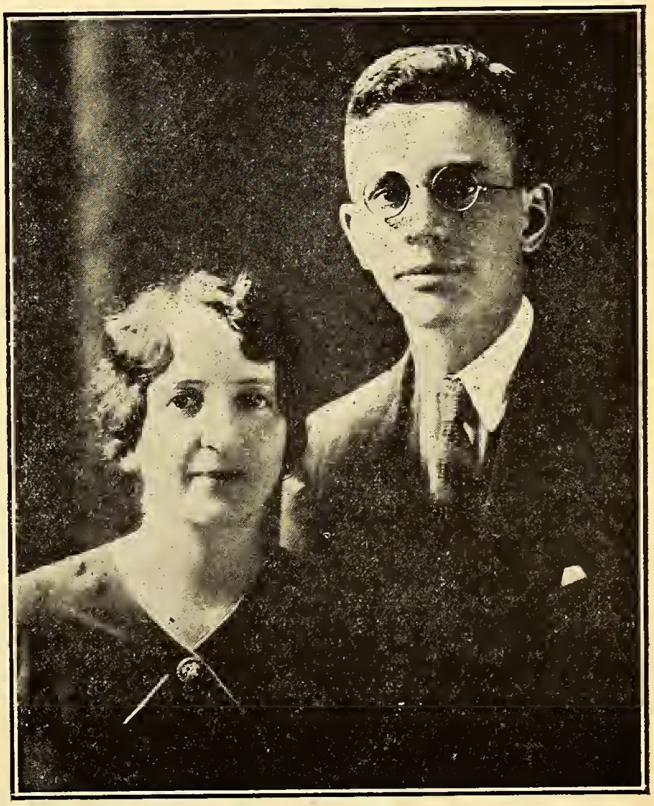
Dear Brethren of the Foreign Mission Board:—

I believe that the Lord is giving us a revival. I know that it has begun in me. But let me go back to last rainy season's Bible course. For us in Champa the course itself was unique in that a relay method was begun. A select number were taught in a senior class, and these in turn taught other groups later in the day. Thus the whole Christian community was reached — and reached in a way that all could understand. But what I want to tell particularly is that these classes, in which prayer was emphasized, continued as prayer groups after the course was ended—at least a number of them. In our church council, too, the need of prayer was expressed and this committee repeatedly met for prayer. Special meetings were being planned throughout our mission for November, and I know that this prayer preparation had a great deal to do with the blessing received at the November meetings.

First, Rev. Singh of the Disciples of Christ church preached four days at each mission station. When at his last service at Champa he pleaded for a new consecration, at least three fourths of the congregation responded. Then Rev. Moses of the Swedish mission preached a series of sermons in connection with the Indian Church Conference. Again we felt that the Lord was pouring out a rich blessing, and testimonies from our Indian brethren confirmed this. Only on the part of the missionary group present there seemed to be a rather weak response. So when our missionary conference convened immediately afterwards, there were two days of heart-searching, and, praise the Lord! they were not in vain. A number of misunderstandings were cleared up and hindrances removed. When during these days one or two of our number testified to a most wonderful blessing within the last two years, the rest of us took courage to believe that the Lord would have such a blessing in store for us too.

I can testify that I have never had a season of evangelistic work as the one just past. The Holy Spirit was with us in power. Our first camp in January was north of Champa on the Korba road. Both Champa and Korba workers took part, and best of all, we had the Unruh's and the Bible School students with us. Before beginning actual work, we spent three days in prayer and study, seeking that filling of the Holy Spirit which was promised by Christ in Acts 1:8. When the time came to go out into the villages, quite a number were definitely testifying that they had the assurance that the Lord would be with them in power. And this proved to be no vain boast. When teaching and preaching began, we could see that the listeners were moved, and as day after day the lessons and testimonies increased, the seed began to take root in certain hearts. In following up this first effort several weeks later, I found that there were quite a few inquirers.

F. J. Isaac family, Champa, India



S. T. Moyer and wife, Basna, India

In February I was obliged to go to the Manku Ghat Christian Mela (I left my touring work reluctant); but again I must testify that this new help from the Lord became manifest there too. In March when I did the above mentioned follow up work I received further great blessings. I shall never forget the wonderful fellowship I had with one inquirer, an old man whom I had discounted at first sight, but who proved to be the first to receive the Gospel in his heart. He was eager to have me sing to him, to pray with him, and to tell over and over again the story of the Savior who died for us. Also, I want to praise God for a personal victory gained at this time. I had been praying: "Lord, clean me thoroughly," and He answered my prayer so that I could realize it. I John 1:7.

During the first week of April it was my privilege to attend a meeting at Chindwara near Nagpur, where representative men from all Mid-India were gathered for several days to face the situation of mass evangelism in our area. The reports from South India and those from Mid-India as well, proved so challenging that there came upon this group a strong spirit of prayer and supplication, that by all means the Lord would revive us, and that the fire now burning so brightly in the Telegu country might become a mighty conflagration among us. I have never been at a gathering quite like it.

As I came home, our Champa church was ready to begin its annual evangelistic campaign. This was carried out with great enthusiasm in spite of the fact that a smallpox epidemic was raging. Many volunteers took part. And then during the Easter week we had special meetings for the Christian community. Again we could feel the same spirit of revival. When on Good Friday the congregation comes to the service as one man and remains seated in hushed reverence for an hour while the story of Christ's suffering is being read from the four gospels, and comes for two hours more in the afternoon to meditate on "the seven last words," one thrills at the realization that the Lord Jesus has become supreme in the hearts of our Indian brethren. And how inspiring it is when on Easter morning before sunrise the people come flocking to the cemetery with flowers for the graves, which have been previously renovated, and then offer up their songs and prayers of praise to the Savior who died and lives again.

As we came away to the hills we hoped that we might find this revival spirit here also, and we have not been disappointed. We have found in conversation a new freedom regarding spiritual things, and we have found a number of informal prayer groups. Those of our own missionary group who are up here, have gotten together for the same purpose. From all sides one hears testimonies of new life, new joy and blessing, new experiences; of baptisms with the Holy Spirit and of cleansing from besetting sins. Others openly confess their shortcomings, failures, and sins, and seek a fuller blessing and a new power. The climax of these things was a general day of testimony and prayer and fasting, which was attended by at least one hundred missionaries. The Lord in His mercy has begun a work among us.

Now we are going down to our churches and inquirers and to those still in darkness. We covet your prayers that He may complete His work; first of all IN US: for we feel there is still much to do there, and then through us as He sees fit. Sincerely yours,

F. J. Isaac.

HIGH POINTS IN OUR CALENDAR

I. January 1, 1934, to June 30, 1934—Evangelistic Work With Non-Christians

1. Five evangelistic Bible Teaching Campaigns planned and executed among non-Christians, of about one month each for January, February, March, April, and May.

2. In these, 17 different villages were intensively worked.

3. Attracted solely upon the merits of the wondrous Word of God, in this work 723 Hindoos were enrolled and studied daily a curriculum of Bible lessons, which ran for three to four weeks in each village. A large number of inquirers emerged.

4. Supervised again the work of a dozen school boys from Mauahdihi who helped in the May campaign. This took me out daily from 12 to 16 miles on cycle during the hot season.

5. The constraining power of the Holy Spirit was especially felt in Urela and Sitalpur.

II. July 1, 1934, to December 31, 1934—Work With Christians

1. The yearly Bible Course for Church and Mission Workers and for local Christian ran for seven weeks, July and August. Seven classes sat daily in Bible, and one class in English for Church and Mission workers.

2. Cholera raged, July and August, all around. Approximately 125 died in Bhorpur, 40 in Sanpoli, and 25 in Bomeridihi, all within our field. Yet not one Christian in all of their different 20 villages was touched. This we took not as evidence that Christians were more deserving than others, but that God saved them, as the fig tree, to give them one more chance to do His work in Phuljhar. Non-Christians far and wide marveled how Christians were spared.

3. The Rev. G. H. Singh came the first week of November and conducted revival meetings in the Compound Church. With a local membership of 165, it is estimated that for the final meeting 208 stayed to consecrate themselves to the Lord Jesus. The interest was tremendous. Two regular meetings were conducted daily for five days.

4. The ten year anniversary of the opening of the Mission Station was observed in November, with a two-day program.

5. Church and Mission Conferences in Champa in December.

6. During the entire year, about 25 or 30 were baptized at this one station.

7. During September and October two-week Daily Bible Schools were conducted for Christians in about eight different villages.

8. During July and November two series of messages were given in Institutes for Evangelists and Bible Women in two neighboring missions.

III. January 1, 1935, to June 30, 1935

A Jumbled Program

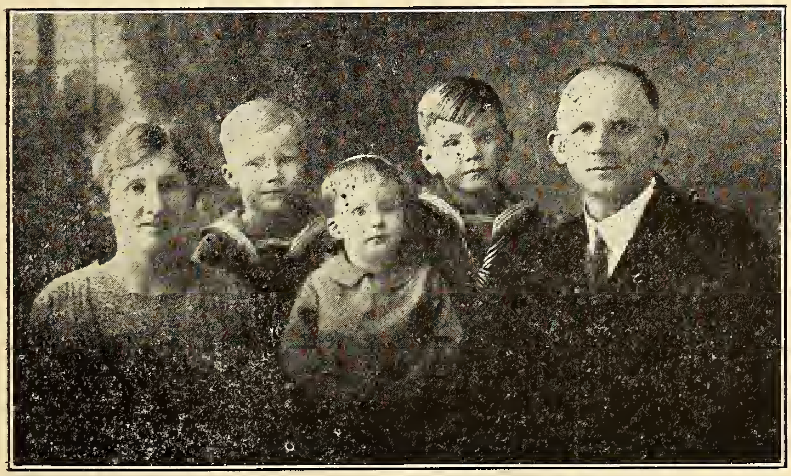
1. January saw us with our District Shepherds intensively at work, carrying on a Preaching-Consecration Mission to every possible Christian group off the Mission Compound. Five of the most powerful sermons possible were preached. The Lord's Supper, Blessing of Children, Baptisms, Special Prayer Periods for Leaders featured, with the climax in a Thanksgiving Offering in the form of a tithe of the entire harvest, if possible. Seven church groups were visited in 24 days—Savitripur, Dhabakar, Sukhri, Jharband, Havakonta, Khirjhuri, and Baitari.

2. For all of February I went by special arrangement into the Disciples of Christ field to carry out an evangelistic campaign at Barela Jubbulpore, 200 miles away. Four villages were worked intensively. The Indian co-workers were new to us, and the methods and Biblical Approach was new to them. Yet blessed results followed amongst that tremendous aboriginal community, the Gonds of Central India. Two villages were shaken to their foundations. Baptisms were delayed until the whole group would come as a group.

3. Assisted in Week of Evangelism for the Compound Church, early in March.

4. Assisted in Week of Pre-Easter Meetings for Compound Church.

5. Loans to fifty different Christian farmers, establishing them on the land received individual attention throughout this half year.



John Thiessen family, Birra, India

Helen E. Nickel, Janjgir

6. Annual Business Conference of Three Parishes was held immediately before Easter.

7. Annual Business Meeting of the Christian Weavers' Association and the Annual Business Meeting of the Christian Cooperative Bank was held immediately after Easter. New series of Bank shares were issued under name of "The Jubilee Bank."

8. For May and part of June took hill leave to escape one of the hottest seasons for years.

IS IT NOTHING TO YOU?

Lam. 1:12

Is it nothing to you that out of the three hundred eighteen millions of people in India the Christian community numbers just four and three fourths millions, or one and one-half percent of the population?

Is it nothing to you that one has to go to religion and its temples in India to find the worst? There one finds a sensual and unspiritual priesthood, children gazing at vile pictures, temple prostitutes dedicated in their infant innocency to a life of shame. Religion is a mass of fear and superstition. Devils and ghosts are worshiped.

Is it nothing to you that women in India are considered to belong to an inferior order? She is born a woman because of some evil which she was supposed to have committed in a previous existence. She is married in childhood and placed in complete subjection to her mother-in-law.

A few years ago I met a small Brahmin widow who had come to Champa to live. She had been kept in her father-in-law's home, but when the father-in-law and mother-in-law died, she was transferred to her husband's brother's place. Here she was kept in subjection by her sister-in-law. This girl widow was about twelve years of age. She was pretty, but had a very sad expression and appeared unhappy. She was also sickly and very anemic. Even though she was not well, she nevertheless, had to do the work of a servant. All the kitchen work and cooking fell to her lot. For her reward she was given one meal a day, her head was shaved, her jewelry was removed from her hands and ears, and for her future days only slavery and drudgery awaited her. She had no peace of heart because she did not know that Christ had come to set her free.

Is it nothing to you that India has millions of these suppressed widows and wives? Many of them are under ten years of age. One girl, about fifteen years of age, came crouching towards me in a village bazaar. She was the mother of a baby about a year old. Her husband, a priest, refuses to take care of her and keep her because she is no longer beautiful and her health is gone. She had big wounds and pus was rolling from abscesses in her breast. She was friendless, homeless, an outcast, and she had a broken heart. A life of suffering and degradation was ahead of her. But what after this life? Eternity without Christ! LOST! FOREVER LOST!

Christ gave Himself and His ALL for this girl and for all the other millions in India. He gave Himself for us. What are we giving and doing for Him? Is it nothing to you? L. Lehman.

Christian Hospital, Champa, C. P., India,
October 3, 1935.

Dear Friends:—

Greetings with II Cor. 8:5. There is much evidence of a renewed desire for reconsecration both among our workers and among the missionaries in Mid-India. For this we are glad. The call to evangelism has come to all of us. The challenge of the work of the Kingdom of God in Mid-India is humbling all of us. How can our total resources be put to best advantage in this day, is the question before all of us. If we follow the example of the Macedonians by "first giving ourselves," a large part of this problem is solved.

Here in the hospital efforts are being put forth to more fully co-ordinate our work with that of the evangelists and Bible women. The hospital is a splendid

Loretta Lehman, Champa

Harvey Bauman family, Champa, India

place for sowing the Word, but it is a rather ticklish job to do much reaping in the hospital. The evangelists and Bible women make friends with patients while they are in the hospital and afterwards see them in their homes where possible. We furnish lists of names of those who have been here to the evangelistic workers, who can then visit them in their own homes when on tour.

The forces of superstition and sin are still very active here. We meet these forces in a very real way in the hospital. A few examples may prove enlightening.

1. It is a rather common belief that milk causes pus. Any patient with a boil, abscess, or infection hesitates very much to drink milk. They say drinking milk will increase the pus.

2. Evil spirits are the cause of disease. The first thing that must be done when someone gets sick is to remove this evil spirit or god. The common way is to blow into their ear somewhat like the "pow-wow" tactics. Last week a child with malaria was brought here in a delirious condition. The ear was bloody, due to this "phuking" or blowing into the ear. They try this first, then they go to the native vaid or quack doctor, and if not relieved, come to us as a last resort.

3. The seed of the bhelwa tree or a cowrie tied around a sore part is an excellent charm to remove pain. Similar to camphor bags or rabbits' feet carried as a token of "good luck."

4. Thursday is an unclean day, hence a poor day to seek medical relief. This is usually our slackest day. Who has not heard of "unlucky Friday," or "blue Monday" at home?

5. It is a very bad omen for patients to die when on a bed. When they see that someone is about to pass away, they put them on the floor. I dare hardly state here what they give them to drink in order to insure salvation or a better state in the coming life. Transmigration of souls is a common belief here.

These are a few of the superstitions we cope with constantly. Only the Spirit of the Living God can cast these false beliefs out. Let us pray that in time the Holy Spirit who is already at work may prevail and cast out all superstition and fear!

Yours in His service,

"YE SHALL BE WITNESSES"

J. R. Duerksen, Korba, India

What is the purpose of the Church of Christ in the present age of Grace? Is it not to tell all the world the Glad Tidings of Redemption in Christ?

"The church that forgets itself in its passion for others will in that forgetfulness find itself." This is a quotation which I copied from the Missionary Review in the Bethel College library twelve years ago. I believe that this quotation is true. It is similar to the statement made by the Lord Jesus Christ Himself, "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it."

On the mission fields in India emphasis is being placed increasingly upon the necessity of personal testimony for Christ by every Christian. There they are, comparatively a very little flock, among hundreds of thousands of unbelievers who would also rejoice in the love of God in Christ if they only knew. But their knowledge of Him depends, to a large extent, upon the faithfulness of that little flock. It is always a sad thing if any one of them neglects and mars his testimony by living inconsistently. Some years ago one of our older missionaries wrote, "I always try to impress it upon the hearts of the members of my congregation that it is the duty of every Christian to witness for Christ three hundred and sixty-five days in the year." To me this seemed impossible as I looked at myself and other Christians whom I knew. Yet we know that our glorious Lord and Savior is worthy so that every one of our lives should be a continual, joyous overflowing testimony for Him.

This is our first furlough. "What are your impressions"? is a question frequently asked of us. One of the most inspiring things has been to hear certain pastors plead with their members not to withhold their testimony, but to be witnesses for Christ. It has been even more inspiring to find that ordinary Christians are really trying to carry this out. A customs official talked to me about the things of Christ. The mail carrier stopped at our door one morning to testify concerning his Savior. The cashier in a certain bank was not only interested in cash, but was eager to talk about the Lord's work in a foreign land. I believe it is the Spirit of God working in the hearts of believers all over the world. "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me." Acts 1:8.

The blood of the Lord Jesus Christ washes away all sin and His redeeming grace saves to the uttermost. We do not know how long we will have the privilege of proclaiming this Good News to the world. Can we afford to hold back while it is our duty and privilege to tell it out? How wonderful it would be if all Christians would lose themselves in joyful witnessing for Christ!

MISSIONARIES ARE COMFORTERS

We, who are missionaries in India, have some problems to face which probably do not occur to our friends in the homeland. Because of the tropical climate and different standards of cleanliness and comfort we live in homes very different from those of the native Indians. Sometimes we wonder how much of a barrier this difference in living is. Can the people among whom we live see beyond these things and recognize the purpose of our being in India? Many, seeing the larger homes and the apparent comforts, feel we are there to aid materially and are not slow to make an appeal for such aid. But there are also those who cheer us tremendously by recognizing help of another kind.

Two women came into the yard one day and asked to see the Memsahiba, (the missionary lady). One, whom we will call Sukni, was a pleasant faced woman from one of the lowest castes. She had often come to the bungalow for visits with relatives and for medicine when there was sickness. The Bible women had stopped in her settlement to tell the sweet old story. The woman with her was a stranger, a relative, who had just recently become a widow. She was in great sorrow. For a Hindu woman to become a widow means more suffering than it does in other lands. She not only has the natural grief of losing her loved one, but she is thought to be the cause of her husband's death. She must carry the blame to her grave. All this flashed through the missionary's mind as the introduction was being made with special emphasis on the sorrow of the bereavement.

Then Sukni continued telling how they had come to the bungalow twice the week before, but had found all the doors closed and no one at home. She said, "I told her (nodding towards her companion) that we would come again, because here is truly the place to find comfort." I do not remember more of the conversation now, nor what words of comfort were used, but the words, "Here is truly the place to find comfort," continue to speak to me both to encourage and to upbraid. For I must ask myself the question, "Have some come for comfort and had to go empty away"?

"I want to give to others hope and faith,
I want to do all that the Master saith;
I want to live aright from day to day;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way."

THE POWER OF THE GOSPEL IN THE LIVES OF THE LOWLY

Some time past a heathen couple appeared on the mission premises, seeking through baptism admission into the Christian church. This couple emerged from one of the lowest castes of India; some call them outcastes. Their brother-in-law, a thoroughly regenerated layman, had instructed this couple in the Bible and Christian teaching as far as he knew how. He told them that he and his wife had found Messiah, the Christ, and extended at the same time his strong invitation to come and SEE.

Hardly anybody before had at the final test before baptism testified with such intelligence when answering the questions. This all showed the unfeigned faith.

That during such change of religion the wicked one and his associates launch a severe struggle, fails to call forth within us any surprise, but convinces strongly the profound change to the better. The loss of one couple out of Satan's ranks generally does effect wider circles. Quite peculiar when people transcend these religious boundaries under serious struggles and persecutions, frequently very shortly other fruits develop.

Just a few days after the baptism this couple tied up their meagre belongings, left the mission station without any further notice to their home more than twenty miles distant, to rejoin their heathen associates. No Christian nearer than eight miles, and those altogether unknown to them. The heretofore friends, even the own parents, brothers and sisters, relatives, generated decided hatred, forbade them to cross their thresholds, nor was anyone willing to dine with them: everyone imagined defilement, even when touched by their shadows, fearing excommunication from all caste relationship. Nothing less than a desperate struggle was in store for them constantly. "If any man will come after me . . . . take up his cross daily." Several in the church expressed great fear this new faith would suffer shipwreck, and the promises made become water. Even such remarks found vent: "We have to get this couple back to the fold, otherwise they will relapse and rejoin caste." As a reply this was uttered: "Christ with His power is present yonder just the same as in the midst of a larger body, let united prayer be uppermost." The latter found universal assent.

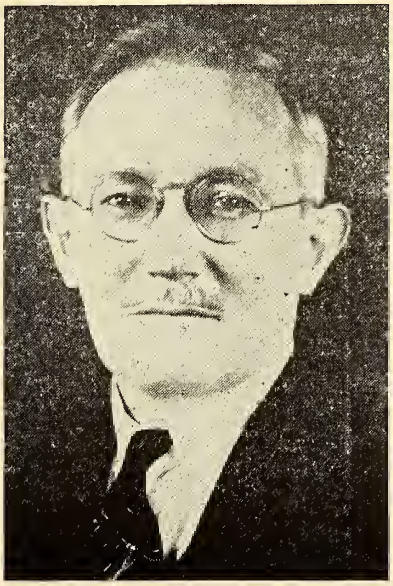
Several weeks elapsed, no report whatever came to our notice. Singling out a few brethren, we started away one evening for that village, arriving there the next morning at dawn. The door was securely closed, everything was deathly quiet. No one surmised our presence. We made our arrival known. Almost immediately the door opened. What a greeting followed! Children of God stepped out into the presence of angry-looking faces, stretched out their hands for a hearty welcome, looking into our faces with tear-filled eyes. A king could not have enjoyed a more happy reception than what occurred in front of that simple mud hut.

Before long a tasty breakfast satisfied us. Thereupon followed the morning devotion, later edifying conversation. Conviction of genuine surrender to the Master wiped the last remains of any doubt away.

Numerous enraged neighbors stood and lingered about, endeavoring to fill the clean atmosphere with unwholesome accusations. I took the brother apart for a private interview, sitting down under a shady tree on the saturated damp ground.

My first question was, "Brother, how do you and your wife presently feel"? "Oh, we both feel so happy, have the Savior within us so intimately," was the immediate reply. The second question, "What were you doing this morning at the time of our arrival, as everything appeared so foresaken"? Again useless to wait for a reply, "We were engaged in our family devotion." For curiosity's sake I inquired about the nature of this. The brother narrated that the few crumbs of Scripture known were repeated to each other, then he repeated the exact prayer of that morning. This deeply touched me, how a simple, illiterate person could offer such an all-embracing prayer. From where did this couple obtain it all? That remained no mystery when the conversation continued. The fourth question was, "Before your door I notice two goats tied to a pole, what is the object of that"? He unhesitatingly replied, "These are not our animals, the former caste people harbor severe anger against us, however, they cater to draw us back into caste and heathendom. These goats are kept day and night in front of our door to kindle a desire to yield to their unrighteous ambition. The moment we shall manifest such, the caste will hastily be summoned, the goats dressed, and through this meal the complete reunion shall materialize. But, dear missionary, this nor any other temptation proves sufficiently strong to ever start the slightest yielding on our part, because we have solemnly promised the Lord undivided obedience. Our decision means a lifetime established fact." This tempting was accompanied by ill treatment, developing into torture of various nature, quite horrible to endure for such a common Christian people.

Mrs. C. H. Suckau



C. H. Suckau

In spite of having beheld numerous conversions, this brother and sister offer an outstanding example of what the power of the Gospel can do and really does in practical life. These newly converted stood entirely alone in an atmosphere pregnant with diverse temptations, facing the precarious situation as immovable pillars. How truly comes to our memory the fulfilled promise to the Philadelphia church, "He that overcometh will I make a pillar." Rev. 3:12.

Such conversations furnish evidences that a thorough regeneration will not permit any occasion to be the cause of stepping back, sufficient reason to believe that doing mission work is not in vain.

The depressed classes from which this couple came, constitute nowadays the objectives among India's missions. Andrew brought the degraded Greeks of Bethsaida to see Jesus. Philip went about with great results among the Samaritans, knowing he could not cope with the situation alone, summoned help from Jerusalem. The early church chose deacons to look after such converts especially. These and numerous other incidents offer strong incentives to the missions of India to enter these depressed camps with hundreds of thousands inmates and spread the name of Christ effectively. The prospects are greater than can be described. The mission cause in India awaits an unlimited success. Let us concentrate prayerfully at home and abroad on this open door.

Within our own mission area live compact in several villages some 40,000 of these classes, among whom we "MUST" make united efforts to win them for Christ. It is rather unsafe to make numbers of converts coming forth in the next few years, but it appears as if a large host will be ready to come. That specific group is apparently nearer the Gospel decision than any other area, nevertheless they are specially drawing for increased membership. They will approach Christians and everybody to get their marks on the skin of all by tatooing them unerasibly. When one of our little girls, eight years old, was asked to have this done, she firmly replied, "I belong to Jesus and do not need any such mark on me, He abides in my heart and has washed me from sin." The approaching person, knowing nothing could be done, made for another attempt somewhere else. Yours for Christ and His Kingdom,

P. W. Penner.

A SUNDAY SPENT AT HOTEVILLA MISSION

ANGEL HELP

The question has often been asked, "Are people coming to church, and how is Sunday spent at Hotevilla"?

We can say by the grace of God, that people do attend church, and that they come even on days when there is a dance in the village. This encourages us, for in the earlier days no one would attend church on dance days. We give God all the glory.

We will give the readers a Sunday program of our work here.

On Sunday morning song service begins at ten o'clock to ten thirty. At this time the audience is divided into two groups. When our friend, Andrew Dercher, was still here he had the English class, my mother had the adults, and I had the children. Since he has left, my mother has the English class and I have the children and the old people who cannot speak English. After Sunday School a service is conducted for the older ones, while the little children are again gathered in a side room for further entertainment and instruction. Afternoon street meeting is held in the villages Pakawe and Hotevilla, some Sundays alternately and some Sunday in both. We go on foot over the sandy and rocky trails to these villages. Hotevilla is one mile from our station where we live, while Pakawe is only one-fourth mile.

The Hopis listen to the Gospel preached on the street, although the majority are not seen, they listen from behind open doors and windows, while mostly children gather near where we stand. This encourages us, knowing that the seed sown will not return void.

After the street meeting in Hotevilla, we also have a Sunday School in the little, now vacant, mission house there.

Sunday evening we have another song service and short worship in the chapel here on the station. This is an all English service, where only young folks attend. Christ's word is, "fear not." We thank God and praise Him to know that He is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

I should like to tell you of an experience that has been to the strengthening of my trust in Him, how God opens the eyes of the heathen that they shall see the presence of God with His own. It was on a Sunday afternoon after a big dance. I went to Hotevilla to have a street meeting as usual, but this time went alone. Andrew Bercher was away and mother could not come with me on account of Baby Paul having the whooping cough, and Nanny, the blind Christian woman, who often helps us at the street meetings, was sick. As I stood on the little sand hill, I saw a group of men standing near a Kiwa, which is an underground ceremonial place for idol worship. They all stood gazing at me for a time, then one by one left, still gazing as they went, but I felt the presence of the Lord with me. The next day, while making house to house visitation, several different heathen Hopis asked me who had been with me yesterday. They claimed they saw two men standing by me, one on my right, and one on my left, and that they were taller than I was. Others who heard the singing, thought there was a large group of Hopi Christians singing with me. As Christ was giving command to His disciples to bring the Gospel message, His words were, "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." Your brother in Christ,

A LITTLE "NICODEMUS" IN HOPI-LAND

"Ye are the salt of the earth." Matt. 5:13a.

If all Christian people in this world were truly living as the salt of this earth the world would be thirsty for Jesus Christ, the Water of Life, instead of trying to do away with Him.

Isabelle Homer, a fifteen year old Hopi girl, now a Christian for about two years, has been a salt in her home where neither father nor mother is a Christian. The evening when she made the decision to accept Jesus Christ as her Savior, she had come home so happy. As she had entered the house it was dark, as her mother, sisters, and brothers had already retired. She kept saying, as if to herself, "I'm so happy tonight, oh, I'm so happy tonight"! While thus speaking, she lit a lamp and went to her mother's bedside and said to her, "I'm so happy tonight because I'm taking Jesus into my heart." Isabelle has had her trials and testings, yes, and has even slipped into sin, which robbed her of her joy for the time being, but the Lord has so tenderly watched over her and restored her to full joy. One day she and another girl came to the Mission to help me in my housework. It is when these girls are more or less alone with one that they tell of their deepest longings. So, while we were working and visiting, I asked, "How is it girls, would you like to see the Lord Jesus come today"? Isabelle became so serious and then said, "No. I want my father and mother, my brothers and sisters saved first."

She often related of how she told the Bible stories at home and sang the hymns and choruses which she learned in church. Her little brother, Byron, one day in Sunday School class said, "I like to have Isabelle tell me these stories at home." She has three little sisters whom she has brought to church almost every Sunday.

Now Isabelle and many of the other girls have left for the Indian schols, some to Phoenix, some to Santa Fe, and others to Albuquerque. We miss them. Not only do we, but also their parents, brothers, and sisters. They do not say so, but it is noticeable. On Wednesday evening, while Mr. Suderman has the prayer meeting with the older Hopis, I have a Bible class in another room for the children. Ever since Isabelle left, her brother Teddy (thirteen years), whom I would call the "Nicodemus," comes to these evening Bible classes to learn more of the way of salvation. He does not yet come to Sunday School like his younger brother, but he comes when it is dark, even on Sunday nights for the English preaching service. One Wednesday evening, after we had had so many Bible stories, told with the help of the Sunday School picture rolls, and the class had been dismissed, I noticed that Teddy remained seated. When he was aware that I noticed his reluctance about leaving, he said, "Gee, I'm not filled yet, I want some more." (When a Hopi has had plenty to eat, he will say, "I'm full," or "I'm filled.") It seems as though the Spirit of God is working in Teddy's heart.

Will you not pray more definitely for these Hopi Christians that they may all become such a "salt" of the villages that the unbelievers will all become thirsty?

We workers here at Oraibi herewith wish to put in an earnest plea for more earnest prayers for the salvation of the Hopi men and boys. We have so few of them in the church. The men carry on most of the heathen ceremonies and are so hard to win. The devil has had such a stronghold here for all of these centuries and he seems to hold his worshipers so tenaciously. Pray for their deliverance!

In His service,

John P. and Mabel Suderman.

REASONS FOR PRAISE AT Moen Copi, Arizona

By F. A. Johnson, Native Missionary

First of all I wish to say that our Indians at Moen Copi are still friendly toward our work among them. We have fine cooperation from our Indians who are now willing to send their small children to our Sunday School in church each Sunday morning, and for that fine spirit of encouragement shown to us from our Indians we thank God and praise Him for the changed attitude that our Moencopi people have taken toward us and our work.

For the last three years of our service here, our Indians are willing to help us in our special programs due to their interest at each Christmas and Easter season. The young people among our Moencopi people are finding it a pleasure to make our programs interesting for their own people, so that even among our older Indians the church programs have been well received and appreciated by them. For all this fine help and cooperation given to us from our Indians we thank God and take courage to continue our work here for the Lord.

When Rev. J. H. Epp, one of the Mennonite pastors from Kansas, was with us for one of our fall meetings at Moencopi, he was pleased to see at each evening service a crowded church audience of Indians both among the children and the adults. He was greatly blessed of God in giving our Indians a message direct from the Word of God. And, too, our Indians of Moencopi as well as those who came from the distant Indian villages were greatly blessed by the preaching of the man of God. And I believe Brother Epp left the mission field with a greater interest and desire to serve the Lord among his own congregation. Perhaps it would do well for our Mennonite ministers from our own Mennonite people to visit our Indian mission fields at least once every two years to get acquainted with the people and with the work, so that the congregations among our Mennonites may know the facts as to what the Lord is doing for our people as the result of the giving and praying of our Mennonite people. We need the encouragement in spiritual growth from our white brethren, as you may be needing the same from our Christian Indian people and from those to whom we are ministering the Word of God.

This year we had to send away fourteen of our fine Sunday School girls to a non-reservation government boarding school for the Indians in Phoenix. On the last Sunday they were in church we presented each one with the New Testament, encouraging each one to continue the study of the Word when they would leave us and their homes. Our work with these children who have been reared in our Moencopi village with the simple knowledge of the Scriptures received from the instructions we had been giving them will not be in vain in the sight of the Lord. We hope and pray that as they grow up in the different environment now away from their home in the school to which they have gone, they may appreciate the word of God which is given them under our mission here. May the Word of God bear fruit in their young lives, so that in the future some of these may become Christian leaders to help others find the way of life, is our sincere desire for them.

In closing I wish to relate one more experience which may help our readers to thank God with us. It was shortly after our return from the Bible Conference at Flagstaff, an elderly man died in our village. He was the father of three young men and one young lady. One of these young men, being a professing Christian boy, came to me and asked that I give his father a Christian funeral. He believed that his father died, accepting the Lord Jesus as his Savior. During our absence from our mission here, one of our elderly Christian women from Oraibi had been here, and she happened to be staying with the family while the old father had been on the sick bed, and during her stay with the family she had been talking to the old man about his need of the Savior which would assure him the blessed life with God hereafter. As a result of her visit here the old man died very peacefully in his home in our village. This gave me an opportunity once more to speak a word of comfort from the Holy Scriptures at the funeral service for the man and for the family and for the friends who came to pay their last respect to old John Karsyesva, who passed away at Moencopi village trusting Jesus as his Savior.

We trust that as God leads us on to serve, our friends in the Mennonite churches may bear us up in their prayers to God that more of our Indians may come to know Jesus as their Savior. May this blessing rest upon the work of God everywhere among our Mennonite Christian people. We remain sincerely,

Yours in His scrviee,
Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Johnson.

A CHEYENNE CHRISTIAN FACING TEMPTATIONS

A. Habegger

One of our recent converts has related how again and again his friends of former days try to lead him away from his Christian life.

Soon after he had become a Christian, he met a former friend with whom he used to drink strong drink. This friend pulled out a bottle from his hip-pocket and offered him a drink. "I do not drink anymore, I have become a Christian," he said. He was told not to take his Christianity too seriously, but to enjoy himself just the same and take a little to make him feel good, but he answered: "No, I do not want to drink any more of that stuff, it has caused me a lot of grief and sorrow."

Later on this same new Christian, after having been baptized and having taken part in the Lord's Supper was told by one of the backslidden Christians, right outside of the church, after the service: "Here is peyote, even though you have become a Christian, keep on eating the peyote. You used to join us in eating the peyote, just keep on using it as I do." But the new Christian did not wish to argue the matter, he knew from experience that the peyote is a drug that makes the eaters half drunk, so he has been staying away from the peyote.

This new convert and his wife were also gamblers. After he has become a Christian, some of his gambling friends said to him: "Come join us in a game of cards. Even though you have become a Christian, come and gamble with us anyway, and have a good time. Many Christians gamble, come and play a game with us like you used to do." But the new convert said: "I do not play cards any more, I know all about gambling, it is not good."

Pray for our Christians, for so many fall before these three temptations that are so strong among the Cheyenne Indians.

LAME DEER, MONTANA

October 18, 1935.

To the Readers of the Mennonite and Christian Evangel: Greetings in Jesus' name!

The Psalmist says, "Jehovah is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup. Thou maintainest my lot. The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places, I have a goodly heritage."

As I sit down to my typewriter to write for the mission number which is to appear soon, these words of the Psalmist suggest themselves without effort. Yes, the lines have truly fallen unto me in pleasant places. Praise be His name!

The year 1935 opened up with rather peculiar experiences. On January 2nd, during an excitement with a pan of hot ashes, which I had asked a young Indian to remove from the church stove, as the room was cold and it was time for their Young People's meeting to begin, and which pan he dropped on the floor, causing me to step back quickly to open the door, catching my heel in the hem of my coat and throwing myself heavily backwards on the floor, a fall that meant excruciating pain for a few days, but gradually all seemed well. (The sequel of this experience I did not know until after our return from Europe, and that is another story.)

Then a day or two before Christmas we had sung Christmas carols around Lame Deer, going in an open truck, on a bitter cold evening. Mr. Petter had also jumped on the truck to accompany the crowd, and although we all suffered from the cold, he most, for he contracted one of the worst attacks of rheumatism he ever experienced. It appeared for a time that he might be lamed permanently, but God graciously gave healing.

Then came the "gala" birthday celebration of February 19, in which all Lame Deer, Busby, and even friends from Sheridan participated, with its surprise of a possible trip to Switzerland. Whew! That is some experience.

The hustle of preparations for such a trip followed. Birth certificates, death certificate (of Mrs. Marie Petter), marriage certificate had to be produced, also sworn statements that Mr. Petter had entered the country legally in 1890, sworn statements of people who knew him in Oklahoma many years ago, to secure the necessary re-entry permit. Then came the choosing of a steamer line, of cabin, the purchase of a few clothes, the arrangement for the station during our absence, etc. All had to be attended to. Yes, how did we get it all done so as to leave Lame Deer on April 23rd?

Valdo, Laura, and the children accompanied us to Forsyth, all so happy in anticipation of the wonderful trip. A little prayer meeting together in Joseph Hotel before we separated, and we were off to Europe! What a thrill! Our hearts beat high with joyful anticipation and our debt to Sister Frieda, who sponsored the trip, and to the many friends who had, no doubt, sacrificed pleasures of their own to make this possible for us, grew with every mile of the way.

We made a short stop at Bluffton, and one in Berne, Indiana, where we perfunctorily served at a public service, for our hearts and minds were full of VACATION — Vacation — Vacation — rather than on reporting about the work we had left behind. Will you forgive us? In New York City, both the American Bible Society and the head of the Biblical Seminary where I had spent several months in 1910, while on furlough, asked that we, or rather Mr. Petter, report about his translations, but he avoided both obligations, believing that for once he was "off duty."

Oh, the thrill of embarking on a big ocean liner! Those who have had it, know whereof I speak. Valdo had suggested a French liner, so his papa might "limber up" on his mother tongue before meeting the relatives in Paris and in French Switzerland. It was a wise choice. Kind friends had suggested that French liners were considered "filthy," but oh, we found everything so spotless, with service so gallant, so gracious, so satisfying, with cuisine world-famed, that we soon settled down for a delightful voyage. I know now that the use of his mother tongue almost exclusively in Paris and in Vevey, Switzerland, was one of the most satisfying experiences of the entire trip for Mr. Petter.

Once well out at sea, we were all drilled in the use of our safety belts, and given the number and part of the ship where to find our safety boats. Such a drill is now enforced by law. Even during the drill the weather was changing, the wind began to blow, the sea grew angry, the waves rolled, and for well two nights and a day no one was allowed on deck. Our cabin was entirely under water, our port hole was securely barricaded, all tables and chairs were screwed to the floors, the dishes were harnessed to the dining tables, and the passengers walked like drunken men and women through the narrow hallways or up and down the stairways. I began to feel nauseated by the sea odors, the more or less confined air, as well as the unsteadiness of the ship, but escaped getting sick as many did. What to do in such a storm? Nothing to do. The crew remained "mum," even though we suspicioned danger. One night Mr. Petter fully expected the ominous signal from the big funnels on deck. We had taken down our life-saving belts and placed them conveniently near our berths, and slept, for there was nothing else to do, except pray when awake.

While thus plowing through the depths of water and waves and sea, we were graciously ignorant that all was not well at Ashland, Montana. Can it be that such a gala day in the family as that of February 19, can so soon be followed by one that would plunge our hearts into deepest sorrow? Later we learned that it was when the waves threatened to engulf our gallant ship and which forced it out of its course, that the loved one passed away in far away Montana — and we knew it not. Our steamer strained and struggled and labored and groaned, as we plowed our way along, but still we sailed blissfully on, for we were headed for the "trip of our lives."

At last lights gleamed on the shore of Ireland. Then came a stop off the coast at Plymouth, England, where we were met by the Normandie, the newest, the biggest, and the most magnificent steamer afloat, which had come out from Havre to circle about its sister ship of the French Line, the Champlain, on which we were traveling. It coursed around us to show its graceful and marvelous contour, then it raced with us at close range as if to show how feeble we were in comparison, before it headed for New York and its maiden trip, which had been heralded throughout the world and which set New York wild with demonstrations.

Alas, at Havre the officials were so slow to view our passports, for which we stood in line most of the afternoon, so that we missed the grand sight of entering the harbor. These officials are often very indifferent to the comfort and convenience of the traveling public as we also learned at New York on our return voyage.

But once landed, we found the special steamer train in waiting, and soon we were off to Paris — the most marvelous city of the whole world. Yes, it was of the "rapide" trains, of which Sister Frieda wrote, and the coaches had compartments as is customary in Europe, with the aisle along the side of the car rather than through the middle.

There we were— six of us in one compartment, each accompanied by his or her baggage, for checked baggage is an unknown quantity in Europe. A Russian New York business man was going to Belgium and Poland to see relatives and an aged mother. A dapper young Spaniard who spoke neither English, German, nor French, and who had been at our table on the steamer, added to the interest of the party. A French lady, married to a naval officer in America, was making her yearly trip back to "la belle France" to visit her mother,—another French lady, and we two.

Said the New Yorker, "How will you know your brother whom you have not seen for fifty years, when you reach the railroad station in Paris"? We had no definite answer, except that Mr. Petter said he had sent one of his passport pictures ahead. "But tell your brother, when you see him, to first give you something to eat before talking you to death. I had one such experience," was his sensible remark, for in the confusion of passport examination and disembarking and entraining for Paris, there was no time to eat. However, I ordered a French sandwich on the train, even though the French lady told me they were different than those of America. True, when it was handed to me, I found it to be such a disjointed affair, that in my awkwardness the ham, which was the best part of it, dropped from between, or was it through the bread, onto the tip of the shoe of the New Yorker sitting opposite, facing me. The dapper Spaniard, taking in the situation, at once produced an apple he had brought from the steamer, disappeared through the aisle in search of a knife, pared the apple carefully and offered it to me to help appease my hunger. The graciousness of the act appealed to me even more than the apple.

It was night when we reached the big Gare St. Lazare in Paris. Passengers began to lug their baggage through the narrow aisle, and there was a congestion. Porters were slow in coming. We did not yet "know the ropes." Finally I went outside and received our baggage, as Mr. Petter handed it to me "through the window," as we saw others doing.

In the meantime our Russian New York friend, more accustomed to travel in foreign lands, had threaded his way through the railroad station, alertly in search of the "brother" we wanted. He spied two men looking eagerly in the direction of the steamer train, carefully scrutinizing the passengers as they filed past, and accosted them in French, "Are you looking for the Monsieur and the Madame from Montana"? In reply to his question that they surely were, he said, "They are right here, come and meet them, but first give them something to eat when you get home." Then he disappeared before we even had time to thank him, or ever can thank him here below, for we know neither his name nor his address.

Now we are in Paris! I leave you here. Perhaps I can tell more another time. Would like especially to tell of my seven days in Italy, more particularly Rome, a trip I decided over night to make, believing it would be of special advantage to my Bible work with our native evangelists at Lame Deer,, to have seen Rome, to have been on the Appian way which Paul followed into the city, to have visited the catacombs, the Coliseum where the Christians were thrown to the wild beasts, to have seen the ruins of the golden house of Nero and the place where he burned Christians as torches for his entertainment, and to have lived through in thought the struggles of the early Christian church there, the true church which never knew allegiance to the Roman Catholics, and which spread into the northern valleys of Italy, into France, into Switzerland, into Germany, where they began to be called Mennonites, into Holland and America — the true apostolic church, which might be even a more fitting name for our denomination than Mennonites, since that name was applied long after this group of believers existed.

Then I would like to tell about my "ten days in Germany," and the thrill of finding the ancestral home built in 1565 as a "Jagdschlosz," and which is still good for another 1000 years, where my greatgrandfather had lived and from where he, his family, and about a hundred others set out to hire a sail ship to bring them to America in 1832. Grandmother had filled our childish minds with visions of "Mittelhof," as the estate was and is still called, and with an eager desire some day to see this ancestral home for ourselves, and lo, how wonderfully God fulfilled this childish dream of mine.

Our Indian friends were almost amazed that we would risk our lives on the great waters. One very old grandmother wept as she bid me goodbye, "Will I see you alive again"? Some verily believed we would drown before returning. The Christian leaders assured us they would do their utmost while we were gone. It happened that a nice couple had been retired from government service at Busby, and were waiting for final pension arrangements from the Indian Department at Washington, D. C. They had no place to go to while waiting, and offered to occupy our house, take care of the premises at their own expense. God surely provided in this.

Then I had a letter from Miss Edna Ramseyer, a Bluffton graduate and a teacher in my home town at Trenton, Ohio, who wanted a summer's experience at Lame Deer, provided a wee bit of the traveling expense in coming be provided and her keep while here. Well, that was easy, for the cellar and pantry were still pretty well stocked. Thus we could sail without the least worry about our trees, our shrubs, our house, our chickens, our dog, our cow, our wind mill, for competent people were looking after things. We take this also out of the hand of God, who had planned our trip.

The Christian leaders met each Tuesday for their Bible lesson, as though we were here to guide them, and on Sunday they delivered their message. The women took turns cleaning the church and seeing that all was in order. So even in this we had no worry. Surely the trip was "out of the hand of the Lord," as Sister Frieda had assured us, and our Mission Board was not burdened to find a substitute, neither were the expenses for the station increased during our absence. The government people were glad to have a place to stay for the summer, and Miss Ramseyer reports a well-worth experience which she thoroughly enjoyed. She endeared herself to our Indians and they appreciated her. Now we are back, refreshed in every way, with memories of one of the most wonderful and satisfying experiences of our lives. Perhaps there will be time to tell more another time.

Sincerely and gratefully,

Bertha E. K. Petter.

GOD IS NOT MOCKED

G. A. Linsheid, Canton, Oklahoma

Just how God can combine His astounding longsuffering towards sinful man and at the same time prevent mockery, is quite beyond human comprehension. We must leave His actions in each individual case (however unintelligible it may be to us) to His supreme wisdom. Peter denied his Lord, even with cursing, yet Peter was restored; Ananias and Sapphira, his wife, were visited with swift and stern judgment for an offense that does not appear to us nearly as reprehensible as the other. 'Tis true, it is not often that the Lord visits such summary judgment upon sinners in this present dispensation of grace, nevertheless it is equally true that He does not permit Himself to be mocked. I am prone to accept some of my experiences in the work among the Indians as instances indicative of this fact.

A young woman, the granddaughter of a noted chief, returned from a government school where she had enjoyed a fine mental and spiritual training. She was equipped to be of an inestimable help to her people. However, neglecting the higher ideals in life, she chose to seek temporal advantages in a selfish way for her people and herself. Because the missionary would not comply with her demand, she turned against him and the church, though she knew better. It was not very long-afterwards that she became sick and passed on. She had received much, she had a splendid opportunity—God is not mocked.

A middle aged man who had enjoyed schooling as a boy, and who had received training for a number of years to become an assistant in the work, and who had labored in that capacity for some years, became more and more bold in his demands in spite of the remonstrances of the missionary. When the missionary finally felt obliged to deny his unreasonable demands he became very indignant and, forgetful of all past favors, he not only refused to assist any longer in the work, but avoided and opposed the missionary. He knew better. In less than a year after that he became seriously ill. Two different doctors could not recover his failing strength. Realizing that his time was short, he sent for the missionary to come and speak to him. He was humble now and zealously affirmed his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The Lord was gracious to him and he could go on in peace, but—God is not mocked.

A robust young man who had enjoyed school and other training was, upon his urgent request and upon his profession of faith, received into church membership. He had been addicted to the use of peyote, but had promised to abstain from it. For a while he did so, but began to drift back into it again. When the missionary questioned him about this, he became very angry and abusive, threatening to use his influence against the missionary and the church. He made his threat good. But it was not so very long afterward that he was bitten by a poisonous snake. Apparently he must have made some new resolutions then, for after the doctor by the grace of God had saved his life, he seemed to be very anxious to again be on friendly terms with the missionary. There was no difficulty in doing that. However, whatever good resolution he may have made, apparently did not materialize. His heart seemed to be hardened more than ever. Now he became seriously ill. When the missionary spoke to him in his sickness, admonishing him to put his whole trust only in the Lord, large tears welled from his eyes. Just what these meant he did not reveal in words. He improved and was up and around again. But the opiate and the old associations were too much for him. It was very soon after that when he came down once more, and when the missionary came to see him this time, he was already unconscious. His last day was drawing to a close, darkness settled all around, quietly his soul disengaged itself from its earthly abode—three times the Lord had shown His longsuffering and grace in a special manner,—but — God is not mocked.

"LET THE LITTLE CHILDREN COME UNTO ME"

J. B. Ediger, Clinton, Oklahoma

A father and mother have three children. The oldest boy usually comes to church on his pony. The mother with four-year-old Theodore and two-year-old Roberta Ann comes on the car or with her parents on the wagon. The father of the children seldom comes to church, but we are glad that he quit drinking.

The parents and the three children have been away from home for a few days. They come home late Saturday evening. Sunday morning the mother is tired and the clothes are dirty. She decides not to go to church that Sunday. The church bell rings. Theodore reminds mother that it is time to get ready to go to Sunday School. Mother explains that they are not going to Sunday School today. With tears in his eyes he runs to grandfather and tells him his troubles. Of course, grandfather offers to take him along. Mother protests, grandfather takes his side. Theodore promises to be a good boy, and wins. Mrs. Ediger remarked after the services that Sunday how independent and well behaved Theodore had been in Sunday School. During the following week I visited the family. Theodore's mother said about the first thing he had said after coming home from church Sunday was, "Now it is only my Jesus and not little sister's." Upon the question of his mother why, he had then answered, "I was in Sunday School and sister was not."

Dorothy is four years old. Her Christian parents with their three children seldom miss the Sunday services. When time comes, Dorothy is one of the first to jump up and go to the Sunday School room. This summer she had a sore ear. Her mother stayed at home with her and little Edgar. Only father and six-year-old Charles came to church that Sunday. Dorothy sent word with her father to tell Mrs. Ediger that she had a sore ear and could not come to Sunday School, but she would come again next Sunday. You can understand how we and especially her Sunday School teacher (Mrs. Ediger) felt when her father delivered that simple, but precious message.

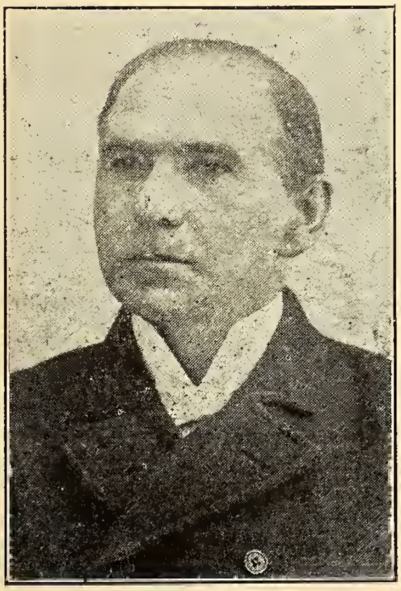
Her brother Charles, six years old, not long ago told his mother while they were on their way to church to tell Mr. Ediger to give out the song: "Jesus loves me this I know." His mother delivered the message. We sing that song oftener now. "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise." Matt. 21:16.

A MONDAY'S WORK AT DEER CREEK, THOMAS, OKLAHOMA

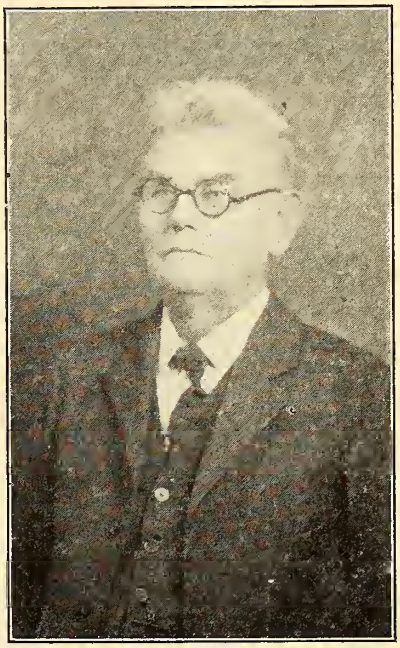
By H. J. Kliewer

After an early breakfast Monday morning, I spent about three hours burning dry grass around the house and church and cutting down some weeds. Then I packed and loaded again and then started out to visit the Indians in their homes. At the first house, where usually three families stay, only a grown boy and a visitor were found and they were ready to leave for a visit east of the river as soon as they had provided the stock with water. After some conversation, the young man asked me to aid him in securing a job in the federal relief work by speaking to the district farmer or writing to the agent at Concho. When I told him that perhaps some certain conditions did not entitle him to be given work, he confessed that his father, with whom he stays, draws a pension of $50.00 a month, that he himself draws some lease money from two quarter sections of land, and that he often gets drunk. His answer was, that others, under the same circumstances had been given work and that if he were given work, he would prove that he could "make good" and would not get drunk as often as some others do, of whom he knows that they are drunk every time they receive a pay check. He also stated that he often thinks of the good advice I had given him and the good words I had read to him from the Bible, and soon he wants to change his life and be a Christian and come to church.

After lunch I met the district farmer on the street and spoke to him about the case. He said that under the circumstances he could not recommend this young man to be put on the relief roll, but if he would apply direct to the office they might put him on, as they had another party later in the day.



S. S. Haury †—Our first missionary



H. R. Voth †—Our second missionary

At the next house no one was at home, but I met the young man in town. In the conversation he told me that he, too, was "batching," as his wife and children were visiting with her folks in another district. Later in the day I was told that they had gotten into trouble when he was drunk and he had sent his family away.

Another young man, whom I intended to give some more Bible instruction at his tent near town, as we had pre-arranged, I also met on the street and had a long conversation with him. He said that since it was getting so hot and he expected to be put on the relief work most any day, we had better discontinue the instructions for the present; he is very much interested, thinks of what he has been taught, often reads the Bible and prays, approves of the Christian teaching and life, but is not ready to take the step of becoming a Christian and being baptized and will let me know when he is ready for further instructions and baptism. No doubt peyote and gambling are still keeping him enslaved. Pray for him, that he may be victorious through Christ.

Soon I started for home by going still farther away from it through black jacks and sand east of the river. Three Christian families were visited and after a friendly conversation, short devotions were held. At all of these places they had picked some wild plums that day and were getting ready to can them to add to the goodly number of jars which they showed me they had already canned. They have to pick the plums quite green, as otherwise the whites would get ahead of the Indians, even on their own allotments. Too bad that so often even those that we consider the best Christians find so many excuses for staying away from the services on Sunday. — Two more houses were visited where the people were not at home. At the last place I gave another instruction to two young women who seem to be interested and want to be baptized and show a fairly good knowledge of God's plan of salvation. They live about 15 miles from the church and perhaps do not attend the services more than once or twice a year. They say they would like to come, but have no way. What should one do in such cases—receive them as members, or not? I was anxious to visit another house, where two families usually live, but that would have made an extra drive of six miles over very rough and sandy roads, and as I was not sure whether they were at home and it was now past six o'clock and I was about 35 miles from home, I decided to "hit the road." A pint of ice cold milk from the store and some fresh sliced peaches from a little tree in the yard made the bachelor supper seem good enough for a king.

May this description of two days help you to understand a little better the experiences of a missionary among the Indians, the hindrances met, and the necessity of intercessory prayer.

To be thankful is to be especially Christ-like.

Home Mission Notes

The Home Mission reports for the third quarter are usually short; there are not as many activities during the summer as during any other time of the year. It seems the season that is the most favorable to nature is the least conducive to spiritual growth. But we are just as much interested in the cause of our Lord in the summer as in the winter, and so we give our readers a little glimpse into the work in the Home Mission Field.

It is quite encouraging to hear that in all our stations the attendance in the Sunday Schools and services has been very little less than the average attendance during the rest of the year, and any special meetings that were arranged for have been very satisfactory. The finances in every case show up well—the Missions are taking care of their running expenses and giving some contributions for misisons.

Mechanics Grove (Quarryville, Pa.): Bro. Sylvan Lehman writes that they are planning a series of meetings to begin early in November and to continue for two weeks, and to be conducted by a young brother Nusbaum from Berne, Indiana. They unite with a number of churches in the community during the winter in holding Monthly Bible Conferences in the various churches. These conferences have been held for several years. They have orchestra and choir practice on Monday night. The attendance at the Sunday School and church service is generally quite well and at the Prayer Service there is no decline. The buildings have been repaired and papered and painted.

Altoona, Pa.:—The news from Altoona are always like a bright ray of sunshine breaking through the clouds. Brother Glass reports that the Lord is blessing them, saving souls and caring for His own in a wonderful way. The services are better attended than for several years. They have more at their services than those churches in the city that have from six to eight hundred members. They have decisions at nearly all their services—a Catholic family consisting of father, mother, and two sons, publicly confessed Christ as their Savior, and then helped to lay the water mains free of charge. The average attendance in the Sunday School for September was 124. Their enrollment is 150, and they have four organized classes. Two members were received into the church. They have a Teacher Training Class with twenty members that meets every two weeks. They have a live Junior C. E. of forty members, who lament the loss of their efficient and beloved superintendent, who went in training at the Altoona hospital. The economic conditions are still bad and many of the people must have help. Clothing is needed as the cold weather comes, and any individuals or congregations who have any clothing to spare will find most grateful reception if they forward them to Mrs. Edith Stiffler, 2204 Eleventh Avenue, Altoona, Pa. Mrs. Stiffler finds great need for food and clothing while pursuing her visitation work. She pays a glowing tribute to the unselfish devotion and faithful service of Brother Glass. This is the testimony given to him by patrons of the Mission also.

Chicago:— Brother A. H. Leaman writes very briefly: "Our attendance at the church is about the same. We are hoping to make a better showing this coming year. Will you pray to this end that we may be Spirit-filled, church-filled, and a soul-winning church"? The contributions are keeping up well. The total contributions for the third yuarter have been $528.57. Some repairs have been made at the church and workers' home, and $137.65 is in the treasury to buy coal and other necessities."

Hutchinson, Kansas.—Brother J. J. Plenert writes: "The third quarter seems to be a hard quarter to keep up our attendance, mostly evident in the evening service. During July and August we have union services in the evening with three churches in the community, and it worked out most satisfactorily. The fall work has begun with an increased attendance in Sunday School and church service. Wednesday evening we have five Bible classes in the church basement. Last Wednesday there were over forty present. The Prayer Meeting starts at seven o'clock and at 7:30 we have a Teacher Training Course in New Testament History with the adults upstairs, with an attendance of forty-five to fifty. So we have from seventy-five to eighty persons in the church on Wednesday evening."

Their total contributions for the poorest quarter of the year were $242.53, with $187.07 in the treasury.

Smith Corner (East Freedom, Pa.):— Brother J. S. Rough submits his second report with a spirit of optimism. He reports an average attendance of fifty-four in the Sunday School and that rarely any one leaves after the session, but most every one remains for the preaching service. It is singularly strange that the evening service is the best attended, with an average of about seventy-five and a maximum of one hundred twenty-five. The average attendance at the Prayer Meeting on Wednesday night is thirty-five. Most of the people are on relief and cannot contribute anything. They have made some inexpensive improvements to the church that are all paid for. On October 20, they started revival meetings and several souls have been saved and confessed Christ as their Savior. The brethren S. D. Yoder, L. H. Glass, and Jacob Unruh are helping with effective messages.

Portland, Oregon:—This is a Mission under the care of the Pacific Conference, but Miss Catherine Niswander is supported by our Board. She writes: "We praise God that the work in Portland can be continued. We are sure God is with us and is blessing our efforts. We are praying that if it is God's will that a change of location can be made here, that God may lead the way and open the very place where He wants it to be located. Pray that we may have much courage and strength to serve the Lord. In August a number of conference folks from the Eastern District came through Portland and held a service at our Mission, which was enjoyed by all present. The attendance at our Sunday School has started to pick up again. We hope to win those back who have not come yet, after the summer slump. We ask a continued interest in your prayers."

Will the congregations of the conference please remember the address of the new treasurer of the Home Mission Board. Instead of Rev. J. E. Amstutz, Trenton, Ohio, it is now Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, 122 Juniper Street, Quakertown, Pa. We expect to receive our share of the missionary offerings that are contributed during the Thanksgiving and holiday season.

CANADA

After the death of Brother Gerhard Buhler at Herbert, Saskatchewan, Brother Benno Toews was asssisting in the work there from June 4 to August 28. The field has seven preaching points scattered over a large territory in which three hundred eleven members reside, which are served by five workers.

Extracts from a Report by Rev. Jacob Nickel, Aberdeen, Saskatchewan

I took a trip to Swan Plaine on the truck. Our party was composed of fourteen adults and six children. It required ten hours to make the trip, and we were cordially received. My headquarters were taken up in the home of G. Fedrau; their home was most convenient for the meetings because it had no partitions. It was agreed to have meetings every evening while I was there. During the day I wanted to call at the various homes. The people have few horses or oxen and so I had to go on foot. It was to my advantage that the people had mostly half a quarter of land, and did not live so far apart. It was reported that about fifty families were living in that community, but I have seen only about twenty-five families. On Friday I had two services. I found a real welcome everywhere, and the Word of God was gladly received. They did not have any meetings yet except a funeral service. All were in favor of gathering together to sing and two men were asked to read sermons out of a book of sermons. I promised to send them a book of sermons, which has been done. It seemed the people appreciate the services now more than when they were convenient. I conducted five services. The people have schools, and the soil is fertile, but they need horses and oxen to break the sod. The government pays them fifteen dollars for plowing. For this amount they figure they can get four acres broken up with a tractor. They have some sown already, but it is a pity that they had to depend on the government for their seed, and that arrived late, after Pentecost. Nice garden vegetables were to be seen everywhere. This fact and the neat little homes and the big supply of ready cut fuel gave me the impression that the people have taken fresh courage. About ten miles away there is unclaimed land to be had. The people have eighteen miles to town and the road is almost too heavy to cart wood there, which is the only article they have to sell. Those having a couple cows have a little income. A truck comes twice a week to fetch these products to town. Farms can be secured there for little money. Some of our people could rent land so that in this way two brethren could sow thirty-three acres, but they have in some places many Canadian thistles. The people are optimistic in their outlook for the future. They asked us to come again.

This letter gives us a little glimpse into a Canadian Home Mission field, with its hardships of pioneer life.

Saskatoon, Sask.:— In the Mennonite and the Christian Evangel of November 5, is a complete history of the founding of the Girls' Home and Church extension work in Saskatoon. Under the blessing of God this work is progressing nicely and proves a benediction to the people there and the girls who work in the city. But they are in dire need of a meeting place for church and Sunday School and Y. P. S. The Victory School building is too small and uncomfortable and costs thirty-five dollars a month. The General Conference has approved and encouraged the gathering of five thousand dollars for a church and workers' home. This is a modest sum for such a large project. The Home Mission Board has waited six years before starting the solicitation for this fund because of the depression, but the needs are so urgent that we dare wait no longer. Accordingly a letter will be sent out to our Conference congregations praying for special contributions for this purpose. We trust this plea will find its way into the hearts of our people and make them willing to deny themselves sufficiently, so the money can be secured for this worthy object. The Board has decided not to begin the work of building until the money is in sight. The people of Saskatoon are asked to secure the lot and pay for it. They promise to do their utmost. Will you help us so these people get their meeting place? We expect the ministers and leaders of the congregations to show their interest in this cause by a generous response.

The November issue of the Missionary News and Notes contains a very comprehensive report of work done and the clothing donated by the Women's Missionary Societies of our churches since 1920. The work of these societies has produced results that more than justify their existence and has done much to create missionary interest in our widely scattered congregations.

FORGETTING

"Forgetting those things which are behind . . . I press toward the mark."—Paul.

As we press toward our mark, the heavenlies with Christ Jesus, do we remember to do as Paul did, forget the things that are behind, the yesterdays, our mistakes, and those of other people?

Have we fears of tomorrow, fears that the nations will err, that the church is going astray, that the young folks are "going to the dogs," that we can not pay our taxes and interest, let alone debts? Haunting fears, as fears, become a burden better left behind and forgotten, as the clarity of our vision without hat fear will increase effort and multiply the esult of trying. Forget fear and press toward he mark with courage. One man with courage in the Lord will do more good than a dozen alamity howlers.

Are we haunted by yesterday's failure? Our wn? Did our tongue become unbridled and wag to and fro? Were we unneighborly or nhospitable? Did we fail to visit the sick or orrowing? Were we proud because we are not s poor as our neighbor, or covetous because ur neighbor is richer than we? Let us with atience press on again. Perhaps we shall do much better if we forget what is behind and eep our eyes on the mark.

Have we forgotten the sins of our fallen rother and sister, or do we pull our skirts side as we sweep haughtily by in our self-ghteousness, breaking their hearts by our oldness? Oh, let us forget their sin, since he good God forgot ours. And may we give all the love and kindness in our power. May we also forget those prayers which we call unanswered. Oh no, let us not forget to pray them again and again, but let us forget to speak of unanswered prayers. Let us trust and believe that the Lord is answering them in some way far better than our way. Let us forget the things which are behind, but Christ and the glory world are before. Let us never forget them.—U. M.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Missionary Work In Cities

(Consecration Meeting)—Acts 14:1-7

A missionary in the general sense is one who is sent out by authority for some service or on some commission. We are thinking of Christian missionaries who are sent out by the Holy Spirit, usually under the direction of some organized board or organization or sometimes also going out on a venture of faith, believing that God cares for His workers and will supply all their needs.

The missionary of the cross goes out into some part of the world to perform some service or on some commission. That service is none other than being obedient to the command of the Master when He asked men to go forth and preach the gospel and baptize them into the kingdom in the name and power of a triune God. What glorious privilege it is when a young man or woman feels the call to such a service! Life will forever be different. College teachers tell us that grades immediately take a rapid rise when such a consecration takes place, the grass seems greener, love and hope and purpose are multiplied, and Jesus Christ seems closer and more powerful.

The task of a missionary is to be a human co-worker with God, bringing men, women, and children into the glorious fellowship with Jesus Christ as their personal Savior from sin. But the missionary will be more than human, the Holy Spirit will use and empower him. God and man will touch a life out of touch with God, the Holy Spirit will convict of sin, teach of righteousness and judgment, and if the sinner will yield he will be baptized into the Christian life and will be led onto the path of perfection.

Our Mennonite church has been primarily a rural church. Until quite recently most of our people have resided in rural sections. In these later years a goodly number of our people have gone to the more populated centers to find employment. The church should move with them. In too many cases they were left to drift into the world or into some other denomination. We have established missions in a few of our cities, carrying on missionary and church extension work, but we have been far too faithless and slow in our endeavors. Very true, no church should go into a city merely to keep denominationalism alive and do so by planting three churches where one would suffice. The need is sufficiently great that we should bring the blessed Christian gospel story wherever there is a need of workers, wherever there are lost souls and those who have not given full consecration to their Lord and Master.

Questions and Topics

1. What is a missionary? What are the requirements for one who desires to become a missionary?
2. Why should a missionary go to people if they do not desire such help?
3. What does it mean to become a Christian?
4. What opportunities are afforded to the missionary in our cities?
5. What have been some of the accomplishments in our city missions?

Types Of Missionary Workers

Acts 8:5-8; Ephesians 4:11-13

The task of missions has always been one of the greatest challenges of the church of Jesus Christ. The church which is not a missionary church is rarely a growing or spiritual church. There are no more compelling chapters in history than the lives of some of our missionaries. If you have not done so, plan to read some of the thrilling biographies of some of the following world renowned Christian leaders. These books can be procured at the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana, at the very low price of 75 cents a copy. Choose several of the following: Adoniram Judson, George Whitefield, Martin Luther, Henry Martyn, William Carey, James Hudson Taylor, Dwight L. Moody, David Livingstone, and John G. Paton.

We have a very fine example of a consecrated and Spirit-guided missionary in Philip, the evangelist, who went about everywhere preaching the gospel of Christ, and wherever men permitted him to help them there was great joy. It is an outstanding example of a true Christian missionary when we read of the way Philip was led to meet the Ethiopian eunuch bringing him more knowledge of the Christ also can be guided to serve if we give the Holy Spirit a chance, so that He may lead us.

One of the greatest difficulties of the Christian church is that we think it is a task for ministers, deacons and Sunday School teachers. To be a Christian is more than merely belonging to an organization or helping that organization to keep functioning. To be a Christian means that an individual has had a new spiritual experience, he is setting out on a wonderful way of living with a living faith and hope which i centered in Jesus Christ as Savior and Redeemer. Is your Christian life something lik that? If not, give Christ a chance, He did s much for you on cruel Calvary.

We do not have to go to India or China t serve, although some young people should pla to do so, we may also serve in other ways. W may prepare to become teachers, pastors, evangelists, lay workers, and intercessors. "The also serve who stand and pray." What we nee is a large host of young people and older ones too, who will be responsible, who will give th church a large measure of loyalty in time, effort, and money. In too many cases the churc must play "second fiddle." It is not fair, Go gave His best to you and for me.

Questions and Topics

1. Why is it such a joy to be in the service o Christ?
2. Give a brief history of your favorite missionary.
3. Can a public school teacher be a missionary

4. What are some ways in which we can be a missionary?
5. Tell why it is essential for men to be a spiritual creature?
6. Tell of some of the hardships and joys of the foreign missionary.
7. How can we obey in response to the great commission?

What Is Christ Seeking To Do In The World?

(Consecration Meeting) II Tim. 1:8-12

"For the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

When Jesus was here among men, His mission was several-fold, namely:

1. He urged them to repent of their sins and turn from unrighteousness.
2. He healed their sick and broken bodies and cared for their physical needs.
3. He called certain ones to make known the good news of salvation.
4. By example and precept He led men into communion with God.
5. He preached and practiced brotherhood among all men.
6. He pointed the way to eternal life.

Christ is not visibly present with His people today, but His work is being carried on in the world by those who love Him and have given themselves to Him to be used in carrying to a glorious completion the work which He inaugurated. In speaking to His disciples of the time when He would return to the Father, He said, "He that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go to My Father." Soon He is coming again and till then we are to carry on in His name; He says, "Occupy till I come." Just before His ascension, He said to His disciples, and to you and me through them, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me." Again, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you."

The Father sent the Son into the world on a two-fold mission, namely, "To seek and to save that which was lost," and to "destroy the works of the devil."

In the world today Jesus, through His followers, is carrying forward these two objectives. The primary business of the church is to tell the story of Christ's salvation to the remotest part of the earth. There are three kinds of missionaries: The o-missionary, the co-missionary, and the go-missionary. God save us from being the o-missionary. We are not commissioned to take the world for Christ, but God is displeased if we fail to take Christ to the world.

We, too, in carrying on for Jesus, "destroy the works of the devil," when we get people saved, and in no other way. Jesus taught that in order that men may be right in their living, the fountain source of their lives must be changed.

Today Jesus Christ is the sole remedy for sin and unrighteousness.

His mission is to relieve the distresses of humanity. He blesses little children. He now calls many men and women to be leaders and workers in His program, and in the proclamation of salvation. He still guides men into the blessings of knowing God and communing with Him. His claims in behalf of brotherhood are stronger now than ever. Men of all nations know each other; He says they should love each other. His leadership toward eternal life and the establishment of His kingdom is more powerful than ever.

Questions

1. What did Jesus seek to do when He was on this earth?
2. Should we seek to do the same things?
3. Are we doing these things? Are we leading the lost to Christ?
4. Am I bearing witness to the truth?
5. How did Jesus "destroy the works of the "devil" while on earth?
6. How can you and I "destroy the works of the devil"?
7. Why was it necessary for Christ to take up such a work?

How Can I Help Christ's Work In The World?

II Tim. 2:22-26

"We are labourers together with God."

Pre-Prayer

That we may be true and faithful in the small part that is ours as co-labourer with God.

There are three things which we must first do in order to help the work of Christ in the world today. These apply to our own self. First, we can help by accepting Him as our personal Savior from sin. This is fundamental and primary. There are too many who are trying to do the work of Christ and live the Christian life without the Christian's heart. All such effort is doomed to failure and disappointment. "Ye must be born again." Before we are Christians, there is utterly nothing we can do that will be acceptable to God. After conversion, everything we do for Christ because His love constrains us, will be rewarded.

Second, we can help by living lives of separation from the world. Judging from the manner of living of many professed Christians, there is really little or no difference between them and the enemies of Jesus. The Bible has much to say in regard to our attitude toward the world in which we live. Read John 15:19; II Cor. 6:14; II Cor. 6:17; James 4:4; I John 2:15.

We are in the world, but not of the world. It is all right for the ship to be in the water, but it is quite another matter for the water to be in the ship. Christians are to help and love the unsaved, but the cause of Christ is greatly hindered when the children of God compromise and become partakers of other men's sin.

Third, we can help by consecrating ourselves wholly to God. "The world has yet to see what God can do with a man wholly consecrated to Him," said a friend to Dwight L. Moody. "By the grace of God," replied Moody, "I'll be that man"! Because of Moody's full consecration to God, and to God's service, during his life time, he shook two continents mightily for God, and though he has long since departed to be with Christ, his influence is still mightily operative in the world.

"Regeneration," "Separation," and "Consecration," where one knows experimentally the meaning of these words he is mightily promoting the cause of Christ in the world.

Now let us see how an Intermediate who has taken these three steps can help the program of Christ at every point. 1. They can be witnesses of His forgiveness of sin. By their conspicuous goodness, as well as by their works, they can give a clear message to others. 2. They can be His agents in administering to distresses among persons whom they know. They can battle against dishonesty and poverty and crime and drunkenness, and disease, and injustice. 3. They can give their lives to son form of service for Him, and can support, b money and effort and prayer, the extension His kingdom by personal work. 4. They ca become examples of the possibilities of th Christian life, being models of piety and goodness. 5. They can stand unflinchingly fo peace and against war, for love and agains hate, for brotherhood and against race discrimination. 6. They can invite others into th kingdom, on the basis of the pure life and a influence for good that will reach over into eternal life.

Questions

1. How many days in the week should we liv for Christ?
2. How many of these seven days can we spar for the devil?
3. What are some of Christ's teachings tha should be instilled in our minds?
4. Why should we make an effort to carry o the work of Christ?
5. How can I help Christ's work in my ow home?
6. How can I help Christ's work in my school?
7. How can I help Christ's work in my community?

Topic.—Keeping God's House A Holy Place

Mark 11:15-17 (Consecration meeting)

We read today of a visit Jesus made to th temple in Jerusalem. He enjoyed going t God's house, for we are told in Luke 4:16, tha He went to the synagogue "as His custom was. He could not worship God on this visit to th temple, for things were being done there tha were entirely wrong. Men were there buyin and selling. Not only were they making a plac of business out of God's house, but they wer cheating each other. Jesus said they had mad God's house "a den of thieves." He reminde them that the temple had been built as a plac of prayer where people of all nations migh come to worship God. He was both sad an angry when He saw what was being done there. The people who had wanted the selling done in the temple were angry indeed when Jesus spoiled their business, but He had come to please God, not man.

I wonder if we are doing our best to keep God's house a holy place, a place where God rules and where we can meet Him at any time. Sometimes we thoughtlessly do things that grieve Him and that makes it hard or even impossible for people to worship Him there. I have seen just one boy or one girl spoil a whole service by laughing, talking, or playing. Don't you think that grieves God's heart as truly as the buying and selling? He would have us know that His house is "a house of prayer" today as well as many years ago. I am thinking just now of a Junior meeting where boys and girls were deeply interested. They were busy asking and answering questions. A boy came into the meeting very late. He immediately began laughing at nothing, of course doing his best to make others laugh, too. He made it harder for all to worship. What would Jesus have done to such a boy? Let us be very, very careful about our actions in God's house. Not only are others disturbed by our lack of reverence, but God is grieved. Read Hab.2:20. It should be easy to be quiet in church if we remember that the Lord is there.

We can help to keep God's house holy by entering heartily into the service. When a song is announced, sing and think of what you are singing. At the time of prayer, bow your head reverently and be in prayer yourself. Remember that the offering is a part of the service too, not a recess. Then listen quietly while others are speaking and when your turn comes to speak, remind yourself that God is right there listening to every word.

I don't believe it is necessary to speak of the bigger things, such as buying and selling or having worldly entertainment in the church. If ever there is a question in your mind about these things, think of what Jesus said, "My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer." Nothing should ever be done in God's house that will grieve Him.

Plans for the Meeting

Study Old Testament lessons on reverence for God's presence. Moses at the burning bush, experiences at Mount Sinai, Uzzah and the Ark, Isaiah in the temple, etc.

Questions

1. Explain the meaning of "holy."
2. Why should God's house be kept holy?
3. How may Juniors help to keep it holy?
4. Mention ways in which boys and girls sometimes show a lack of reverence in church; in Junior C. E. meetings.
5. How may we know what should be done in church ?

Topic.—Preparing for Jesus' Birthday
Isaiah 9:6, 7

"I wish I had a Christmas gift
For our dear Lord above!
I know what we can give Him,
A heart just full of love."

Can you sit real quietly for a few minutes and just think? Imagine you are planning a birthday party for another boy or girl. Have you chosen the person for whom you will give the party? Then we are ready to go on. Our thoughts go something like this: Where shall we have the party? Whom shall we invite? Then what shall we do, what shall we eat? And we must not forget the gifts. Have you not found that you can plan best when you know real well the one who is having the birthday? You know the friends he would like to have as guests, the games he would enjoy, the gifts he would appreciate. Then, too, you always plan best for one you love.

We are going on now to think of Jesus and His birthday. Many people celebrate His birthday without thinking of Him at all. They think only of themselves and their friends, of having a good time, feasting and remembering each other with gifts. How would your friend feel if at this party we were planning everybody would forget about him, give to each other all of the gifts they had bought, and not even speak to him? None of you would be so rude, I am sure.

How shall we prepare for Jesus' birthday We can plan most wisely if we know Him well. An interesting way to learn about Him is to find all of the names by which He is called in the Bible. There are many and each helps to describe Him.

As we come to know Him, we should love Him too. If He has cleansed our hearts, I am sure we can plan a birthday that will please Him. He spoke much of His Father in heaven, so we know He is pleased when we praise the Father. We should celebrate in His house where He loved to be. Perhaps you are already getting ready for a Christmas program. As you learn your part, think of doing it in the way that will please Him.

Since He has told us to love one another, we feel that it is right to give gifts to those we love, but in all our giving let us not forget the One whose birthday we are celebrating. How about the gift to Him? We could make a special thank offering to missions or give something to someone who is poor and may not have any other gifts. You might take into your home for the day someone who is lonely and sad. We like to remember that Christ once said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." No gift to Him is complete unless you give Him your heart and life. Is there room in your heart for Him today?

"Thou didst leave Thy throne and Thy kingly [crown,
When Thou camest to earth for me;
But in Bethlehem's home was there found no [room,
For Thy holy nativity!
"O come to my heart, Lord Jesus!
There is room in my heart for Thee,
O come to my heart, Lord Jesus, come,
There is room in my heart for Thee."

We think it sad that there was so little room for Jesus when He came to Bethlehem a baby. Let it not be said of any of us that we have no room for Him in our hearts this Christmas time.

Plans for the Meeting

Study the names of Jesus found in the Bible, six of which are mentioned in the Daily Readings. The Juniors will enjoy finding these names at home. Each society should plan some definite work for Christmas that will help others and glorify Christ. It is our prayer that the Juniors may so see Him in the study today that they will want to give such an expression of their love.

Daily Readings

Immanuel, Isa. 7:14; The Savior, Luke 2:11; Jesus, Matt. 1:21; An Everlasting Kingdom, Luke 1:32, 33; The Lamb of God, John 1:29; The Good Shepherd, John 10:14.

Questions

1. Who is most thought of at a birthday gathering?
2. Why is Jesus often forgotten at Christmas celebrations?
3. How may we give Him His rightful place at Christmas?
4. Give your idea of the right use of Jesus' birthday.
5. How may we be rightly prepared for that day?

Sschoomunches (noon-day luncheon meetings of Sunday School teachers) are showing progress in number and in interest. These meetings are held in Capetown, Durban, Johannesburg, Port Elizabeth, Pretoria, Kimberley, Bloemfontein and Grahamstown. Leaders from all parts of the country, as well as visitors from the United States, Japan, the Sudan and the Belgian Congo address these meetings. This is one of the important features of the work of the South African National Sunday School Association. Wayside Sunday Schools are also a prominent part of the work carried on by this Association. In Port Elizabeth there are now thirteen such schools with an enrollment of 7000 children each Sunday, and in Capetown there are five with an average attendance of 400. One Wayside Sunday School in Port Elizabeth has gone so far as to hold a service every Sunday afternoon for Indian women, another conducts a Wayside Sunday School on Saturday afternoon which has an attendance of 60 or 70 white children. This would indicate that the appeal of the Sunday School is still as strong as ever, and through the efforts of these Wayside Sunday Schools it is hoped that the seed is being sown for a rich harvest in years to come.

The Saloon—A Bar

"The saloon is sometimes called a bar
That's true!
A bar to heaven, a door to hell,
Whoever named it, named it well;
A bar to manliness and wealth,
A door to want and broken health;
A bar to honor, pride, and fame,
A door to grief, and sin, and shame;
A bar to hope, a bar to prayer,
A door to darkness and despair;
A bar to honored, useful life,
A door to brawling, senseless strife;
A bar to all that's true and brave,
A door to every drunkard's grave;
A bar to joys that home imparts,
A door to tears and aching hearts;
A bar to heaven, a door to hell,
Whoever named it, named it well!"

Tabor Church, Goessel, Kansas, October 18, 1935. Dear Readers:— We have again closed a successful Sunday School year. We have the election of officers in September, and the first Sunday in October a new year starts. The officers are Alfador Frey, superintendent; G. R. Funk, secretary; H. J. Brandt, treasurer; and B. W. Schmidt, Junior superintendent. There are twenty classes. The average attendance was not as high as it was the previous year. This is due perhaps to the fact that there has been much sickness and bad weather. Yet, the collections showed a considerable increase. The treasurer reported over $300 on hand. It was moved that $200 should go to the missions. It was also moved that in the future the surplus shall be used as a fund for enlarging our church building.

On June 23, Rev. H. D. Epp of Henderson, Nebraska, gave us an inspiring sermon. Our pastor, Rev. P. H. Richert, and Sister Augusta Schmidt were the two delegates from our church to the General Conference. During the absence of our pastor, Rev. Peter Buller and Rev. C. Frey filled the pulpit.

In the afternoon of August 18, we had our Sunday School picnic.

Brother and Sister David Balzer celebrated their silver wedding anniversary October 14. The whole congregation was invited for this occasion. Henry Schroeder, a brother of Mrs. Balzer, led the program. A number of songs and instrumental selections were presented by various friends of the couple. Mr. Balzer is our church janitor.

We are making preparations for a farewell for Sister Augusta Schmidt, who will soon return to India again. Sister Frieda Sprunger visited our church in September.

The Ladies' Sewing Society is planning a mission sale in the near future.

Our pastor announced that he will start a catechism class the first Sunday in November.

Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio, has experienced a blessed year, enjoying the good gifts from a loving Heavenly Father. We have been blessed with abundant harvests and did not suffer at any time from lack of rain. Our farmers have again more of a hopeful aspect in matters financial. But we feel that our greatest blessing comes to us in the things of the Spirit. We feel an earnest desire that there may come a deepening of the soul life of all of our members and that we may be a blessing to many.

Feeling a need for more Bible reading in the home, over fifty of our number have signed up to read the Bible through in the year 1935, reading three chapters per day and five each Sunday. Many are reporting much joy in again reading through the whole Bible.

Aside from the regular worship services and Christian Endeavor meetings, we were privileged in having a beautiful Child Consecration service, a goodly number of delightful weddings and a meaningful communion service. During the last few weeks there have been a corn-cutting and a moonlight corn husking to help those who needed help. On the latter occasion about sixty-five people, both young and old, participated.

During the weeks while our pastor, Rev. A. R. Keiser, was attending the General Conference and teaching a course in the Bethel Retreat, we were served by neighboring ministers. One Sunday was designated as Visitation Sunday.

We are looking forward to the holiday season, anxious that the lives of all of our members may become more radiantly joyful in the Christian life, and are happy to report that we are all busy in our work, and there is evidently a sense of true joy and peace in both our homes and in the church. May God grant peace and joy to all of our sister churches, is our prayer.

Our Church in Lima.—During the past year or two Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Esau have been laboring faithfully in the Lima Gospel Chapel. They received some financial help from the Evangelization Committee of the Middle District Conference. In accordance with conference action, several members of the above committee assisted in organizing the group into a church.

Following a series of helpful spiritual messages, fourteen active and four associate members became the charter members in the organization which took place on Wednesday evening, October 2.

The charter members gathered in the front of the church and while joining hands all sang "Blest be the tie that binds" and remained thus standing for the consecration prayer. There is in evidence a fine spirit of earnestness and willingness to work. In the Women's Missionary Society meeting held in that week there were nine ladies present and an offering was given for missions amounting to three dollars and forty cents.

In the election of officers, Brother Roethlisberger was elected deacon and the brethren R. E. Bixel and M. A. Parker were chosen to be trustees. With a continuance of consecration for God's work and the presence of the Holy Spirit, the Mennonite church in Lima may become one of our strong churches. Let us pray for them and help them!

The Message of Haggai and Zechariah

Lesson Text.—Haggai 1:2-8; 2:8, 9;
Zechariah 4:1-10

Golden Text.—I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord. Ps. 122:1.

In our last Sunday's lesson we learned that the remnant of Judah in captivity in Babylon were allowed under Cyrus the Great to return to Jerusalem. We must bear in mind, however, that the largest number of Jews remained in Babylonia. Some of these that remained were absorbed in the civilization of Babylonia, while others kept their faith and helped to finance the small remnant that returned. It is well for our Sunday School folks to again remind themselves that these years spent in captiviy were very much worth while. It was a time of sifting and of the transition from the people of a land and political ambitions to the people of a book and the spiritualizing of their worship. We remember from our last Sunday's worship that Cyrus the Great in 539 B. C. conquered the Babylonians and so the Jews came in under the jurisdiction. According to the colonial policy of Cyrus he issued an edict in 538 B. C. that the Jews could return to Palestine and rebuild the temple and the walls of Jerusalem. This return is exceedingly important because that if none of the Jews had returned, they would have been entirely absorbed by Eastern civilization. The Hebrew scriptures would have been lost. Christianity would not have existed. So this small group of returning Jews carried the future of Judaism and Christianity with them. In 537 B. C. the first little band started on their eight hundred mile journey under Zerubbabel, Prince of the Royal House of David, and Joshua, the Priest. Cyrus helped this small group with money and also ordered his governors in other provinces to help the Jews as they went across their territory. Cyrus also returned the sacred vessels that the Babylonian king had taken. These exiles returned with great joy and yet also grief as they came to the Holy City and saw the debris of fifty years. They immediately began the laying of the foundation of the new temple in 536 B. C. The people living in Palestine wanted to help these returned exiles to build, but the exiles refused them. This made enemies of the inhabitants of Palestine and they blocked all efforts to rebuild the temple, so for sixteen years nothing was done. During this time Cyrus died in 529 B. C. Shortly following his death, Cyrus' empire seemed to be going to pieces and it was not until 519 that Darius finally mustered the situation. It was during these years of chaos that the Jews renewed their hopes. This was largely due to the leadership of the two prophets, Haggai and Zechariah. They encouraged the returned exiles to go on building the house of the Lord. They emphasized the fact that the time had now come when God would restore Israel and they would become a nation under Zerubbabel of the house of David. Urged on by these prophets, the people went to work in earnest and in four years the temple was completed 520-516 B. C. The importance of this lesson lies in the message of hope of the prophets and in the rebuilding of this temple which became the religious center of the disbursing Jews.

1. What is the significance of the return of the Jews to Jerusalem?
2. What checked the Jews in the rebuilding of the temple?
3. What part did Haggai and Zechariah have in the rebuilding of the temple?

Ezra's Mission to Jerusalem

Ezra 7:6-10; 8:21-23, 31, 32

Golden Text.—The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him. Ezra 8:22.

This lesson is taken from the book of Ezra, which was written over 200 years later than the prophecies we studied last Sunday. After the temple was completed in 516 B. C., we have no record of Judah for about fifty years, except that given by Malachi, the prophet. In about 445 B. C., the second group of exiles came to Palestine under the leadership of Nehemiah. When he arrived in Jerusalem he saw the miserable conditions of his people materially and spiritually. The poor peasants were oppressed, the temple was desecrated, the Sabbath was not kept and the people were intermarrying with foreigners. He immediately began to bring about reforms along these lines. While Nehemiah was bringing about reforms economically and politically, Ezra, a Jewish priest, was bringing about reforms religiously. He came to Jerusalem from Babylon with an enthusiastic band of followers and infused new life into the discouraged Jews. During the time of the Jews in captivity they had developed the order of scribes. The scribe was a scholar, lawyer, preacher, and magistrate all in one. Ezra belonged to this group. When he came to Jerusalem he brought with him a book, undoubtedly the pentateuch. This he read to the people and explained its meaning to them. This was of great significance because it is the beginning of that emphasis on Jewish legalism that so dominated the Jews at the time of Jesus. From this time on the Jewish religion became less and less a matter of the heart and more emphasis on rules and regulations.

1. What was the experience of the Jews between the time of Haggai and Ezra?
2. What contribution did Ezra make to the Jews at Jerusalem?
3. What place does the Bible hold in the civilization of the people?
4. What place does the Bible hold in the life of an individual?

A THANKSGIVING MEDITATION

By the time our church paper reaches the reader we will again have entered the Thanksgiving season. Each year, because of different circumstances and experiences, Thanksgiving may mean something quite different. We may either be more thankful or less thankful. This year from an economic point of view it may be a little easier materially to have a thankful spirit, but on the other hand there is a great uncertainty in our nation as well as in the world. We are surrounded with wars and rumors of wars. Dangers are threatening on every hand. What should be the attitude of the Christian on Thanksgiving Day in times like these?

The Psalmist says, "O that men would praise God for his goodness and his wonderful works to the children of men." It seems to be rather a common experience that when our material needs are fairly supplied and we begin to feel prosperous, we forget God. Prosperity is more dangerous to spiritual life than depression. How true it is that when everything goes well we forget to thank God and rather take credit to ourselves for the blessings we have. But when our needs are not supplied and things do not go so well we begin to grumble and complain. "Though the fig tree will not blossom and the calves are not in the stall, yet will I praise Jehovah." Our Thanksgiving is a very superficial one if it is determined by what we have or do not have.

What, then, shall we be thankful for? In the first place we should be thankful for God. Not for what He gives us only, but for what He is to us. He often bestows upon us the greatest blessings by withholding things we want. It is not so much what we have as what we are that determines our Thanksgiving spirit.

How may we give thanks to God? In the first place we should express it in words. God is just as well pleased by hearing our thank-you's as is the parent when given by the child. In the second place we may express our gratitude by the living of a consistant Christian life and the manifestation of a thanks giving spirit throughout the year. —Weaver.

THE SECRET OF A GOOD HOME

What is a good home? Need it be a rich one or a poor one? Parents have much to do with making it good. John Ruskin wrote of his home: "I have been taught the perfect meaning of peace in thought, act and word. I never heard may father's or mother's voice once raised in any question with each other nor seen an angry glance in the eyes of either. Next to this priceless gift of peace, I had received the perfect understanding of the natures of obedience and faith. Nothing was ever promised me that was not given, nothing ever threatened that was not inflicted, nothing ever told me that was not true."—Selected.

Christianity is not just a theory, to be discussed and believed, but a way of life.

Today is a better day than yesterday. Do not let deceptions destroy confidence in rea honest goodness.

JOTTINGS

Miss Frieda Sprunger, home on furlough from the mission field in China, is spending most of the month of November visiting the churches of the Northern District Conference. She expects to be back home in Berne, Indiana, shortly before Thanksgiving.

Rev. P. P. Wedel of Moundridge, Kansas, has been engaged by the Foreign Mission Board to hold a series of evangelistic meetings at the Mennonite Mission station at Oraibi, Arizona. This series of meetings is scheduled to last two weeks, from November 7th to 21st.

At the request of the Canadian Conference the Publication Board of the General Conference has published a Canadian edition of the regular German Catechism. This contains in addition to the 199 Questions and Answers the Articles of Faith adopted by the Canadian Conference in 1930. The size of the book and the binding are similar to the new English Catechism published in 1934. In our Canadian churches the services are almost all still held in the German language.

The fall session of the Ministers Conference of the Middle District Conference was held in Chicago, November 4th to 6th. One of the main matters discussed at the Conference was the proposition to reestablish Witmarsum Seminary on the Campus of the Bethany Seminary. No definite conclusion was reached at the Conference, but it was recognized by those present that there is need for a good Mennonite seminary to supply the pulpits of the congregations belonging to the various Mennonite denominations.

The repeated crop failures of the past few years are causing many of the Mennonites who settled in the prairie provinces of Canada to look for land elsewhere, especially in British Columbia, which has a much milder and more equitable climate. At present there are three fairly large settlements of Mennonites in that province at Yarrow, Sardis, and Abbotsford. There is also a small settlement of about 18 families near Courtenay on Vancouver Island. The Home Mission Board of the General Conference is trying to help the young people drifting into Vancouver by opening a Girls' Home there. Rev. J. H. Janzen, formerly of Waterloo, Ontario, has been given the task of establishing and supervising this institution.

Sister Frieda Kaufman of the Bethel Hospital at Newton, Kansas, has written a delightful little book. AUF WANDERWEGEN, in which she tells about her recent visit to Switzerland and Germany. Those who read German will find this book very interesting in that it portrays present conditions in those countries.

Several congregations are at this time without a regular minister and are asking various pastors to preach trial sermons. It is understood that the First Mennonite Church of Bluffton, Ohio, has extended a call to Rev. H. T. Unruh of Halstead, Kansas, and he has accepted it.

Since the General Conference many Conference Boards have been reorganized. A complete list of the various boards will be published in the Mennonite Year Book for 1936, which will be ready for distribution about December 1. It is especially important to note that the Home Mission Board has a new treasurer, namely, Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander of Quakertown, Pa. Contributions for Home Missions should be sent to him and not to Rev. J. E. Amstutz, the former treasurer.

A copy of the new 1935 Christmas Catalog of the Mennonite Book Concern has been mailed out to over 3000 subscribers of the BUNDESBOTE and THE MENNONITE AND THE CHRISTIAN EVANGEL. If your copy failed to reach you, write for one today. No Christian home can afford to be without an adequate supply of books, Bibles, and other religious literature. If you are a loyal member of the General Conference you should send your orders to the official conference book store, the Mennonite Book Concern, located at Berne, Indiana.

Reports from the Mennonite settlement in Paraguay are very encouraging. In spite of poor harvests due to drought, the settlers are planning to start mission work among the Lenguas, a tribe of Indians living near the settlements. The people of Paraguay rejoiced when the war with Bolivia ended a few months ago and it is hoped that the peace will be a lasting one. However, the latest reports from the Buenos Aires are none too bright for a complete settlement of differences in the near future. After more than three months of discussion the peace conference is still deadlocked since neither Bolivia nor Paraguay will make any concessions.

Farewell services for Miss Augusta Schmidt and Miss Martha Burkhalter were held Sunday, November 3. The services for Miss Schmidt were held at the Tabor Church near Goessel, Kansas, and the services for Miss Burkhalter were held at the First Mennonite Church at Berne, Indiana. These missionaries are scheduled to sail on the S. S. Wilson, leaving San Francisco on November 15. The Mission Board is sending them back to India by way of the Pacific on account of the war danger in the Mediterranean Sea. Miss Burkhalter is going back to serve her third term and Miss Schmidt to serve her second term.

Due to an unusual amount of illness among the missionaries in India during the past few months some families ought to come home on furlough, but the Foreign Mission Board cannot grant these requests or send out badly needed new missionaries until sufficient funds are available for this purpose. Following the great effort made to raise sufficient funds to wipe out all Conference debts there has been a slump in the gifts coming in for various conference enterprises. The mission boards, both Home and Foreign, are badly in need of funds to carry out their programs.

It is hoped that this issue of the MENNONITE AND THE CHRISTIAN EVANGEL will serve to stimulate missionary interest. Over 5000 copies of this issue will be distributed in General Conference churches. More than 7000 copies of the Missionary issue of the BUNDESBOTE will be distributed in those churches which still use the German language.

VOL. II HILLSBORO, KANSAS, DECEMBER 3, 1935 No. 23

EDITORIAL

The world, at least that part of it that calls itself "Christian," is busy with preparations to celebrate Christmas. There is probably no other holiday so universally observed as Christmas. Even in some countries where the majority of people are not Christians, many are beginning to consider Christmas a major holiday.

But when we watch the preparations for Christmas, especially here in America, we are often led to wonder whether the majority of people even in our so-called "Christian" America have not forgotten the true significance of the holiday. The day Christianity originally set apart to commemorate the Savior's birth has in too many communities become a hilarious feast day, on which the jolly old clown, Santa Claus holds sway.

The store windows, the decorations, the advertisements, the radio, and a host of other modern means of attracting customers, have increasingly emphasized Santa Claus to the exclusion of the Babe of Bethlehem. Perhaps Santa Claus is a more convenient symbol to attract those who buy the Christmas gifts. Santa Claus can be shown as doing things Christ would never do. For instance, Santa will be pictured in a few of the colored liquor advertisements as endorsing certain brands of whiskey, or perhaps even drinking a glass of some famous brand of liquor. Or on some wayside billboard he may be pictured as holding out to you a package of some famous brand of cigarettes.

No person who is not a crank objects to having a little fun and telling the eager little children that Santa Claus brought the gifts they see under the Christmas tree or in the stockings hanging by the fire. Who cannot remember those anxious little faces that peeked through keyholes, curtains, or doors slightly ajar, to discover what Santa Claus was bringing them for Christmas. We soon grow up to learn that Santa Claus is a pleasant myth, invented to give a little more zest to the happiness of childhood on Christmas Day.

The thing we are pleading for here is that we as Christians teach our children the true significance of Christmas and emphasize the Bible's beautiful story of Christ's wondrous birth in our celebrations, both in the home and in the church. The pity of it all is that even some churches have succumbed to the spell of Santa Claus. Is it not enough that our public schools, the business world, and the papers we read give first place to Santa Claus? Church programs should be free from reference to Santa Claus. The church has a sacred duty to give Christ the preeminence and shut out the worldly influences that have crept into our Christmas celebrations and are constantly seeking admission. It may be perfectly proper for the world to immoralize Santa Claus, but as individual Christians and as a church, we must glorify the Christ who was born more than 1900 years ago in lowly Bethlehem. If Christ had not been born, there would be no Christmas, no gifts, no joyous celebration, and even no Santa Claus. —F. J. W.

R FROM CHINA

we have ar-
easant voy-
September
e 24th, stop-

i, we continued
by which is approximately nland. From Hankow the journey was inued by train to a station (Taokow) within 40 miles of Kai Chow and the balance of the trip covered in a day by rickshaw, arriving in Kai Chow on the evening of October 4th.

One aspect of our trip I would like to mention and that is the contact it gave us with other missionaries. There were about 50 missionaries on our boat crossing the Pacific, a good many of them were for China, while others were going to Japan, India, or Singapore. In our traveling to the interior we also met missionaries from many places in China. It was very much worth while to meet all of these folks and get their viewpoints on the present missionary situation. From our contacts I gather that the number of missionaries in China is undergoing an increase. The year 1926 was the banner year with over 6000 missionaries on the field, then in 1927 came the civil war, evacuation and decrease of about 2000 missionaries. Before the effect of this disturbance was over the situation was complicated by the depression at home, causing further reduction of forces and curtailment of work. While many boards are still tied to a program and rigid economy and some even to further retraction there seems to be a more hopeful atmosphere. At the same time other boards are sending new missionaries ond actually starting expansion of work. The head of the Language School of the China Inland Mission informed us that their mission had had 200 new missionaries in the last two years and now this year they are expecting an enrollment of 75 new missionaries in their school. The Lutheran United Mission had six new missionaries on the same train with us going up to the Language School at Peking, while three others were taking up work immediately. On the same train were also new missionaries under the London Mission and the Evangelical Mission going to the Peking Language School.

Another not unwarranted inference from ou experiences on this trip is that the Chines heartily welcome foreign missionaries. W were very much impressed with the welcom given Mrs. Williams, an elderly missionary lady who was returning to China for a visit afte many years' absence. Her husband had bee killed in the Boxer uprising in 1900 and sh has spent most of the time since located a Oberlin, where she has mothered many Chines students. Some of these have now becom prominent in Chinese affairs, though they ar still to her just her Chinese boys and she i their "Mother Williams." Among these me are Mr. H. H. Kung, now Minister of Communications with the Chinese government, and Mr Fei Ch'i-hao, formerly very prominent in Y. M C. A. work in China and now also with th government. It was upon Mr. Kung's insisten invitation, even to the extent of paying he traveling expenses, that she made this retur trip. As the steamer docked at Shanghai, w heard some lusty college yells emanating fron a group of young men led by a tall, portl gentleman. The leader proved to be Mr. Fei directing his younger colleagues in a rousin cheer for Mrs. Williams. The men were al Chinese, who in former years had been at Oberlin and learned to know and love this foreig lady. It was interesting how her needs an difficulties had been foreseen and how thes Chinese were able to whisk her through th usual tiresome formalities of customs in a fev moments and carry her away to the home o Mr. Kung, where a reception was prepared b all her old friends. We chanced to meet Mrs Williams twice later in Shanghai and she wa fairly beaming with the attentions paid her an the pleasure of meeting old friends. She wa entertained several days in Mr. Kung's hom in Shanghai and then spent some time with hin in Nanking, and just recently I noticed in th paper that she had gone to Peking accompanie by Mr. Fei. Later she plans to go to Shansi where she used to work and where Mr. Kung' home originally was. At all these places Mrs Williams has been and will continue to b heartily and honestly welcomed, with the Chinese unashamedly admitting their loyalty an friendship to this foreign lady.

In our own case the reception was not s spectacular, but seemed as honest and hearty At the railway station, forty miles from here a big banner proclaimed a welcome to our fam ily, and we were then and there invited to a Chinese meal by one of our Christians who had been commissioned to represent various groups here. On arrival at Kai Chow, the students, workers, and Christians were hurriedly called together. Another banner was held aloft and while we stood by the school children sang "Onward Christian Soldiers" as a welcome song. James Liu and Stephen Wang were among the first to come forward and greet us, then one by one others of those who had worked with us in past years. Our fellow missionaries were also present in the crowd and we picked them out and spoke or waved to them. The welcome, however, was planned and executed entirely by the Chinese without any prompting on the part of the missionaries. I can well remember years, especially about 1926-1930, when the pro-nationalistic spirit was at its height, that very little was done to recognize foreign missionaries on their arrival or departure. We rejoice in the good spirit evident in the Chinese-foreign relationships in our mission and believe that there is a good foundation for a period of real cooperative endeavor in working for the Kingdom of God.

There are many other things that ought to be mentioned in connection with our arrival, as for instance how Brother and Sister Brown had tended to cleaning our house and getting it ready for occupancy, even to hanging curtains, how the Voth family traveled fifty miles from Tamingfu to be present at our arrival, and how Brother Ewert traveled the same distance from Chang Yuan. These things and many others have touched our hearts and made us feel truly wanted and truly welcome. Will you please remember us in your prayers that we may be given strength and wisdom to do the work God has given us.

In the near future I hope to write again of some of the things that have appealed to us as especially interesting in the work of our mission as we first glimpsed it after four years' absence.

Wishing God's blessing on you and the work we are all engaged in for His sake, we are

Sincerely yours,
Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker.

ENROUTE

Newton, Kansas, October 26, 1935.

WE, — and that has absolutely nothing to do with Col. Lindbergh and his flight over the ocean, — it means my good wife, our daughter, Miss Kate Neufeld, and myself, are now in Newton, Kansas, enjoying thoroughly the hospitality of the Deaconess Home in that city.. We landed here enroute from Waterloo, Ontario, to Vancouver, B. C., where we will have to conduct our work under the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, as it was decided upon by the last session of the Conference at Upland, California.

Once on our way, after many farewell visits at home in Waterloo, which made our hearts ache and rejoice at the same time, everything went well, and not the slightest mishap has befallen us. Our old faithful "Graham" carried us over the plains with a rapid velocity, leaving almost too little time to view the country. As I look back, it seems to me as if the beautiful banks of Lake Ontario, the big city of Cleveland, where we visited with our children; Berne, Indiana; the majestic Mississippi; Donnellson, Iowa; and Fortuna, Missouri, just flew past us, leaving in our memory unforgetable only the kind faces and the shining eyes of the good people who entertained us at these places. And if our digestion still is in a more or less satisfactory condition, this surely is not the fault of the people who did their best to overfeed us with the many good things which they wanted us to eat.

But rapidly as an automobile may travel over the good roads of America, time goes by still more rapidly, and now we are already three weeks in Kansas, working in different churches and congregations, and we are glad indeed to witness that the Lord is with us and fulfills His promises. We have been permitted to enjoy many hours of blessing with the children of God at the different places which we have visited during our sojourn here, and we never shall forget Brudertal, Johannestal, Hillsboro, Buhler, Newton, Alexanderwohl, and all the other places where we have been, making friends and having communion with them in the Holy Spirit.

Yesterday, October 25, 1935, the Western District Conference came to a close. In the beginning it seemed there were so many perplexing problems to solve that one almost desired to have the sword of Alexander the Great to untie all these Gordian knots. But it could be done without that weapon, according to the word of the apostle: "The weapons of our warfare are not of the flesh, but mighty before God." All the matters have been taken care of, and the different workers of the Conference can go on for another year in good confidence. And the Conference can rest assured that its undertakings will prosper, if the Lord wills it so.

What we need is to heed the admonition of our Lord according to Malachi 4:6, "He shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers; lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."

Here sit the fathers with their experience and watch over the foundations which they have laid. And as they have grown older and have experienced many disappointments in their lives, they have become skeptical. Mistrust has crept into their hearts, and when they see the young people pushing forward in their zealousness and their thirst for accomplishment, the old are afraid they might ruin the solid foundations, and they try to stop the young ones. Try to stop the flow of a mountain stream! If you can stop it, you can stop healthy youth in their moving forwad. But the fathers are concerned about their foundations and forget that on the same must be built walls, and on top of these a roof, to make the building complete, and they cry, "Stop it! Stop it"! And their hearts turn against their own children. They only fear the children may ruin what they themselves have built, and will not even try to find out whether their sons are not accomplishing what they themselves have begun.

And here sit also the young ones, sticking their noses up into the clouds and looking at their air castles. What do they care about solid foundations? Their slogan is, "Forward"! They have no time to wait. They want to accomplish everything in a jiffy and put on the roof, no matter whether there are walls or not. No wonder they some day become as skeptical as their fathers were. Some day that roof crashes down from the clouds and goes to pieces, and then they lose faith and hope and everything. But now they would not listen to you. They look upward and frown at the things that seem to entangle their feet. They think these are all obstacles put up by the fundamentalists to keep them back and down, and they cannot understand that this is the law of nature as proclaimed by the Word of God,—a law against which they carry on in vain.

Surely there must be a conversion of the fathers to their children, and of the children to their fathers. If not, the earth will be smitten with a curse.

I certainly am a fundamentalist, but not one of the over anxious brand. I know there cannot be a roof built without a foundation and walls built on it. But I, myself, was once a youth, and I was one of the type that justifies anxiety. As a child I believed all that my father believed, but later I grew wiser and wiser, until I knew more than my father, more than the Bible or anybody or anything. But after bumping my nose into walls at such places where there should be none according to my wisdom, I grew a little shy, and there came a time when I lost most of my wisdom and went to father for advice. And with the time going on, I learn day by day that there is wisdom in the Bible that exceeds my wisdom, and that it is advisable to learn from the Bible instead of criticizing it.

Sometimes it seemed at this Conference as of fathers and sons would jump at one another, the one crying, "Be there a foundation"! and the others, "Be there a roof"! — And they were both right. But the Conference decided to go on soberly and build skyward on the foundation until the walls are completed, and then to put the roof on.

"And let the favour of the Lord our God be upon us; and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it." Jacob H. Janzen.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

September 28, 1935

1. Resolved, that we express our sincere appreciation to the members of the First Mennonite Church of Allentown for the opportunity of holding this convention in their church, and we extend our heartfelt thanks to the ladies for their kind hospitality.

2. Whereas there is great need of a Field Secretary to visit our General Conference Churches in the interests of our Sunday School and Young People's Activities, now therefore, Be it resolved, that we endorse the plan to employ such a secretary in the near future, either for part time or in connection with some of our other conference boards, the details to be worked out by the respective committees of the interested boards. Further, that we pledge a definite amount of money to help carry on this work during the next three years.

3. Whereas we recognize that our Sunday Schools are an integral part of the program of the Christian Church and are training the Young People in the work of the Christian Church, now therefore: Be it resolved, that each school be urged to emphasize the importance of regular attendance at the church services and thus bring the Sunday School members into active relationship with the church.

4. Whereas Bluffton College is our college and to do its most effective work it needs an increased enrollment of students and a more generous financial support, now therefore: Be it resolved, that our Sunday Schools be urged to cooperate with the church organizations to hold an annual "Bluffton College Day" in each church of our conference, and to promote as much as possible the work of the college.

5. Whereas there is much confusion of thought concerning the social and economic disturbances of today, and whereas the materialistic program of Socialism and Communism has proven inadequate, now therefore: Be it resolved, that we reemphasize our firm belief that only the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, with its message of Regeneration is adequate to meet the needs of the human heart, and thus meet the needs of society at large, and that the world at large is in need of this realization, namely, that the moral and spiritual values are fundamental in correcting the existing evils of today.

6. Whereas it is easy enough to draw up Resolutions and also easy to forget them, now therefore: Be it resolved, that a copy of these Resolutions be forwarded to the Superintendent or Secretary of each school with the suggestion that they be discussed at workers' meetings and brought to the attention of the school periodically as occasions permit.

THE CHRISTIAN ATTITUDE ON PEACE

As Held By The Mennonites

Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is the accepted founder of the Christian Church. His coming into the world, life, death on the cross, resurrection, ascension, and promised return, make Him Head of the Church.

Jesus gave definite instruction to His reborn followers, which are recorded in the Holy Scriptures. He requires loyalty and obedience to His commands. His teachings, being the expression of the Son of God, stand above any man-made laws and instructions. The faithful follower readily accepts as verity the statement, "Ye must be born again." The Christian church also takes His statements concerning the Father, future life, and eternal salvation as authoritative. From this we feel that other commandments governing everyday life ought to be accepted in the same manner.

Human nature is so constituted that past practices are given preference. The church at all times sought to be true to the teachings of Christ on the plan of salvation, but because of a series of circumstances, the teachings of Christ with respect to war and peace were neglected and disregarded.

During the Reformation there was a rebirth of spiritual life and renewed effort was made to be true to Christ in every phase of life and the attitude of Christ, as opposing armed conflicts were brought to the fore, spread after a long lapse. True, a strict Scriptural adherence of these Christ-taught principles had been practiced by the church of the first century. When the Anabaptists, who became the Mennonites, made opposition to war and non-resistance as one of their main tenets of faith, a storm of opposition arose against the unpopular teaching. Opposition was from other religious groups who held to the past rather than to the strict teachings of Christ, and the State also heaped persecution on the Mennonites as being disloyal to their government. This principle has been held for more than four hundred years by Mennonites, and others who shared a similar interpretation of the teachings and principle of Christ.

Christ's Teaching Opposed To War

Matt. 5:5 and 7; Matt. 5:38-48, especially 38-44; Matt. 19:18; Matt. 22:39; Matt. 18:21, 22; Mark 11:25; Luke 6:27, 28, 29; John 18:36. Not wishing to burden you with many passages, these will suffice to show that Christ forbid hatred of enemies, revenge for wrongs sustained, and the maintenance of an unforgiving attitude. On the other hand Christ taught and practiced love, helpfulness, and forgiveness.

Knowing what war is, it is therefore clear that war is absolutely inconsistent with the teachings and Spirit of Christ.

Reactions in the World War

Until the World War in 1914-1918, the principle of conscientious objection to participation in war, was not a vital factor, since previous wars were fought largely by volunteers and such who had no particular religious scruples against it. But in the World War when men were mobilized by the millions by conscription, this principle came definitely to the fore.

What did Mennonites do who were conscripted? Dr. C. Henry Smith, Bluffton College, estimates that about 2,000 young Mennonites were in various departments of the war machine in America. Some took regular service, but they were only a small percent of the entire group. The remainder was equally divided, he says, among those who took non-combative service, and those who were conscientious objectors. It is a well-known fact that others outside the Mennonite church were conscientious objectors. The trials, tests, and hardships that these men experienced, is known. They were contending for a principle and as such their experience has borne fruit.

Present Day Results of This Opposition To War

1. It has started a new study of the actual status of war, with the present practice of using any means of slaughter for anyone whether combatant or not.

2. The results of wars have been studied and declared absolutely inadequate compensation for the terrific suffering and waste incurred.

3. Renewed pressure is being exerted that peaceful methods be used to settle international difficulties.

4. Formation of the "No More War" movement in England, as a result of the 15,000 conscientious objectors in that country.

5. Definite crystallization of convictions in religious groups in America, into a great movement to oppose all wars as un-Christian.

6. Individuals in increasing numbers are declaring that they cannot take up arms, being convinced that all wars are contrary to the teachings of Christ.

Projects To Be Carried Out

1. Help spread Jesus' teachings on war as a command to be kept.

2. Put on a Peace Program in your church by securing noted speakers, and invite men of the community to attend.

3. Plan and hold two or more meetings of the men in the church to frankly and openly discuss peace attitudes that we should develop.

4. Provide a Peace Library in your church.

5. Be prepared to furnish peace speakers for community meetings in your locality.

6. Seek to encourage young men to attend such educational institutions where military training is not required.

"WAR IS THE MOST HATED THING IN THE WORLD"

In a passionate appeal for world peace General Chang Chih-kiang, one of the guests of honor at a luncheon in New York City on October 16, declared war to be the most hated thing in the world. With impressive eloquence this distinguished Christian general pleaded for the extension of the Gospel of Christ as the one unifying factor binding nations together in peaceful relationships.

General Chang is a devoted student of the Bible and has from his own resources made large purchases of Scriptures for distribution to his troops. As a generous supporter of the Christian movement and a fervent Christian he has been one of those enthusiastic evangelists who holds a government position without in the least degree compromising his Christian position. He is making a tour of the United States in his official capacity as chairman of the National Calisthenics Association of China, but with a deep interest in the Christian church.

The luncheon at which General Chang spoke was given by the American Bible Society in honor of him and Dr. Cheng Ching-yi, both of whom are honorary life members of the Bible Society, the only two Chinese who have been so designated by the Society's Board of Managers.

Dr. Cheng in an address following that of General Chang declared that his father had been a devout Buddhist and would have nothing to do with Christian people until he received a copy of St. Mark. The reading of this gospel portion, particularly the crucifixion of Christ, so touched his heart that from that

Dr. Cheng paid a high tribute to the work of the Bible Societies in China in their ministry through the printed page, as a unifying factor among the many and various Christian Chinese bodies, and in the advancement of Chinese culture. Dr. Cheng, one of the foremost leaders of the Christian movement in China, and general secretary of the General Assembly of the Church of Christ in China, has been in this country attending the meeting of the Committee of the International Missionary Council.

PRAYER AND EDUCATION

(The outline of a sermon preached by President Rosenberger of Bluffton College to the First Mennonite Church of Bluffton on Sunday, September 15, the Day of Prayer for Schools and Churches.)

An incident recorded in Mark 9:14-29 relates an experience when the disciples were unable to accomplish the healing of an unfortunate individual. After Jesus healed the man the Disciples asked Him why they had been unable to do so. Jesus answered, "This kind can come out by nothing, save by prayer." This answer indicates the power of prayer and also alludes to a cause for which it was worth while to pray, namely the healing of a man. Today we wish to apply these two thoughts of the value of prayer and a worth while cause to Christian education.

To speak of prayer for education is to indicate that we believe in the power of prayer and in a prayer-answering God. Prayer has been placed by some on the level of self-inspiration. They say that we pray and thereby create within us a desire to bring about that for which we pray. Prayer indeed does this, but it does more.

There are spiritual forces at work in this universe with which when we bring ourselves into harmony, spiritual power is made available. This was the experience of Elisha when he saw the mountains full of horses and chariots in an hour of crisis, or of Jesus when he knew there were available twelve legions of angels. Just as we recognize and utilize the laws of nature and make great things possible, so we may observe the spiritual laws and accomplish great spiritual results. Prayer opens the door to spiritual power, and through it divine energy is released, and added strength is given. That this is true is the testimony of Christian people of all ages.

Prayer is the dynamic of great Christian efforts. Just as in prayer the church has gone forward to conquer for Christ in the mission field and in other fields of Christian service, so she must meet the challenge of present day education. All education is not the type of which the church can approve. Much of it is based on an atheistic and materialistic philosophy. However, the church cannot turn her back and say that she will have nothing to do with education. She must rather support CHRISTIAN education just as she has supported evangelism and the missionary enterprises and other tasks.

The Church must make educational needs much more a matter of prayer and support. Not that she is to support missions or evangelism any less, but education must have a larger place in her thinking and her prayers.

The development of character in young people from the cradle to the completion of a task and can be accomplished successfully only in the power of Christ, and in conformity with his teachings and principles, and the truth of life as we find it in the Bible.

The Church at prayer for education gives inspiration to all who have any degree of responsibility for the training of young people. This includes parents, school teachers, Sunday School teachers, and instructors in college. As the church prays, there will be divine instruction and impartation that should further the program of Christian education for the welfare of young people and the glory of God.

A LETTER OF THANKS

Dear Friends:

God is granting me the great privilege of going back to India to work for Him in His great vineyard. I wish to thank all my friends and relatives who have helped me to get ready. May God reward you for all your gifts and kindness and help to me. I wish to bid you all farewell with II Thess. 3:1. —Martha Burkhalter.

WHAT THE TOBACCO MONEY BOUGHT

There are thousands of young men between fifteen and twenty-one years of age who are damaging themselves irretrievably by tobacco. They are stunting themselves physically, mentally, and morally; and, besides, they are literally wasting what might in the end become a valuable fortune. If these boys and young men would take what they are spending, and what they will spend if they keep up the habit all through their life, and put it aside, it will buy a fine house, and it will buy them a fine farm to make them comfortable in the afternoon of life. For this reason, if for no other, young tobacco users should break the habit and save their money. Certainly they can get comfort of it if used in providing substantial things.

A merchant of New York gives this testimony: "In early life I smoked six cigars a day, at six and a half cents each; they averaged that. I thought to myself one day: 'I'll put aside all the money I am consuming in cigars, and all I would consume if I kept on in the habit, and I will see what it will come to by compound interest.'" And he gives this tremendous statistic: "Last July completed thirty-nine years since, by the grace of God, I was emancipated from the filthy habit, and the saving amounted to the enormous sum of $29,103.03 by compound interest. We lived in the city, but the children who had learned something of the enjoyment of country life from their annual visits to their grandparents, longed for a home among the green fields, I found a very pleasant place in the country for sale. The cigar money now came into requisition, and found that it amounted to a sufficient sum to purchase the place, and it is mine. Now, boys, take your choice—smoking without a home, or a home without smoking."

A SUCCESSFUL MINISTER

When Grenville Kleiser was instructor in public speaking at Yale Divinity School, Yale University, he was asked by a student what he thought were the qualifications for success in the ministry. The next day Mr. Kleiser handed to the student the following answer:

A clergyman should have:

The innocence of a lamb.
The wisdom of an owl.
The cheerfulness of a cricket.
The friendliness of a squirrel.
The complacency of a camel.
The adaptability of a chameleon.
The diligence of a beaver.
The fleetness of a deer.
The vision of an eagle.
The agility of a panther.
The patience of an ox.
The endurance of an elephant.
The tenacity of a bull-dog.
The courage of a lion.

WHERE THE FAILURE LIES

When told that Christianity had failed, Beecher said that it had never been tried . . . For a thousand years the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount have been preached. Because of ignorance and selfishness their teaching has not been fully accepted and adopted . . . Our religious and social systems have not failed. They are sound. The failure lies in human imperfection. We need to grow in social and religious grace.

Three young boys, Clarence Henry Landis, Walter Allen Landis, and Ervin Frank Miller, were admitted by baptism.

In the Deep Run church there was one admission, Francis Richert, by letter, from the Souderton church. While the three churches comprising this charge are composed largely of young people, Pastor Fretz served Lord's Supper to six members in their homes, averaging 81 years, four of whom averaged 86 years and 9 months. Thanksgiving services will be held at the Deep Run church on November 28, followed by the annual business meeting.

THE MEANING OF CHRISTMAS

"Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior which is Christ the Lord. And suddenly there was a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying: Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

PERSONAL QUESTIONS

"Am I really what I ought to be? Am I what, in the bottom of my heart, I honestly wish to be? Am I living a life at all like what I myself approve? My secret nature, the true complexion of my character, is hidden from all men, and only I know it. Is it such as I should be willing to show? Is my soul at all like what my kindest and most intimate friends believe? Is my heart at all such as I should wish the Searcher of Hearts to judge me by? Is every year adding to my devotion, to my unselfishness, to my conscientiousness, to my freedom from the hypocrisy of seeming so much better than I am? When I compare myself with last year, am I more ready to surrender myself to the call of duty? Am I more alive to the commands of conscience? Have I shaken off my besetting sins"? These are the questions we should put fairly and honestly to our hearts."

—Selected.

THE COST OF DODGING DUTY

I have read of a king who placed a heavy stone in the road and hid to see who would remove it. Men of various classes came and worked their way around it, some loudly blaming the king for not keeping the highways clear, but all dodging the duty of getting it out of the way. At last a poor peasant, on his way to town with his burden of vegetables for sale, came, and contemplating the stone, laid down his load, and rolled it into the gutter. Then, turning around he spied a purse which had lain right under the stone.. He opened it and found it full of gold pieces with a note from the king, saying it was for the one who should remove the stone.

Under every cross our King has hidden a blessing. We can turn back from a cross, or go around it, but we are eternal losers if we do. We cannot dodge the cross without dodging God's blessing, and we cannot refuse it without endangering our crown—He is watching.

THE SHINING CUP

Did you ever hear the story of the shining cup, A certain man was traveling through the hot, dusty valley along a road which led over the mountain. As he drew near to a spring beside the mountain road he saw a small girl standing there vigorously rubbing a tin cup. He asked her for a drink of water. "Certainly, sir," she answered, "as soon as I finish this cup." "What are you doing to the cup"? he asked. "Oh, I am just shining it," she replied. "Why are you doing that"? asked the man. "Does some one pay you to shine the cup"? "Oh, mister, of course not," exclaimed the girl. "You see, I live up the road about a mile and I come down here every now and then and shine up this cup, because the travelers seem to enjoy the water more when they have a clean cup to drink out of. There are so many things I can't do, but I can keep this cup shining." Then, having refreshed himself at the cool spring as he drank from the clean cup, the man went on his way and thought this world would be a happier world if more people worked on the principle of that little girl and found their cup and kept it shining.

Keeping Christ In Christmas

Luke 2:8-14; Ephesians 4:11-13

The wording of this topic should be changed from "Keeping Christ in Christmas" to "Putting Christ into Christmas." This might quite well be a fitting slogan and crusade for all of the four million Endeavorers to make Christmas truly Christian. It has become almost anything else but that.

In planning this C. E. service you might plan to carry on a discussion emphasizing the unchristian acts and attitudes at Christmas and the ways in which this glad day and season might be spent. Make use of the fine Christmas carols, sing them reverently, joyfully, and worshipfully. Read the wonderful Christmas story according to Luke's Gospel, it is so simple it needs no exposition. Have a season of vital meaningful prayer, remembering that God is a Spirit and they who worship Him must worship in spirit and in truth.

Some Prevailing Ways of Celebrating Christmas

In too many instances, even among Christians, the days preceding Christmas are busy with commercialized buying and selling, planning gifts for friends who will be likely to give you gifts, send cards (often without true Christmas sentiment) to those who will send us some. Social parties, dances and grand dinner parties are planned for a few select friends. Spirituous liquors are thought of as being very essential to this joyous season of the year. Santa Claus, the jolly old St. Nicholas, often is given a much larger place in our Sabbath School Christmas program than is being given to the Christ-Child. How we are robbing our children! Then on Christmas Day, we gouge ourselves with a big meal, necessitating mother to work many hours in preparing for it. Throughout the whole of Christmas it is becoming more and more pagan and selfish.

Ways In Which We May Make Christmas Christ-Like

There is inherent in the Christmas season a spirit of giving, for on this day God gave His best gift, so let us also give in that spirit, and to that same extent. We may give gifts to our closest friends, but giving because of the love we bear to them, not considering the gifts we will be sure to receive in return. In giving let us remember those friends who will be forgotten if you do not remember them. Plan a community Christmas celebration, telling boys and girls the true meaning of Christmas, give them gifts which will express your true friendship. Remember those of other races. Perhaps some families will need a basket of food, or perhaps some words of comfort and hope.

Christmas Day itself should be a quiet time when one spends much time meditating upon a loving Father God and His good gift, and our Christian relations to other men everywhere. This may well be a happy family day, when the whole family gathers not to feast, but to strengthen the bonds of Christian fellowship and love. Above all let us tell the true story of the Christ-child to our children, and make this day meaningful to them for all of life. Oh, Christmas Day should be such a happy day! Let us bring this glad note to all men. Yes, even to warring nations, for did not the angels sing, "On earth peace, good will toward men"?

Questions and Topics

1. What is the message of Eph. 4:11-13 to Christmas?
2. In what ways is our Christmas pagan?
3. Why should we emphasize Christ rather than Santa Claus in our programs for children?
4. What can Christmas do to bring world peace?
5. What is the true spirit of Christmas? How may we inculcate it?

Wise Men Worship

Matthew 2:1-11

Since this is the Sunday nearest to Christmas many churches and Christian Endeavors will plan for special services for this Sunday evening. However, if your Christian Endeavor is planning to have a service, one thing should be certain, namely it must be a worship service.

The Wise Men came to worship the Christ-child, so when we meet we can do no other. It might be desirable to decorate, but by all means keep it reverent and Christian. There will be no room for Santa Claus. Lights, stars, candles, and evergreen may help, also some fine Christian pictures. Much of the service may consist of worshipful singing—using the beautiful Christmas carols and other appropriate hymns of a joyful nature speaking forth faith and hope.

You may desire to have your pastor bring a sermon on "The Message of the Wise Men for Today." Or if you choose you might ask three or four of your young people bring talks on some phases of the topic.

Suggestive Topics

1. Which is your favorite Christmas hymn, and why?
2. In what ways have artists used the story of the Christ-child for their great work of art?
3. Tell about some of the great works of literature based on the Christmas story. Which is your favorite?
4. What do we know about the Wise Men?
5. What lessons may we learn from the Wise Men coming to worship the Christ child?

How Painters Interpret Jesus

Matt. 6:29-34

"They shall shew forth the praises of the Lord."

Plans for the Meeting

Have some pictures, either large or small prints of the better known pictures of Jesus. You may divide the group into several smaller groups and have each study a certain picture. Ideal for this would be Hoffman's "Head of Christ," Sa Vinci's "The Last Supper," Halman Hunt's "The Light of the World," Hoffman's "Christ in Gethsemane," Plockharst's "The Good Shepherd" and "Christ Blessing Little Children." Since it being near Christmas one of the pictures showing the "Wise Men" or the "Madonna and Child."

From the life of Jesus have come many parables, miracles, and teaching incidents that have been the inspiration for painters. In the miracles of healing and blessing little children, He has a kindly eye and gentle hearing. In the cleansing of the temple His indignation is apparent. In "The Last Supper" and "Christ in Gethsemane" sadness and earnestness are to be noted.

How shall we interpret pictures? Every picture had at least two or more messages. The meaning that comes to our minds when we first look at the picture and the meaning or meanings that we discover after we have studied it. First thing then, that we should do is write down what you first see or what seems to be the important part of the picture. Then study the picture and write down everything you see. Notice how the artist has arranged it so as to make you see the most important part first. What meanings did the artist wish to convey? Finally, what message do you get from the picture?

The story is told of the painter of the picture of Christ and the children that he painted the picture with all of the children of the white race. During the night the Christ appeared and seemed to paint over his picture, making them children of every race. In the morning the painter arose and changed his picture till we see it as it is today, with children of every race gathered about the Christ.

Questions

These to be asked in studying the pictures:

1. What was my first impression?
2. Why do artists paint such pictures?
3. What is the deeper meaning of the picture?
4. What particular truth is brought out?
5. Pictures arouse emotions. What emotion do you experience as you look at the picture?
6. Why is it that the pictures of Jesus alone have led many a person to find their Savior?
7. Can you look at or study one of Jesus' pictures without it leaving a lasting impression on your life?

Did They Let Him In?

A little girl stood with her father looking intently upon the marvelous painting of Arthur Hallom, "Christ Knocking at the Door." Finally, the little girl, with tears streaming down her bright face, asked her father, "Daddy, did they let Him in"? "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me." Have you made room for Jesus in your heart?

"There's a Stranger at the door
Let Him in!
He has been there oft before:
Let Him in!
Let Him in ere He is gone;
Let Him in, the Holy One,
Jesus Christ, the Father's Son:
Let Him in!

"Now admit the Heavenly Guest;
Let Him in!
He will make for you a feast:
Let Him in!
He will speak your sins forgiven,
And when earth ties all are riven,
He will take you home to heaven:
Let Him in!

How Jesus Reveals God

John 14:1-11

"He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father"

Pre-Prayer

Thank God for the revelation of Himself through Jesus and that we have the will power to let Jesus have His way in our lives.

If Christ had not come, many of our best conceptions of God would be lacking. 1. Jesus was the first to call God by the name of Father and to teach us to do so. This term gives us a picture of God as loving, tender, full of patience, ready to forgive. How could this lesson be better taught than in the parable of the Prodigal Son?

2. Jesus reveals God as just, but as understanding and sympathetic. His attitude toward sinful people was not to overlook their sin and to pass it by lightly, but to love the sinner.

3. Jesus reveals God as sharing the sorrows of those who are distressed. The hungry multitudes who followed the worker of miracles excited compassion in Him, and when He prayed to God there was an increase in the food so that all were satisfied.

4. Jesus reveals God as caring for even the little things that concern His people. "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye are asking Him."

5. Jesus reveals God as loving the world of men to the extent of giving His Son as the world's Savior. This is the highest point of Christmas,—that God so loved.

The following are among the ways in which Jesus revealed God to the world, ways in which He established His claim that He came from God, and that He Himself was God. In His power over nature (Matt. 8:26), in forgiving sins (John 8:11), and in raising the dead (Luke 8:54; John 11:43; Luke 7:14).

In all His mighty works, Jesus, the Son of God, who came from God, laid bare the very heart of God. In those lands where Jesus is unknown the idea of God is grotesque. In those lands where Jesus is known, there is no speculation as to the nature and character and purpose of God, for all these things are made known to us when we know the character and purpose of Jesus. He was indeed God manifest in the flesh; He was the express image of the Father.

Questions

1. What did Jesus say about God?
2. List characteristics of God that the following words of Jesus give us: John 4:24; Matt. 5:48; Matt. 6:18; Matt. 6:32; Matt. 7:9-11; Matt. 10:20; Matt. 19:26; John 1:3.
3. What events in the life of Christ show us what God is like?
4. The parable of the Prodigal Son—what does it tell us about God?
5. Read John 8:11. What does this show us about God?
6. Read John 4:4-42. What does this tell us about God?
8. Do you think God suffers?
9. Jesus suffered two ways—bodily pain (read trial and crucifixion) and for the betrayal of His friends and followers, and sinfulness of the people. Which was the greater suffering?
10. Read John 14:6. What did He mean?
11. Why do we call Jesus our Savior?

Topic.—My Favorite Christmas Hymn

Luke 2:8-14

As we think of Christmas days that have passed, there is perhaps nothing that we remember as we do the music. How we love it!

People who care little about hymns the rest of the year, love to join in singing these hymns telling of Jesus ond His birth. We hear them in churches, in schools, in stores, and on the street as well as in our homes. One of the big stores in this city hires a quartet to go through the store singing Christmas songs while people are shopping. One always finds a crowd standing to listen. If these hymns mean so much to those who do not know Christ, we who love Him can enjoy them even more.

Which is your favorite of these Christmas hymns? We are going to follow the Daily Readings in our study again today as they suggest six Christmas hymns with the scripture to which they refer.

Joy to the World. "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Luke 2:10.

"Joy to the world! the Lord is come!
Let earth receive her King;
Let every heart prepare Him room,
And heaven and nature sing"!

O Little Town of Bethlehem. Matt. 2:4-6.

"O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The Everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight"!

This song was written by a minister, Phillips Brooks, who had once visited Bethlehem.

It Came Upon the Midnight Clear. Luke 2:13, 14.

"It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth,
To touch their harps of gold;
'Peace on the earth, good will to men,
From heaven's all-gracious King';
The earth in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing."

The words of this song, too, were written by a minister. We love it both for its words and for the sweet music which reminds us of the angels as they sang on that wonderful night.

O Come, All Ye Faithful. Matt. 2:11.

"O come, all ye faithful, joyful and triumphant,
O come ye, O come ye to Bethlehem;
Come and behold Him, born the King of angels;
O come, let us adore Him,
Christ, the Lord!"

This is a call to each of us to worship Christ the Lord even as the Wise Men did. They left their homes and went on a long journey to worship Him and bring gifts. We may worship Him just where we are.

Silent Night. Luke 2:8, 9.

"Silent night! Holy night!
All is calm, all is bright.
Round yon virgin mother and child,
Holy Infant, so tender and mild,
Sleep in Heavenly Peace, sleep in Heavenly Peace"!

Don't you imagine you can see the shepherds out on the hillside where all is quiet? How surprised and happy they must have been when angels came to them with their message!

We Three Kings. Matt. 2:1-12.

"We three kings of Orient are,
Bearing gifts, we traverse afar,
Field and fountain, moor and mountain,
Following yonder star.

"O star of wonder, star of night,
Star with royal beauty bright,
Westward leading, still proceeding,
Guide us to Thy perfect Light"!

Again we see the Wise Men as they travel to see this Baby who had come to be a King.

Plans for the Meeting

Study these and other Christmas hymns not only for their beauty, but for the message they bring. You should plan for the singing of as many of them as possible. They may be sung by the entire group or as special numbers.

Topic.—God's Greatest Gift

Matt. 2:1-11

Just a month ago we were getting ready for Thanksgiving. We tried then to think of as many of God's gifts as we could. Today we think of only one, the greatest. I am sure you can all name that Gift. "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

God tells us in the verse why He gave, to whom He gave, who He gave, and the purpose of the Gift.

Sometimes we give because we feel we should. God gave because He loved. He saw people suffering because of sin and He knew that of themselves they could not be free. He could not turn away ond forget because He loved. When those we love need anything we long to help them. Sometimes we cannot, but God could and did.

He loved not only a few, but the whole world, so He sent this great Gift to all. To be sure, not all are saved, but that is not God's fault. We shall see why a little later.

Now, who He gave. Notice the words, "His only begotten Son." God did not have many sons and just send one He could spare, as we often do in giving. He gave His best, all that He had. I am sure it was only love that made Him do that.

What was the purpose of this gift? That people might be saved. "But," you say, "not all people are saved." This verse tells the reason. When someone hands you a gift, you must take it before it is really your own. Often when a young man and woman are married, the children of the neighborhood stand in front of the home and shout until the young man throws pennies to them. No child is foolish enough to stand there and wish for one of the pennies. He quickly takes one. Christ came for all, but He is not really ours until we believe in Him, accept Him as our Savior. Won't you accept Him as your Gift today, if you have not already done so?

In addition to salvation, we receive many other things when we accept Christ, God's greatest Gift. He brings joy. The angels spoke of that on the night when Jesus was born. Christ gives joy to the believer even when there are trials and disappointments.

The angels spoke of Peace and Christ gives that to all who trust Him. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Isa. 26:3.

He brings hope. There is nothing for an unsaved person to expect after death but awful punishment. The Christian has the hope of eternal life, a hope that will not be disappointed. He has hope for this life, too, for Christ has promised that He will always be with His children.

Plans for the Meeting

The Juniors' time has no doubt been crowded with practicing, school programs, gift buying, and the many other activities that keep every one so busy at this season. Try to put all of this aside today for a quiet time with the boys and girls. Help them to see what Christ's coming means to those who accept Him.

Questions

1. What was God's greatest gift?
2. Why was this Gift sent?
3. To whom was He sent?
4. Why are not all enjoying this Gift?
5. What are some blessings that Christ brings to those who accept Him?

THE HANDICAP OF YOUTH

Sir George Newman, the great British educational authority, tells the Royal Commission: "There were over a million boys and girls at school in Great Britain unable to take adequate advantage of facilities for elementary education because of the terrible handicap placed upon them by three outstanding factors —strong drink, venereal disease, and evil-mindedness. The first factor was often causative to the other two. There were 20,000 blind babies in Great Britain who, but for the factors of strong drink and venereal disease, would probably have had normal sight."

WAS IT YOU?

"Somebody did a golden deed;
Somebody proved a friend indeed;
Somebody sang a beautiful song;
Somebody smiled the whole day long;
Somebody thought ' 'Tis sweet to live';
Somebody said, 'I'm glad to give';
Somebody fought a valiant fight;
Somebody lived to shield the right;
Was that somebody you?

—Unknown.

A lecturer recently declared at the outset of his lecture that he "received his moral training at the knee of a devout mother and across the knee of a determined father." One wonders how many of the oncoming generation will be enabled to make such a statement.

Nehemiah Rebuilding the Wall of Jerusalem

Lesson Text.—Nehemiah 4:6-9; 15-21

Golden Text.—The people had a mind to work Nehemiah 4:6.

Last Sunday we were interested in the results of the work of Haggai and Zechariah. The temple by 516 B. C. was completed and emphasis was placed on worship in the temple and observance of the law as represented by Ezra. Palestine the next fifty years remained a province of Persia under the kings Darius, Xerxes, and Artaxerxes and was ruled by a satrap whose center of power was north of Palestine and left the rule of Palestine to the High Priest at Jerusalem. We know very little about these fifty years except what we glean from Malachi and chapters of Isaiah. The conditions in Jerusalem were bad; the priesthood was corrupt; the satraps oppressed them, and hostile neighbors raided their territory. There was oppression from without and corruption from within. Even some of the remnant now were losing their faith, and those that were faithful were condemned to poverty and persecution.

It is at such a time of despondency and despair that Nehemiah comes to the rescue. He was born in exile and became a cupbearer to the Persian King Artaxerxes. One day a small group of Jews came from Palestine and brought the news of the plight of the holy city and the great and urgent need for help. Nehemiah felt so bad that when he appeared before the king, the king noticed that he was weeping. When the king heard of his sorrow and the conditions of his people in Palestine, he gave Nehemiah a leave of absence and even gave him authority to get material in the king's forest to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. The king even gave him a bodyguard to escort him those eight hundred miles. He arrived in Jerusalem in 445 B. C. He examined the conditions. He found the high priestly class suspicious of him, and the wealthy did not care to have their crooked business revealed. The enemy surrounded Jerusalem. The Samaritans on the north; Ammonites on the east; Arabians on the south; and Philistines on the west. Connect all this with the poverty and lack of leadership among the people, and we face Nehemiah's problem.

To some such situations are cause of fear, despair, and pessimism, but not to Nehemiah. He went to work. First he made a survey of the situation. He went out by night and walked around the broken down walls of Jerusalem. Then he set the people to work. Nehemiah had enthusiasm and courage, but he also had efficiency and executive ability. His enemies, especially the Samaritans, opposed his building project. But he ordered a defense of the city by some of the people while the others did the work. The walls were soon rebuilt and the city of Jerusalem reinhabited. This was however, only the external part of his work. He also brought about great reforms. He righted some of the abuses economically of the poor by the rich. He also cleansed the temple and restored worship to the people. He commanded the Sabbath to be kept and forbid the intermarrying of the Jews with foreigners. Nehemiah is a good illustration of a man of courage, initiative, and the ability to get things done. He was a devout, God-fearing man. He knew what God's will was for his life. He then went forth with that conviction to carry out the purpose of God. He seemed to work with the principle that what ought to be done can be done. This Sunday School lesson should bring to many of our church workers who are getting weak kneed because of the problems we are facing, courage, hope, power, and optimism.

What was the condition of the Jews when Nehemiah came to Jerusalem?

Who was Nehemiah?

What preparation did he have for his work?

What was the secret of his success?

Are conditions any more hopeless today than they were in Nehemiah's day?

Ezra Teaching the Law of God

Lesson Text.—Ezra 7:10; Nehemiah 8:1-3, 5, 6, 8-12

Golden Text.—Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee. Psalm 119:11.

While Nehemiah was bringing about external political and economic reforms in Jerusalem and Palestine, Ezra, the scribe, was bringing about religious reforms. With a religious zeal and the purpose of making Jerusalem once more the religious center for the Jews, Ezra brought a band of followers to Palestine and infused new life into the discouraged community. When he came from Babylon he brought with him the Law which had been compiled during the captivity. This he read to his people and interpreted the word to them. The study of the Word of God had very definite results. It struck at the evils of the times. It prohibited heathen marriages with Jews, emphasized Sabbath observance, the support of the temple, and ceremonial cleanness. The purpose of it all was to make the Jews a separate people and to attempt to prevent the disaster to come upon them that had come before. The outstanding truth of this lesson is the necessity of the teaching and study of the Bible. History verifies the statement that every religious revival of any importance and of permanent value were revivals of a teaching and study of the Word of God. Our hope is that the present emphasis placed on the Bible throughout our churches and nation may be the beginning of a real and permanent revival.

Who was Ezra?

What is the relative importance of the work of Ezra as compared with Nehemiah?

What place does the Bible hold in our nation today?

What place does the Bible hold in our churches?

What place does the Bible hold in our homes?

PREACHING WITHOUT CEASING

A little girl became deeply interested in the preaching of some evangelists. She said to her mother who was with her, "What do they do all the rest of the time when they are not preaching"? The mother smiled, as she replied, "I really do not know, but you may be sure that they are doing good, for they are consecrated Christians."

The mother might have truly said that these godly men were preaching all the time, for some of the best preaching is done outside as well as in the pulpit. A true Christian preaches as he performs his daily duties and tasks, no matter how humble and insignificant they may seem. Sermons can be preached by acts as well as words. Francis of Assisi one day stepped down into the cloisters of the monastery, and said to a young monk: "Brother, let us go down into the town today and preach." Down they went, conversing as they traveled. Along the principal streets, around the low alleys, to the outskirts of the town, and to the village beyond, coming back at length to the monastery gate. The young monk could not refrain from asking, "Father, when shall we begin to preach"?

"My child," said the venerable father, "we have been preaching; we were preaching while we were walking. We have been seen—looked at; our behavior has been remarked; and so we have delivered a sermon." Then the saintly man added, "Ah! my son, it is of no use that we walk anywhere to preach, unless we preach as we walk."

In the Acts of the Apostles we read how "Daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ."

If we are saved it is clearly our duty to win souls for our Master, and we cannot do this unless we preach Jesus Christ by our daily life and conversation. A truly consecrated Christian unconsciously preaches each moment of his life. —E. D. H.

MOUNTING EVIDENCE OF REPEAL'S FAILURE

Here is evidence, less gruesome, to be sure, than mangled bodies of men, women, and children strewn on the highways of America, the victims of drunken auto drivers, but no less convincing of the futility of the method of promoting sobriety by making beverage alcohol easily accessible to all.

It is a news item from California quoting John Owen, manager of the "Samaritan Treatment for Alcoholism," Los Angeles. Mr. Owen said: "The increase in patients has made it necessary for us to expand our original quarters and move into larger quarters twice in the last year. Our institution is treating approximately 300 per cent more victims of the alcohol habit today than before repeal, and, in addition, there are perhaps five times as many persons coming to the institution for advice."

JOTTINGS

U. S. Stauffer of Quakertown, Pa., one of the pioneer printers of our denomination, is recovering from a rather severe illness. He reports that he celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday by doing some work at his old printing trade.

The Bethel College Department of Mennonite History, under the supervision of Dr. A. A. Warkentin, is planning to compile a "Who Is Who Among the Mennonites." The plan that is used to construct this book is to let 250 well-known members of the various Mennonite denominations send in the names of persons whom they consider worthy of commemoration in the future. It is anticipated that each of the 250 people will know at least one hundred names of persons, either living or dead, here in America, the memory of whom should be preserved. Another development in this department is the gathering and classification for a Mennonite archive. A large number of books, booklets, pictures, etc., have been collected. The college museum is also gathering and arranging material to show the cultural development of the Mennonites.

Friends of our Foreign Missions are watching with a great deal of interest Japan's attempts to bite off another slice of China. In this slice are the five northern provinces of China, including the province of Hopei, in which the mission field of the General Conference is located. The military element in Japan would like to seize these provinces and create an independent nation under the domination of Japan similar to Manchukuo. There are many in Japan who object to this procedure because of the additional tax burdens that will result if Japan undertakes to govern an additional 95,000,000 people. With Europe concentrating on the war between Italy and Ethiopia. Japan has almost a free hand. Just how conquest of North China by Japan would affect our missions there will be hard to predict. It would be interesting to know how our missionaries feel about the prospect of working in Japanese controlled territory.

The Christian Endeavor Societies of the West Swamp, Flatland, and Bethany congregations at Quakertown, Pa., held an interesting joint program at the Bethany church on Sunday, November 10. All three churches are served by Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander.

Recently the Mennonite Book Concern received an order from Rev. Pierre Sommer, editor of CRIST SEUL, the little monthly published by the Mennonites of France. The October issue contained a four-page supplement in German for the German speaking Mennonites who became citizens of France when Alsace and Lorraine were taken from Germany at the end of the World War. There are about 2000 Mennonites in France.

The October issue of DER MISSIONSFREUND, published by Pastor Fetler of Riga, Latvia, carries a short excerpt from a letter written by Missionary J. Dick of India. About two or three years ago Mr. Dick with his wife and daughter escaped from Russia to India, where he was for a while cared for by the various Mennonite missions. Later he and his family moved to South India where he has been working for the Mennonite Brethren Mission because they were short on workers. In his letter he reports that he has in recent months visited Ootacamund, Madras, Bangalore, and other places where there are groups of Russians (not Mennonites) who, like himself, find it hard to leave the country. Among other things he has tried to win them for Christ by distributing Christian literature in Russian, supplied by Pastor Fetler's mission.

Since this is the 400th anniversary of the printing of the first English Bible, many individuals, Sunday Schools, and churches are buying Bibles to give as gifts and rewards at Christmas. Bibles are cheaper and better than they have ever been for the prices publishers are asking for them now. The Mennonite Book Concern can supply Bibles ranging in price from 39c to $25.00 and New Testaments ranging in price from 10c to $5.00. Write for circulars today.

The Board of Education of the General Conference has appointed Dr. A. A. Warkentin of Bethel College to edit the new adult English Lesson quarterly, which is to be published by the Board of Education beginning with January 1, 1937. The Board also appointed a committee of four, consisting of Dr. S. K. Mosiman, Lester Hostetler, P. R. Schroeder, and A. E. Kreider to assist Dr. Warkentin. The plan is to print the first issue for 1937 in May 1936, so that there will be plenty of time to send out sample copies to all ministers and superintendents of Sunday Schools, thus allowing those in charge of ordering the supplies to place their orders for 1937 early enough to give the publishers some idea of the number of quarterlies that will be purchased by the Sunday Schools.

Rev. and Mrs. S. J. Goering and family of China are spending their furlough in Colorado in order to give Missionary Goering a chance to recover his health. Their present address is 1818 Cheyenne Boulevard, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Rev. E. J. Neuenschwander of McPherson, Kansas, has accepted a call to serve the Bethany Mennonite Church near Kingman, Kansas.

The Men's Chorus of the First Mennonite Church of Berne, Indiana, gave a concert at the Trinity Methodist Church at Elkhart, Indiana, on November 17.

The Twelfth Quadrennial Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions will be held at Indianapolis, December 28, 1935, to January 1, 1936. Some of the world's outstanding missionaries and religious leaders such as the Bishop of York, Kagawa, Dr. Robert E. Speer, and many others of equal note are listed as speakers and leaders at this great student and missionary convention.

The MENNONITISCHE RUNDSCHAU of Winnipeg, Canada, has been publishing an interesting series of articles by Professor B. H. Harder of Karlsruhe, Germany. In one of these articles he gives the reassuring news that the Mennonites have complete religious freedom in Germany and that no attempt has ever been made to interfere with their worship. He warns Mennonites not to be misled by newspaper propaganda in foreign countries in regard to Hitler. He states that Hitler has in fact done the church and the nation a great service in checking the spread of Communism and Atheism. He reports further that one reason for the friendly relations existing between the Mennonite churches of Germany and the Hitler government is the fact that soon after Hitler's seizure of power in 1933, the leading Mennonites sent him a telegram expressing loyalty to his government. Professor Harder's entire series of articles are so interesting and enlightening in regard to religious conditions in Germany that they ought to be translated into English for the benefit of the many Mennonites in America who cannot read German.

DEATHS

Helmut Paul Frey was born April 9, 1911, on a farm 3½ miles southeast of Goessel, Kansas, and was called to his eternal home October 14, 1935, at 10:50 P. M., in the home of his parents, 1110 N. Main, Newton, Kansas, at the age of 24 years, 6 months, and 5 days. He became a member of the Bethel College Mennonite church May 16, 1926.

He was better known as Dave Frey, and was a quiet, dignified, industrious young man, and was loved and respected by all who knew him. In April, 1934, during the special meetings conducted by Rev. R. B. Criteser at the Foursquare Church, he came to the altar and confessed Christ. During his recent illness he has called for prayer many times and has been concerned about his spiritual needs.

Dave was educated in the schools of Goessel and Arizona, from which latter schools he was graduated.

He leaves to mourn his death, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Frey, four brothers: Walter, Harold, Ewald, Kenneth; three sisters: Eleanor, Viola, Dorothy; a grandmother, Mrs. David Unruh; a sister-in-law, Mrs. Harold Frey; and a niece, Beverly Frey.

Beidler.—In Perkasie, Pennsylvania, on October 10, 1935, Jacob K. Beidler, aged 90 years and 15 days. Services and interment on the 15th at Blooming Glen, conducted by A. M. Fretz, Wilson Moyer, and Melvin Bishop.

Myers.—In Quakertown, Pennsylvania, on October 5, 1935, Mary Alice, wife of Abraham S. Myers, aged 80 years. Services and interment at Deep Run on the 9th. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander officiated, assisted by A. M. Fretz.

Unruh.—Darlene Ruth Unruh, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Unruh, was born at Halstead, Kansas, October 2, and passed away October 8, 1935, at the age of only six days. She leaves to mourn her early departure her parents, one brother, and four sisters. Rev. H. T. Unruh conducted the services at the home and she was laid to rest in the Tabor cemetery.

Pjesky.—Ruth Marie Pjesky was born at Halstead, Kansas, on December 20, 1933, and passed away at the Halstead Hospital on October 9, 1935, following a second operation for cleft palate. About 10 months ago the first operation was successfully performed, but the second operation resulted in death. She leaves her parents and two sisters to mourn her early departure. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. T. Unruh, at the Mennonite church on October 11. Interment was made in the Halstead cemetery.

Schimnowski.—Martin Schimnowski was born in Palchau, Germany, on August 13, 1881. He came to Halstead with his parents in 1882. On October 19, 1910, he was united in marriage to Elizabeth Schultz. To this union one daughter was born. In 1912 he united with the Halstead Mennonite church, of which he remained a member until his death. He enjoyed good health until several weeks prior to his death when he became ill and his condition necessitated an operation. All that human hands could do, was done for him. He passed away on September 27, 1935, aged 54 years, 1 month, and 14 days. Rev. H. T. Unruh had charge of the funeral service held at the Halstead Mennonite church. He leaves his wife and one daughter to mourn his departure.

ATTENTION, SUBSCRIBERS!

The Publication Boards of the General Conference and of the Central Conference have decided to separate THE MENNONITE and THE CHRISTIAN EVANGEL and again publish them as separate periodicals beginning January 1, 1936.

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGEL

The Publication Board of the Central Conference has appointed Rev. Wm. B. Weaver of Danvers, Ill., to act as editor and business manager of THE CHRISTIAN EVANGEL. It is to appear monthly, and except for the fact that it will have 20 instead of 24 pages, it will be similar in size and appearance to the periodical which was published until January 1, 1934.

Notice to former CHRISTIAN EVANGEL subscribers. All Central Conference subscribers who were subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN EVANGEL at the time it was combined with THE MENNONITE will be dropped from the mailing list of THE MENNONITE on January 1, 1936, unless they write before that date and tell us that they wish to remain subscribers to THE MENNONITE.

Within a few days a letter of explanation will be sent to all former CHRISTIAN EVANGEL subscribers by Rev. Weaver, explaining the separation and requesting that subscriptions be renewed. All former subscribers whose names are now on the mailing list of the joint periodical, and who have paid in advance, will be given credit on the mailing list of THE CHRISTIAN EVANGEL at the rate of $1.00 per year at the time their names are transferred to Rev. Weaver.

THE MENNONITE

The Publication Board of the General Conference, in accordance with the resolution passed at the General Conference held at Upland, California, has decided to again publish THE MENNONITE as a 16-page weekly (50 issues per year). To do this without raising the subscription price above the present rate of $1.50 per year, or going into debt, we must have at least 2000 paid subscribers.

N. B.—We have no special rate to offer new subscribers (except during special subscription campaigns) because at the very lowest price for printing and editing we cannot hope to publish a weekly paper at a cost of less than $1.50 to $1.75 per copy per year unless we can secure almost twice as many paid subscribers as we have had in recent years. But to encourage new subscribers we are making the following special offer in addition to the regular premium:—

FREE ATLAS OF THE WORLD

To every old and new subscriber sending in one new subscription at $1.50 plus paying his own subscription until January 1, 1937, we will send a FREE copy of the beautiful, new 1935 edition of the Quick-Reference Atlas of the World, size 10x13¼ inches, containing 18 pages of up-to-date maps of the nations of the world in colors. This offer is open until our supply of Atlases is exhausted. And anybody sending in two new subscriptions plus paying for his own subscription until January 1, 1937, will receive a FREE copy of the 1935 edition of the famous Geographic World Atlas containing 48 pages of maps and a complete index. We have only a few of these on hand, so get busy and send your subscription in now. Give THE MENNONITE to several of your friends as a Christmas present. Be sure to mention this special offer if you want the atlases. — Address all correspondence to,

EDITORIAL

THE CHANGE

Beginning with the new year, The Mennonite will again appear as a separate weekly under the sponsorship of the Board of Publication of the General Conference. For two years The Mennonite and Christian Evangel have functioned as a bi-weekly, and we are happy to note that during the depression, when religious papers literally by the hundreds were compelled to cease functioning, the patrons served by both of our papers were particularly patient and sympathetic. Not only did the merger bring together our two papers, but it demonstrated that the General Conference and the Central Conference have much in common and that it is not impossible for them to work together, not only in publications, but in many other things.

We greatly appreciate the willingness of the editor of the Christian Evangel, Rev. Weaver, to co-operate to the extent of making the General Conference readers more familiar with the work of the Central Conference, and we hope the readers of the Central Conference have become better informed concerning matters that relate to the General Conference.

All of us realized two years ago that the merging of The Mennonite and the Christian Evangel was but a temporary arrangement designed to meet the situation brought on by the depression. Now that the emergency is past and we can look into the future with clear eyes there is not so much need of a joint publication. This, however, by no means is an indication that the two conferences have come to a parting of the way. It does mean that we know one another better and that the time may come, we hope, when the two bodies shall as one unite in broader efforts. —G.

The time has come to give serious consideration to the problem of establishing a seminary that will give young men, anxious to enter the ministry, the type of training that will fit them to serve the congregations of our own Mennonite denominations.

From time to time the proposition has been made to reestablish Witmarsum Seminary on the campus of some stronger seminary and enter into some sort of agreement in regard to the cost of operation, exchange of instructors, etc. The most recent of these attempts which aimed to establish the seminary on the campus of the Bethany Seminary in Chicago, has been definitely rejected by the Middle District Conference at a special meeting which was called to settle this very question. One should read carefully the report of this meeting found in this issue.

This special meeting of the Middle District Conference did more than merely reject the proposition to establish a seminary on the Bethany campus. It crystalized sentiment in regard to the type of seminary the congregations of the Middle District are willing to support. Only two or three of the congregations were not represented and the voting on the resolution was by ballot. In view of these facts it is well to note that 143 out of 146 ballots were in favor of the resolution which formulates the basis upon which the Middle District Conference is willing to support a seminary and the basis on which it elected two members to the Seminary Board.

Now it is up to the rest of the District Conferences to express themselves in regard to the seminary. It is time to quit drifting along, allowing other seminaries and Bible schools to educate our young ministers. In the process we lose a goodly percentage of our finest and most talented young men. Our denomination needs them badly if it is to grow spiritually. We cannot hope to ever train all those of our young people who want religious education and training, but if even half of those who are now attending Bible schools and seminaries could be brought together at a Bible school and seminary of our own they would form a large enough student body to warrant the outlay of money involved in establishing and supporting such a "Biblical" Mennonite Seminary.

Perhaps the difficult years that we have just passed through have helped to clarify our thinking in regard to the type of leadership our denomination demands. As a denomination we have been very tolerant of all kinds of leadership. But it is becoming increasingly apparent that as a whole our people want a definitely conservative leadership that is committed to a sound orthodox interpretation of the Bible and its message. Those leaders who preach socialism rather than salvation, and emphasize man-made peace rather than our own Mennonite doctrine of non-resistance have been rejected and will be rejected because the bulk of our Mennonite people find no great spiritual values in the message of such a ministry. Many of our great seminaries are unfit to educate our ministry because they have more and more emphasized socialism, the reform and saving of society rather than the regeneration of the individual and the saving of his precious soul. The other extreme which results in a frantic, over-emotional type of religion is equally objectionable. There can be little unity and progress while we allow our young ministers to be trained by the schools of either extreme. This may sound intolerant, but let us not forget that the leadership of tomorrow is being trained today. What we need most is a Mennonite Seminary that will give our young men and women of today a sound, sane interpretation of the Bible and its message that will en able them to steer a firm course for themselve and those whom they serve during the days o still greater restlessness that may be ahead.

A BIBLICAL MENNONITE SEMINARY

C. H. Suckau, Berne, Indiana

"Praise the Lord"! was my exclamation o joy and thanksgiving, when we, the delegate from Berne, Indiana, started for home fron the special session of the Middle District Con ference, held at the Ebenezer church near Blufl ton, Ohio, Tuesday, December 3, 1935. On delegate, referring to the action taken by th conference that day, said that such a thin would not have been possible two years ago On that day the Middle District Conference ha taken an open, and bold, and nearly unanimou stand against modernism in connection wit the opening of the seminary. The vote take was one hundred and forty-three to three. W have seen afresh that "with God all things ar possible."

A special session of the Middle District Con ference was called as an outcome of a Minister Retreat, held recently in Chicago.

Our president, Brother Keiser, opened th meeting with the reading of Col. 1:1-15, an then gave opportunity for testimonies. We ex perienced a blessed time of spiritual fellowshi Cooperation in love was again and agai stressed. One testimony centered around Titu 2:1-2, "But speak thou the things which b come sound doctrine: that the aged men b sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in lov in patience." Emphasis was placed on the onl ground of cooperation, namely SOUND DOC TRINE. But soundness in doctrine is insuffi cient if we neglect soundness in FAITH, sound ness in LOVE, and soundness in PATIENCE.

On the ground of sound doctrine, togethe with soundness in faith, and love, and patienc we entered upon the business of the conferenc

The purpose of our meeting was, to elect tw representatives on the Seminary Board fron the Middle District Conference. Some discu sion preceded the election. The Berne del gates had been instructed at a business meetin of the congregation that the First Mennonit Church of Berne, Indiana, does not favor affil ation with Bethany Seminary of Chicago. The church took this action after having been informed of the liberal tendencies on the part of some of the instructors at that school.

The position of the Berne church was stated, and it was made known that if affiliation with Bethany Seminary was contemplated, the Berne delegates could not participate in the election. The only ground on which they could cooperate in the matter of a Seminary was that it be clearly understood that the Seminary be a fundamentally sound institution.

Numerous delegates from other churches strongly supported the decision of the Berne church not to be affiliated with Bethany Seminary, and it was made clear that only a fundamentally sound Seminary would receive their support.

Hereupon a number of delegates, who were interested in an affiliate relation with Bethany Seminary, declared that they also favored this very same position.

When no delegate voiced himself in favor of affiliation with Bethany Seminary, but all who spoke approved of the opening of a seminary on the basis of sound doctrine, the following resolution was proposed and almost unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that we, as delegates of the Middle District Conference, declare our unequivocal belief in the fundamental Articles of Faith as recently published by authority of the General Conference, and hereby declare that this be made the condition of electing members to the Seminary Board, and that the Seminary be organized on these fundamental principles of faith both by charter and constitution."

This resolution was adopted by 143 out of 146 ballot votes cast.

This means that the Middle District Conference went on record that it will not affiliate with Bethany, nor will it support any other than a fundamentally sound Seminary.

This, then, is the condition upon which the two representatives on the Seminary Board from the Middle District Conference were chosen. The two brethren chosen are Rev. P. E. Whitmer and Rev. J. E. Amstutz.

The above resolution tremendously strengthens the hands of our representatives on the Seminary Board. They can now fearlessly take a stand for "the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." By standing true to this faith we, as Mennonites, can give the most effective testimony to the Church of Christ at large, and to the world in these days of apostasy. We must, however, further strengthen our representatives by standing loyally back of them in the carrying out of the demands of the resolution adopted by the Middle District Conference.

Fittingly "Blest be the tie that binds" was sung as the closing hymn of our most blessed conference.

"Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen."

THE BIBLE AND THE HOME

(A chapel address by Professor Benny Bargen of Bethel College)

Our chapel this morning is the last of the series commemorating the four hundredth anniversary of the first printing of the English Bible. In these different chapels we have considered the Bible from different points of view, with respect to the influence it has had in the shaping of our civilization, and the thinking of men in our times and in times past.

This morning we want to think especially of the Bible in its relationship to the home. There is hardly a person here this morning who has not grown up in a home in which the Bible was read each day, not only once but several times. Many of you know a father or mother to whom the Bible was a direction-finder every single day of their lives. You can see them now, as I speak, getting up on cold winter mornings, lighting the kerosene lamp perhaps, and stirring the fire in the kitchen. You can see mother fixing the coffee, unwrapping the tea towels from around the generous home-baked loaves of bread, and setting the simple rural breakfast. And perhaps, if you are honest, you can see yourself slipping around the table, on a long bench near the windows, while mother sets the table, and father, sitting down, adjusting his glasses and reaching for the family Bible, and finding the place for the reading of the morning devotions.

And then, in the words of Burns, ". . . . . the priestlike father reads the sacred page . . . ," and having read, he leads in prayer. It is a simple prayer, expressing gratitude, — genuine gratitude, — for simple, everyday things. It is a real prayer, — and as he prays you feel the presence of God in your midst. He commits himself and his family to an all-knowing Mind and Father, who he knows will direct this family of his in the way that is right, in the way eternal. He acknowledges before God the mistakes of the past and avails himself of an abundant forgiveness. He claims the wisdom which he feels God so richly bestows upon those who claim it. Amen.

Thus began full many a day, for many of you, and in a similar way it ended. When the chores were done, and the sun had now long set, and the family had gathered together, and the old clock on the wall had begun to creep toward ten o'clock,—then the discussion and conversation somehow came to a lull, and once more father opened the Bible, and after reading of the Word, you knelt in prayer around the kitchen table, and then retired for the night.

And the memory, — conscious or unconscious — of such a home has become a part of you. It has given direction to your thinking, and constantly it tinctures your judgments and evaluations of all things as they arise in your life.

As you grow a little older it will become increasingly clear that your father and your mother, committed so completely to the reading of the Bible in the home, were drawing upon sources of inspiration of more than ordinary depth. This commitment grew out of a sense of need and a sense of supply. They found in the Bible the story, the reactions, the soul's communion with men and women of other days, who, like they, had gone through "the valleys and through the shadows." They read the simple, but inexpressibly beautiful testimony of these men and women that beyond the chaos made by men, rules the orderly mind of God. Beyond the unknown stands a Mind ready to make itself known. Beyond the shadowy present is a permanence not seen by the human eye, but sometimes to be claimed and experienced with an experience that is perfectly true and valid. They saw in the characters moving before them through the printed pages of the inspired Book, men just like themselves, finding themselves in an unideal world, but rising above the unideal. And, without knowing just how or why, they became like them. They live with the noble, and became noble. They live with the good, they thought the good, the meditated upon the good, they envisioned th good; from their first waking moments in th morning, and with the fading out of consciou thought, their thoughts were still good. An out of good thoughts there flowered good live

I submit to you this morning that they n only set a good example for you and me. submit to you that the life of your father an mother, built around the Bible, day after da year after year, is the greatest blessing, th greatest heritage you will ever have. I submi that it is precious now, but it will become thousand times more precious to you as th years go by.

All of us come from homes, and all of us, i we have not already started a new home of ou own, will eventually start one. What kind o a home will that be? Will the home you go t like the home you came from, be a blessing, heritage, a blessed memory to all who pas through it? The answer to that question is on of the large questions facing each of us.

In closing I want to quote from an essay o the Bible by Louise North:

"How constantly the Bible places the hom in the center of the picture of the ministry o Jesus! He took the little children into hi arms; He was a loved guest in the household a Bethany, mindful of its cumbering cares an turning its great sorrow into joy; He solve the difficulty of an embarrassed host at Cana He "sat at meat" with one who made a feas in His honor; His parables illuminated th scenes of homely life with divine truth; in th house of the ruler He gave back the littl daughter to her parents from the gates o death; in His dying hour He provided a hom for His sorrowing mother; above all He taugh men to find in God their Father,—'my Fathe and your Father,' He said; and of those wh shall do the Father's will, He said, 'the same i my brother and sister and mother.' He it i 'of whom the whole family in heaven an earth is named.' "

"The two devastating experiences of morta life are sin and suffering, and to each the Bibl brings its restoring and healing influence. How often, when sin has broken up a home, scattere the children, and brought the father, down an out, to some rescue hall, the power of the Bibl message 'lifts up the fallen,' reunites the family, and builds again the home, to be henceforth a place of joy and peace. When sorrow invades the life, what a bulwark are the 'exceeding great and precious promises'! In a Bible-loving home for many years bereavement followed bereavement; anxieties multiplied about health, finance, the future; but always the glowing words from the twelfth chapter of Isaiah, the prophet of comfort, framed upon the wall of the mother's room,—'I will trust and not be afraid,' gave steadiness, courage, hope, and even joy. To the sons and daughters who went out into the world from that home the Word of God has been a 'Shield and Buckler.' "

THE WISE MEN'S GIFTS

The Gist of a series of three sermons given by Evangelist Chang Ching in the church at Tamingfu, China, in the year 1933, preparatory for the Christmas holidays

(Translated by Miss Aganetha Fast)

"The First Gift of the Wise Men—Gold" (Matthew 2:1-12)

When the Wise Men of the East saw the star, they began to investigate and the result of their researches was, that a new king was born in the West. They therefore prepared gifts, and planned to find Him to worship Him.

The Wise Men had prepared three gifts for the new born king. Today I will talk on the first gift, which was "gold."

1. Gold has the quality of firmness, constancy, and durability. Gold, silver, copper, iron and lead, and some others are all considered metals, but gold has the greatest capacity for constancy and durability. The wise men had chosen gold as their gift because it really represented their inner purpose, which was strong and determined. It was unlike the grass on the roofs of the houses, which blows according to the direction of the wind. Since they offered their strong and determined will or purpose of finding Jesus, they held on to it in spite of all dangers, difficulties, and discomforts they might meet on the way.

Fellow Christians, Christmas is almost here, and we, too, should offer gifts to Christ, and that is our strong purpose to follow Him, offer a strong faith in Him. To Him this gift will be valued higher than that that the Wise Men brought. Why don't we do it right now?

2. Gold does not fear the fire of refining. The common saying is that "real gold is not afraid of the fire of refining," and that is very true indeed, also in this respect. The more it is refined, the purer gold it becomes. The Wise Men had selected gold to represent their purpose, which is not afraid of purification through trial, temptation, and persecution, and they offered this to the new born King.

We can well imagine that the relatives and friends of the Wise Men had tried to stop them from starting out. They might have referred them to their old age, which could not stand the strain; the long distance; of being without knowledge of their destination; and the dangers on the way, etc. But nothing would move them from their purpose to find the newborn King, and so they held on to their original plan. Furthermore, these Wise Men were scholars. They had not experiences in traveling long distances. The communications of that time were undoubtedly poor, lacking modern conveniences. It naturally took them months before they reached Bethlehem. Since they were scholars and therefore not used to hard travel, we can well imagine that they suffered from bad weather and from difficulties. Although the Bible does not say that they had any sickness on the way, they surely must have met difficulties and problems on their way to Bethlehem. But all these things did not keep them back, because their mind was set "not to be afraid of difficulties to find the new King." And they finally succeeded in finding Him.

At this Christmas season, Fellow Christians, we, too, should offer our gift of gold to Christ, that is the endurance to overcome the difficulties we face in our homes and with ourselves in finding the King. This will be a more valuable gift to Him than the gold. Job says, "For He knoweth the way that I take,, when He hath tried me I shall come forth as gold." Job 23: 10.

3. Gold has the quality of expansibility. Both physics and common sense tell us that the expansibility of gold is greater than any other metal. In pounding the different metals, we find that a piece of gold will expand until it is much thinner and much larger in area than the other metals, because it has a greater expansibility. The Wise Men had offered gold as their gift because it characterized their willingness of expansibility offered to the new born King. The Wise Men finally got to see the new born King and worshiped Him. And because they had offered their willingness of expansibility to the Lord, they therefore spread the news of the new born King to thousands of people while on their way home. It was the Wise Men who told the news to their own people and persuaded them to believe on this new King.

Fellow Christians, in this Christmas season we also should offer our willingness to expand the good news of the new born King, for there are millions of people who do not know that a Heavenly King is born on this earth to save the people. We are the ones who ought to go out to tell every person we meet the news of the new born King.

4. The Lords needs the gold. Jesus was born in a poor carpenter's home, and undoubtedly He needed money for living. Moreover, the cruel hearted Herod wanted to kill this new born King, and if the Wise Men had not brought the gold, where could the parents of Jesus have gotten the money to flee, to meet the expenses on the way, and the child naturally would have been killed if they had not been able to get away.

During this Christmas season, what does Christ need now? He is not on earth anymore, we cannot see Him with our physical eye. What He really wants from you is your witness for Him, so that people can see Christ through you. If you really offer this gift to Him, it is better than real gold. And if we sincerely offer this gift, it is better than just celebrating Christmas, and it is the true meaning of the celebration of Christmas.

A CORRECTION

Dear Brethren:

May I call your attention to a mistake in the Number 22, Volume II of the Mennonite and the Christian Evangel (November 19, 1935), page three, in the article entitled, "The Moslem in our District and our Opportunity." In paragraph three, the third line, are mentioned the "Three Religions of China," Confucianism, "Fascism," — and it is here that a rather gross error has been made, for Fascism is neither a religion, much less one of the Three Religions of China, and so I think this should be corrected. So will you please make the correction in the next issue? Instead of "Fascism" it should read, "Taoism." The Three Religions of China are: Confucianism, Taoism, and Buddhism.

I suppose the type in this particular pla was perhaps a bit faint on the manuscript, a thus a mistake could easily be made, but sin the word "Fascism" would create a rather s rious impression, it would be better to corre
this error. I am the author of this article. T name was rather unfortunately left off, due pe haps to the fact that I had failed to put r name on the manuscript. Thanking you f the correction, I am, sincerely yours,

Aganetha Fast.

BROTHER AND SISTER P. J. BOEHR CA NOT RETURN TO CHINA THIS YEAR

The Board has received word from th

AN APPEAL FOR DR. H. E. DESTER'S BUNGALOW AT BASNA, C. P., INDIA

To the Pastors and S. S. Superintendents our General Conference Churches

Dear Brethren:—

During the last few years it has been the p icy of the Foreign Mission Board not to do a building, even when it was as necessary as t second bungalow at Basna for Dr. H. E. D ters. The heat in India is too intense in s small houses as the one in which Brother a Sister Dester have lived so far. When th return within a year from now, they must ta with them the assurance that they can bu the new dwelling house as soon as they arr on the field. This will cost about $5,000.00.

Will you, please, present this need to yo Sunday Schools? The missionaries in In have asked for this house for years. In last report to the Board, Brother P. A. Pen says this about it:

THE MENNONITE AND
THE CHRISTIAN EVANGEL

A religious journal published jointly by the General Conference Mennonite Church of North America and the Central Conference of Mennonites. Devoted to the interests of these Mennonite denominations and the cause of Christ in general. Published on the first and third Tuesday of every month by the Mennonite Book Concern.

"Let me remind you that the bungalow for Dr. Petters is also imperative. I am amazed that they were able to hold out in the hut in which they have spent their first term of service. The heat must have been terrific for the greater part of the year. I doubt whether they would have much joy to return, if they knew that they had again to live in such inadequate quarters for eight years. It is not fair to them nor the work."

In order to speed up this matter, the Board has divided the cost of this bungalow into shares as follows:

10 shares at	$100.00	each	$1000.00
20 shares at	50.00	each	1000.00
40 shares at	25.00	each	1000.00
50 shares at	20.00	each	1000.00
60 shares at	10.00	each	600.00
80 shares at	5.00	each	400.00
Total			$5000.00

Will you, please, offer these shares to your Sunday Schools, or to individual members of the Sunday School? Thank you!

If you prefer any other method, such as paying about 15 cents per member, it will also amount to $5000.00, because the total membership in our Sunday Schools is about 32,000.

The next meeting of our Board will take place about the middle of February. Could this collection be completed by that time? If other organizations besides the Sunday Schools wish to buy shares, they are, of course, welcome to them.

If more comes in than needed for this project, the money will go into the general treasury.

May the Lord help us build this bungalow!

In the name of the Board,
P. H. Richert, Secretary.

(N. B.—All gifts in response to the above appeal should be sent to the treasurer of the Mission Board, Mr. J. E. Regier, Newton, Kansas.)

BETHEL COLLEGE, DECEMBER 12, 1935

The undersigned has recently been appointed reporter of Bethel College. And it is only meet that he should say something in the Mennonite before the year closes.

"Mit dem Herrn fang alles an"! With this thought as a watchword Bethel College was founded. With much prayer and many sacrifices on the part of its friends and under the gracious protection and loving care of God it has been permitted to carry on its work for forty-two years.

In an especial manner the above admonition has been observed this year. The day before the opening of school was for the most part spent in serious deliberation and prayerful meditation by the assembled faculty. The sacred duties of the teaching staff of a Christian college whose aim is to be Christ-centered, were seriously pondered, ways and means toward their accomplishment were discussed, and God's help and guidance was invoked. The effect of it all is quite perceptible in the life of the school.

Special efforts have recently been made to devise ways and means to aid the students in an all-around development of their God-given capacities and well-being, physical, mental, social, and spiritual. This is truly Christian, for is it not said of Christ, "He grew in stature (physical), wisdom (intellectual), and favor with God (spiritual), and man (social)."

The care for the students' spiritual welfare and nurture has been delegated principally to Prof. A. E. Kreider, Professor of Bible and Director of Religious Education. In him and Dr. A. Warkentin, who has recently completed his graduate work, the college has two strong teachers of the Bible, who are sound in the faith. Elm Cottage has been partly remodeled into an infirmary, which is in charge of a graduate nurse and a doctor, who carefully watch over the students' health and aid in the prevention of diseases. For minor cases of ailment the students, and members of the faculty and their families if they so desire, may receive treatment and hospital care, for a nominal fee. The students intellectual development and wellbeing is fostered by the Director of Student Counselling and Professor of Psychology. A commercial department has been installed, where students may get training in the elements of a clerical and business education. A model farm has been built and established from which the Boarding Hall gets its supply of milk, eggs, potatoes, etc., and which serves as an important aid in the agricultural courses.

Since the real strength and worth of a college consists chiefly in the faculty, our president has relentlessly and with keen foresight striven to improve the faculty, to make it the best obtainable under existing conditions. He has succeeded in inducing members of the staff to finish the work required for a full professorship, and has been able to find and bring in valuable accessions from without. The faculty now numbers thirty-two persons, of whom, however, only twenty-four are engaged in strictly instructional work, the others devoting their time to the different phases of administrative work. Fourteen of the instructors now hold a doctor's degree and eleven a master's degree or its equivalent. That gives Bethel College a faculty far above the average among the college of the land.

Guided by our energetic leader we are also striving to improve the character and quality of our student body; to get in closer touch with and to serve more effectively the community and especially our denomination; to improve the courses to more adequately meet the demands of higher education and the standardizing agencies, and also to bring the finances up to a point where the school can pay its teachers an adequate salary instead of a pittance as is now the case. To this end the recent numerously attended Annual Meeting impowered the Board of Directors and the Administration to proceed with the raising of funds with the aim of wiping out the debt of $121,000.00 by August the first next.

At this meeting the Registrar reported that the enrollment now stood at 323, distributed as follows: 179 men and 144 women; 139 freshmen, 89 sophomores, 43 juniors, 28 seniors, 16 unclassified, and 8 taking music only. Elev states and two foreign countries are represe ed. Kansas furnishes 278 students or 86 p cent, Oklahoma 13, Nebraska 12, South Da ta 5, Minnesota 3, California 4, Colorado 2, I ho, Montana, Oregon, Washington, Canada a Mexico, each 1. Four Kansas counties: H vey, McPherson, Marion, and Reno furnish 2 or 76 percent of the students. Fifteen deno nations are represented: the Mennonites w 212 students or 68 percent, the Methodists w 34, the Presbyterians with 21, the Christia with 19, and each of the other denominatio with less than 5. 58 Mennonite congregatio are represented; 52 of these belong to the G eral Conference, 5 to the Mennonite Brethr and one to the Old Mennonites. 55 students a self-supporting, 147 partly, 92 are being su ported, and 25 have not indicated.

Quite encouraging is the treasurer's rep according to which, since the year 1932, t debt has been reduced from $141,329 $121,634, i. e. $20,000 in round figures. T value of the college property has been rais from $290,504 to $368,043, an increase $78,000, and the endowment fund shows an crease of $29,000.

To attain the goal of being a means in Go hand to give our young people a truly Christi education, our colleges need the continu prayers and good will of our constituency a other Christian friends.

J. R. Thierstein.

CORRESPONDENCE

Beatrice, Nebraska, December 4, 1935. (E- tracts from a letter written to the editor Rev. M. M. Horsch.)

We had a very busy Thanksgiving seaso Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving had a Thanksgiving service in the county ja The Mission Committee of our Senior C. sponsored this service.

Thanksgiving morning we had our usual se vices in the church, with a good attendanc In the afternoon a number of us motored Newton, Kansas, to attend the annual Beth College corporation meeting. This meetin held Friday after Thanksgiving, was exceptio ally good. We are so glad for the great inte est manifested in our school.

For Sunday following Thanksgiving the Senior C. E. Mission Committee had again arranged for a Thanksgiving service on the County Poor Farm. This was held in the afternoon. We are glad thus to be of some spiritual help to the poor and unfortunate.

Elbing, Kansas, December 1, 1935. It has been some time since we have contributed a report from our church, the Zion Mennonite Church. So I shall give a brief summary of some of the things which have taken place in our community.

We are again nearing the close of an eventful year. During this year we have experienced many things. Some experiences were difficult and trying, then too, we have had experiences of joy and happiness, and as we look back over this period of time, we surely can find much reason for thanksgiving and praise unto the Heavenly Father for the many blessings that He bestowed on us.

Two funerals of loved ones have taken place in our church this year. One, of an older lady, the Mrs. Henry Epp, who for a long time had asked for deliverance from her illness and suffering. The other one was Mrs. Gerhard Klaassen, a mother taken from her family of seven children. This indeed was a very sad occasion, a parting that was hard to bear, especially for the bereaved family. Rev. and Mrs. Klaassen with their family moved into our midst last spring from Goessel, Kansas.

Then we can also find many occasions of joy and happiness, among which was the return of Missionary and Mrs. Ernest Kuhlmann of China during the early summer months. Their welcome was indeed a happy occasion. Rev. and Mrs. Kuhlmann had previously celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, which was also observed on this occasion. Rev. Kuhlmann then left for a nine month's stay in Germany.

On September 15th, my parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Regier, also celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. They had invited their friends for a praise service in the church and to enjoy a social evening at our home. We were indeed glad to have with us our grandfather, Rev. J. W. Regier of Los Angeles, Calif., who is 86 years old.

We also enjoyed many other spiritual blessings in our church services, led by Rev. J. H. Dyck, our pastor, in the Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and in the choir work. During the year we have exchanged numerous programs with various organizations of other churches. Sunday, November 24, our Christian Endeavor took part in a joint program in the Emmaus church at Whitewater, Kans., with the Emmaus, Swiss, and Grace Hill groups. We enjoyed the fellowship with each other very much and feel that an exchange in programs helps to stimulate the work of the different organizations.

In closing, may I send the season's greetings in wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Arnold Regier, Correspondent.

Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio, sends greetings to all readers. Our men had a good Fellowship meeting on Monday evening, November 18, with about ninety-six men of our church present. A bounteous supper was served and after this followed a program of music and a talk by E. W. Baumgartner from Berne, Indiana, who spoke on "Gird Your Loins."

On November 24 a number of our Intermediates attended a Young People's Rally at Continental where a large number of young people from the county gathered. Good speakers gave addresses both in the afternoon and evening.

Four girls of our church again took part in the Prince of Peace contest. The winner of the contest was Miss Evelyn Hilty. She will go to the county contest on Sunday, December 8.

We again had a very good mission sale. All the money for everything sold goes for missions.

Our services on Thanksgiving morning were well attended, and a very generous offering was lifted. In the evening of the same day those of our young people who came home for Thanksgiving Day presented a very delightful musical program. This has become an annual affair and is very much enjoyed by all.

The Women's Missionary Society is entertaining the Dorcas girls at their regular December meeting. Miss Frieda Sprunger will speak. After the program a social hour will be enjoyed.

The choir is again preparing the Messiah which will be rendered on December 23. The children will also give a Christmas program.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

M. G., Corr.

Emanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon. Dear Readers: With Thanksgiving just around the corner, we here in this beautiful valley have much to be thankful for. Our church will have the union meeting this year, as it is our custom to hold the Thanksgiving service either in our own church or in the neighboring church. Rev. G. C. Britchett of the Salem Presbyterian church has been chosen as speaker for that occasion.

At present we are having some rain and the air is much warmer than what it has been. It is very unusual for this valley to have about five inches of snow the later part of October, but that was the kind of weather we had then. The fruit trees looked very beautiful with leaves and snow at the same time. The daily paper stated that this was the earliest snow we have ever had before.

Quite a few of our group spent their vacation in different states. They all enjoyed their trips but every one of them was glad to be back again. That certainly speaks well for Oregon. We also had visitors from the East, and they liked it so well that they are planning to come here in the near future.

Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Franz, was in Montana for about two weeks, holding a series of meetings in his former congregation and also in another church seventy-five miles distant. He preached six days in the one church and six in the other. During these twelve days he delivered eighteen messages. He saw quite a change in the Bloomfield church (this being his former church) since he left there. They celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of this church, and the church was packed full to hear the message.

Our Senior C. E. held a banquet at the church basement on November 22. The guests for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Augsberger from the Albany Grace Mennonite church and a group of their C. E. young people. A very fine social hour was enjoyed by all who attended.

There is very little sickness in our community at present, for which we are happy. We also were blessed with bountiful crops of all kinds. Enough to live on for another year and some to spare. Truly, we have much to be thankful for to our Heavenly Father, and yet how often we forget to be content.

Season's greetings to all the readers.

Mrs. Adam Hofstetter, Correspondent.

Wasco, California. The Mennonite Ladie Sewing Circle was reorganized on October 1935, at Shafter, California.

About six years ago a large number of far ilies moved away from here and our dear pa tor, Rev. H. Gaede, passed away a few yea later. His death caused the church and al the sewing circle to discontinue their meeting

Since last April a nice group of about 75 ha gathered in the Advent church for Sunda School and singing in the morning, and als evening meetings were held.

On June 1, Mr. Albert Schmidt and famil moved to California from Oklahoma for h health, and he offered to serve for six month if his health would permit. Mrs. Albert Schmic has been elected president of the Ladies Sev ing Circle at the first meeting. Other office are as follows: Vice president, Mrs. Jake Neufeld; secretary and treasurer, Miss Helen I Penner; vice secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Nic Neufeld. The meetings are to be held monthl and all members are to pay 10c a month a membership dues. We had the privilege of hav ing Mrs. Manning, a missionary in Africa, a our first meeting. She gave us a very interesting talk about her work in Africa.

There are about twenty members in our circl at present and good interest is shown by ever one.

Since we are starting all over again, man expenses confront us. That being the case, w decided to use the funds that were accumulate by the sewing circle for home mission right her in our own church until we get back on ou feet again. We are planning to have a bazaa some time in the future and the proceeds ar to go for supplies wherever needed at home.

The Sunday School enrollment is increasin right along. I presume there must be aroun 135-150 gathering for Sunday School services Every Sunday evening the young people come together for Bible study and singing practice with the exception of the first Sunday in the month when a C. E. program is given.

Christmas is soon here and we are busy practicing for a program, which we will have in our own meeting place in the Shafter school Beginning next Sunday we will meet in a schoo building (not in use). This building was offered us free of charge. Pray for us that we may get strong and not weary. Greetings to you!

Secretary and Treasurer.

THE NEW LEAF

He came to my desk with quivering lip,
The lesson was done.
"Have you a new leaf for me, dear teacher?
I have spoiled this one."
I took his leaf, all soiled and blotted,
And gave him a new one all unspotted,
Then into his tired heart I smiled:
"Do better now, my child."

I went to the throne with trembling heart,
The year was done.
"Have you a new year for me, dear Master,
I have spoiled this one."
He took my year, all soiled and blotted,
And gave me a new one, all unspotted,
Then into my tired heart He smiled:
"Do better now, my child"!

THE DAILY CROSS

Our Lord never bribes His disciples by promising them ways of sunny ease. He does not buy them with illicit gold. He does not put the glittering crown upon the entrance-gate, and hide the cross behind the wall. No: on the very first stage of the sacred pilgrimage there falls "the shadow of the Cross." "Let him take up his cross daily, and follow Me."

And yet, the Lord's blessing is hidden in the apparent curse. In the act of bearing the cross we increase our strength. That is the heartening paradox of grace. Virtuous energies pass from our very burdens into our spirits, and thus "out of the eater comes forth meat." We bravely shoulder our load, and lo! a mystic breath visits the heart, and a strange facility attends our goings! The dead cross becomes a tree of life, and a secret vitality renews our souls.

How foolish, then, O heart of mine, to avoid and evade thy cross! Refuse the burden, and thou shalt feel no inspiration! Carefully husband thy blood, and thou shalt remain forever anaemic! But lose thy life, and thou shalt find it!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

My Hopes For The New Year

Romans 8:28; 1 Peter 3:10-16

Is there anyone whose heart does not beat a bit faster at the coming of New Year? Especially for a Christian is it a significant thing to begin a new year. As we look backward we can see so many failures, and sins of omission as well as commission. With a new consecration we will endeavor to give the Master of our lives a better chance. We do want the Holy Spirit to give us a more real guidance, this may be ours in the year 1936 if we are willing to rid ourselves of our pet sins, surrender fully to the Lord's will and listen in the quiet time to the voice divine.

In our second Scripture portion we have description of the good life, and are told how we need to sanctify or reconsecrate ourselves in order that our faith will be real, so that we may be able to give a reason for our hope. If there is any need today it is that the church of Jesus Christ will show that she has something the world does not have. Too many Christians lack that divine flavor.

Questions

1. What is the significance of New Year to you?
2. What value if any is there in making New Year resolutions?
3. Why is it a good thing for each child of God to take a stock account of the past year?

4. What does Romans 8:28 mean to you? Do you believe it?
5. How can our Y. P. Society plan for a more consecrated spirit and for more devotional and helpful meetings this year?
6. How can we as Endeavorers live "lives that win" in this coming year?

Habits Worth Forming

(Consecration Meeting) 1 Tim. 4:8-16

There are good habits and bad habits. Bad habits such as bad temper, perversions, a habit of contradicting or of self-depreciation are due to repressed morbid complexes. Good habits such as studious habits, generous habits or courteous habits are the result of accepted dispositions. James' Psychology points the way to overcome bad habits and form good ones in their stead, but there are some bad habits which can be broken only by the grace and mercy of God.

When a Christian takes his faith seriously he will soon learn that some evil habit stands between him and a full consecration. The individual must put forth much effort to overcome it and Christ will give assistance. But a habit cannot be driven out by simply praying and hoping that a habit whose emotions we enjoy will be removed. We must do our part.

We can feel thankful that many kindnesses and courtesies may become habitual. For instance a very much worthwhile habit for each of us would be to speak only kindly of others. Everybody likes to be in the presence of one who is cheerful, hopeful and sanely optimistic. To be honest and ethical in all of life may become an attitude which is largely habitual.

Questions

1. What is a habit?
2. How are habits formed?
3. How may habits be broken? Can every evil habit be broken?
4. Why is it so essential that we have good habits?
5. What are some outstanding bad habits which hinder the Kingdom of God?
6. Name a number of good habits which you believe are indispensable to the Christian.
7. How can the grace of God help us in habit formation?

Signs Of Growing Brotherhood.

1 John 2:9-11; 3:17-18

The world is like a field of wheat in whic tares have been sown. We wish it were tru that the world were growing more brotherl in every area of life but such is not the cas There are of course cycles in which men mistrust each other more and have less of idealis than in other periods. In the past few year we have experienced a multiplicity of strike and labor clashes. Dictatorships have bee popular, in some countries race clashes hav increased in their intensity.

But on the other hand we do find that me are loving their brethren increasingly and walking in the light. Some of the denominationa barriers are beginning to break down, race and classes are trying to understand each othe better, and in international circles there is tendency toward sympathetic and peaceful understanding.

Questions

1. Why is it necessary for Christians to wal like children of light?
2. How tolerant and sympathetic should we be
3. In what realms are we experiencing clashe today? Why?
4. Are churches and denominations becomin more brotherly?
5. Are nations growing more sympathetic toward each other?
6. Why does Christ bid us to become more lik brothers?

How May I Reveal God?

Eph. 5:1, 2; Matt. 5:14-16

"Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God."

To find how Jesus reveals God we have the benefit of the whole Bible record; to find ho I may reveal God I must turn to myself as I am, and to myself as I ought to be.

1. I may reveal God through the very perfection of my life. God does not mean any of us to be deformed or sickly, — His aims are for perfect, complete bodies.

2. I may reveal God through my acceptance of His plan of salvation. It is human nature to sin, and to fall short of the best. But I can have this human nature made over, and I can partake of God's strength so that I do not fall a prey to sin.

3. Through my actions I may reveal God. My friends and associates do not need to be told when I am dominated by a spirit other than my own. My every word, deed, and the very nature of my life will show fourth my relationship to Him.

4. I may reveal God through my choice of, and devotion to, my life's task. If I make it on a low plane I will know, and others will know that God is not in it. If I make it high, and much for others, all will know that God and I are in partnership.

There is nothing that so reveals God to the unsaved, as a life, once a slave to sin, now set free and made victorious by Christ Jesus. A Chinaman was once asked, "Have you heard the Gospel"? "No," was the reply, "but I have seen it." I know a man who was the terror of the whole district, an opium-smoker, and sometimes as fierce as a wild animal. But after he accepted the Jesus religion, he gave up opium and became meek and kind." Are we giving up the things of the world that God may be glorified in us? That is every Christian's supreme business. Men are groping in the darkness of sin and despair; pleading for help, for guidance, for the way to God. Are our lives so transparent and so free from the corroding power of sin that others are finding Jesus through us?

The Hindered Christ

"The Lord Jesus wanted a tongue one day
To speak a message of cheer
To a heart that was weary and worn and sad,
And weighed with mighty fear.
He asked me for mine, but I was busy quite
With my own affairs from morn till night.

"The Lord Christ wanted a hand one day
To do a loving deed;
He wanted two feet, on an errand for Him
To run with gladsome speed.
But I had need of my own that day;
To His gentle beseeching I answered, 'Nay'!

"So all that day I used my tongue,
My hand, and my feet as I chose;
I said some hasty, bitter words
That hurt one heart, God knows.
I busied my hands with worthless play,
And my willful feet went a crooked way.

"And the dear Lord Jesus,—was His work undone
For lack of a willing heart?
Only through men does He speak to men;
Dumb, must He be apart.
I do not know, but I wish today
I had let the Lord Christ have His way."

Was that you or I who refused to help the Lord today? Or in this last year? Pray that we, in this new year, may be willing to reveal God in our lives as we have never done before, that we may help in this great cause and not hinder the work.

Questions

1. What is the supreme business of every Christian?
2. Has God been revealed in me this last year?
3. How can I improve this new year so that I may reveal God?
4. Discuss the ways in which we reveal God to the world.

Forming And Breaking Habits

(Consecration Meeting) Jer. 22:21; Acts 3:19

"Sow an act, reap a habit, sow a habit, reap a character."

The definition of habit is, a fixed tendency to perform certain acts in a certain way—a tendency so strong that it is beyond the jurisdiction of the will and sometimes beyond that of consciousness.

Therefore it is very important that we form the best habits. Most habits begin in conscious acts, but every time the act is performed it becomes easier and simpler, until in time it ceases to need attention.

Everyone has watched a little stream flowing down a hillside in its rather deep-cut channel. There must have been a time, long ago, when there was no stream bed—when the first drops of water found their way down the hill, flowing around a stone here, slipping through a sandy spot there, but always choosing the easiest path, the line of least resistance. The next time the snow melted on the hilltop and the water began to run down, that same path was just a little easier because it had been traveled before; and each time this became more and more noticeable. Finally, there appears the actual stream bed, deep, carved in the rock.

It is in the same way that habits are formed, though the making cannot be watched so clearly. An action is performed once and somewhere in the nervous system it leaves a tiny record. The next time the same action is performed the record seems a little clearer and more definite, until the action performs itself whenever the proper stimulus is given.

The right sort of a habit may be helpful. For instance, if when walking you had to put all your attention to keeping your feet on the pathway you would not be able to see the beauties around you. The brain turns these simple functions over to the lower nervous system and is free to occupy itself with worthier things.

On the other hand a wrong sort of habit can certainly hinder. Most noticeable of all are such habits as those which result from the craving for drugs or alcohol habits, which originate in a bodily demand and become so strong that the will cannot control them. But there are other habits which are less harmful—nervous habits, which expend energy unnecessarily, habits of covetousness or of bodily or mental sloth. Childhood and youth are the habit forming periods—the old man is little more than a bundle of habits; and no one phase is more important in youth than the forming of right habits.

If we have wrong habits, let us break them before they become too fixed in our life. The only way to break a habit is to substitute something good in its place. The old story which we have all heard, still illustrates habits. Any one can break a stick, but when we tie a bundle of sticks together the harder they are to break, and so with habits. A deed done once can easily be broken, but when done many times, it is not so easy. Let us keep a check on our habits, and if not good, break it immediately.

Questions

1. Is habit, on the whole, a good or bad thing?
2. Suppose a man had to put his whole attention on every detail of everything undertaken, how much would he accomplish?
3. Confession is good for the soul. Have members discuss—some bad habits I have formed and some worthwhile habits that I have.
4. Is it always easy to break a habit? If we have not enough power ourselves to break that habit, where may we go for strength and help?

Have I A Right To Do As I Please?

Proverbs 14:12; John 8:29

Let us look at this topic through four different phases. Have I a right to do as I please with my physical life? Can I miss hours of sleep, night after night and expect to be physically fit? Can I go where there are contagious diseases and expect not to catch them? Can I disobey the laws and rules of health and expect to be healthy? Just how far can I do as I please then? Paul says, "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's."

Have I a right to do as I please with my mind? Have I a right to overtax it? Have I a right to form habits which will numb the mind so that in time of emergency I am not able to think properly? Have I a right to fill my mind with cheap reading? Have I a right to fill my mind with good literature and leave the Bible out? Paul told Timothy, "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of sound mind." And again, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightfully dividing the word of truth."

Have I a right to do as I please in my social life? May I go ahead and do things without regard of my neighbors? Who is my neighbor? Shall I see that I myself get ahead regardless of what it may cost to someone else or how I have to cheat to accomplish the end? Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount said, "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do you even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." Am I responsible for my friend or neighbor failing in the thing he is trying to do? Is it my duty to help my fallen brother?

Have I a right to do as I please with my spiritual life? Shall I get all I can spiritually for myself and keep it without sharing with anyone the blessings that I have received? Can I miss gathering with God's people and expect to grow spiritually? Can I afford to go to Sunday School, Church and Christian Endeavor and then not think of them until another Sunday comes? Oh, we can see when a child or person is starving physically, mentally and socially, but we fail to see when we starve spiritually until we have fallen into sin and then we realize that we have fallen away from God. Read Rom. 8: 6—8.

When can we do as we please? As long as we are not interfering with another's rights and as long as we do nothing that will make our weaker brother stumble and fall. Rom. 14: 12—21. Jesus answered this when He answered the lawyer and said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy strength and with all thy mind: and thy neighbor as thyself."

What promises do we have if we do that which pleaseth the Father? Prov. 16: 7; Rom. 8:8; Rom. 15: 3; Gal. 1:10.

Topic.—The White Page Of The New Year
2 Tim. 2: 15

Another year is dawning;
Dear Master, let it be,
In working or in waiting,
Another year with Thee."

Looking into the new year is like opening a new diary in which nothing has been written. One thinks, "I wonder what story the diary will tell when the year is ended." The pages are all white and clean now. Then, some will tell of joy, others of sorrow, some of disappointments and again of blessings. If faithfully kept, not all will be as we should choose, but each of us may decide quite largely what shall be written there. Will your year be lived for self or for others? Will you put Christ first or only think of Him occasionally? Will home be happier because you are there or will you worry and annoy the rest of the family? What will your life write on this white page, 1936, as God gives it to you?

By looking over last years record you will better understand some of the dangers ahead. Let God help you to avoid the mistakes you made then and to use every minute of time rightly. We shall think of a few things that should be written on this page of the new year.

Let us first have more love to Christ. If the heart is filled with love to Him, sin must go. A mother one day went to visit her son in college. She saw things in his room that should not have been in a Christian's room. She did not say anything but hung a picture of Christ there. When she came back later she saw a change and mentioned it to her son. He said "Mother, those things I used to have in my room wouldn't fit in with Christ. I had to take them out when He came in."

We want more Bible reading. How can we know the way to live and what God is planning for us unless we read the Bible often and carefully?

Along with Bible reading we shall need more prayer. Did you pray each day in 1935? I don't mean say a prayer you have learned, but really talk to God.

As there is more of Bible study and prayer there will surely be more obedience. Jesus' mother one day said, "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it." That message is for us too. To this we should add obedience to parents.

We need to fill the year with service and helpfulness. As we start out, read Phil. 4: 13, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Living rightly in 1936 is one of these "all things."

Plans for the Meeting

Distribute sheets of white paper to represent the New Year. Have each Junior write on his paper the things he thinks he should write into the year. These are not empty resolutions but possibilities by God's grace.

Questions

1. How is the New Year like a white page?
2. How will it be possible to have a record in 1936 of which you need not be ashamed?
3. Mention some things that would be blots on the page.
4. How may you help others to live rightly in the new year?
5. Why should our record in 1936 be better than in 1935?

Topic.—Habits Worth Forming
1 Tim. 4:8-16

"Teddy had learned to spell a word in a way that was not the right way, and every time he came to it in his writing lesson, he wanted to spell it as he had learned it first. Would he ever get it right?

'It is pretty hard to know all those things, isn't it, Teddy?' said his aunt.

'Yes, but it is a great deal harder to unknow 'em once you get 'em crooked.'

Teddy was right. It is very hard to 'unknow' the wrong things that we have learned."

When a person does anything in a certain way many times that becomes a habit. People have habits of thought and of speech as well as of action. Whether good or bad, these habits become so truly a part of one's self that it is very difficult to change them.

Read Phil. 4:8 to find out how to form right habits of thought.

A boy or girl may form the habit of truthfulness or the opposite. A boy who always tells the truth does not need to be questioned. His "yes" or "no" is sufficient. Everyone trusts a truthful boy.

Either laziness or industry soon becomes a habit. A good position had been offered for the right boy. Out of many who applied, three were chosen as being fitted for the work. Only one was needed so the employment man was sent to find which one was best. Two spent most of their time swimming. They could have had odd jobs but didn't care to take them. The third was busy from morning until night wherever he could find work. He was chosen for the position because he had formed the habit of working and the man knew that he could be depended upon.

You will find that school work too, is much easier for those who train their minds to work than for those who are lazy in their thinking. We have spoken in other lessons of the habit of church attendance which all Christians are told to form.

Plans for the Meeting

Bring a piece of rope to the meeting. Show the comparitive strength of one strand to the entire rope. One act may not seem worthy of notice but will, if repeated many times, become a powerful habit. Speak of the power of habits both good and bad.

Questions

1. What is a habit?
2. What are some habits worth forming?
3. How is it possible to train one's self in right habits?
4. How can one keep from forming bad habits?
5. Mention some habits of Jesus' life.

Topic.—Signs Of Growing Brotherhood

1 John 2: 9—11; 3:17, 18

You will see by our Scripture lesson today that true brotherhood means love and helpfulness. I wish I could tell you that the spirit of brotherhood is growing, that there is more of love and helpfulness in the world each year. There are signs of brotherhood around us. There are many peoplt who love and are always glad to help those in need. Every thought of such people makes one happy. On the other hand, one cannot help but seeing hatred, envy and cruelty. It has crept even into homes and churches and we cannot make ourselves believe that all is well. Men and women as well as boys and girls want their own way instead of thinking of the good of others. Rich men are piling up more money than they can ever use while the poor have scarcely enough to eat. Nations are at war for no good reason while other nations are getting ready for war. If James were here now, he would say as in James 3:10, "My brethren, those things ought not so to be."

All this should not cause us to become discouraged but rather to see that there is work to be done. Although we may not do big things, each may do our part. We may determine with Joshua, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." If we serve Him faithfully, we shall surely show brotherhood, for there is no room for jealousy, hatred or unkindness in a heart that is filled with His love. A true Christian loves to see another do well and one in whom the love of God dwells will surely be a friend and helper to those in need. (1 John 3: 17) As He helps us, we can show real brotherhood.

Questions

1. Explain the meaning of the word "brotherhood."
2. How may we have more of brotherhood in our homes?
3. What may Juniors do toward having brotherhood among Christians?
4. Tell of someone you know who is a real brother.
5. How may a boy or girl show brotherhood in school?

Malachi Foretells A New Day

Lesson Text.—Mal. 3:1-12

Golden Text.—Behold I will send my messenger and he shall prepare the way before me. Mal. 3:1.

This Sunday the class is privileged to choose between two lessons, the Christmas lesson or the lesson on Malachi. The editor of these notes prefers to write on Malachi so that we may complete our Hebrew history. On the other hand our first lesson of the new year is really a Christmas lesson.

We found in our history of the Jews that through the inspiration and encouragement of Haggai and Zechariah the people built the temple in four years. After the dedication of the temple which was in 516 B. C., the people were very zealous in their worship in the temple and were deeply spiritual. But it was not long until difficulties arose which dampened the religious zeal of the Hebrews. The keeping up of the temple was expensive and the people were poor. On the other hand the priests charged exorbitant rates for their service and taxes from the government were exceedingly high. So the people did as many church members do today, they stayed away from the service so they would not need help to support the church. The custom also began to grow of intermarriage with foreigners. This naturally weakened their devotion to God. All sorts of social wrongs were also prevalent. The rich oppressed the poor, the widows, orphans, and strangers. There was much lying, stealing, blasphemy, and perjury used. It happened so often that the wicked prospered, while the righteous poor suffered. The people felt that God was unkind and unjust and so they refused to worship Him. These were the conditions that Malachi faced when in 460 he began to preach in the temple. The prophet insists on the fact that God loves His people and that it is the people that have drifted away from God. He urges the people to come back to God and bring their offerings again into the temple. The contribution of Malachi to his day was the encouragement which he gave to his people and thus prepared the way for the work of Nehemiah and Ezra.

Review

Lesson Text.—Isa. 52:1-3, 7-12

Golden Text.—But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him and His righteousness unto children's children. Ps. 103:17.

Usually when we come to the lesson of review the class breathes a deep sigh because it will mean repetition, lack of interest, and perhaps even the assignment of the lesson to a member of the class. A review, however, should be a survey of the lessons covered, attempting to discover the outstanding truths in all the lessons. In this series of lessons there are two parts: one, the Hebrews in captivity, and the other the lessons of the restoration.

The Jews in captivity changed very radically in their new environment. Economically they became agriculturalists. Socially they came in very direct contact with the heathen about them. This brought a fundamental change in their point of view. Instead of being local in their interests they now became interested in the whole world and their activities became commercial and agricultural. But the greatest transformation of these people came about religiously. At first they were discouraged and felt that God had forsaken them and cast them off because of their sins. But through the leadership of the prophets, particularly Ezekiel, they learned that God was disciplining them and that He still was interested in their future. It is at this time that they become the people of the law instead of the people of a land.

The restoration gave the Jews the opportunity in their home land to carry out the principles and truths which they had learned in their captivity. The restoration increased the power of the priesthood and made the scribes the religious leaders and teachers of Judaism. Much of these forms and emphasis on the law makes people think that this period was one of decline, but this is not true. Although their emphasis on the law was narrow and exclusive, yet it furnished the frame work of the shell which preserved the religion of the prophets.

A Mother's Song

Lesson Text.—Luke 1:46-58

Golden Text.—And Mary said, my soul doth magnify the Lord and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. Luke 1:46, 47.

As we begin our series of lessons for 1936, we leave the Old Testament and go to the New. The Sunday School lesson committee has arranged that the Sunday School shall study the writings of the only Gentile author in the New Testament. We are to study the gospel of Luke and the Book of Acts for the whole year. The first lesson directs our minds to one of the four hymns of the nativity. These four hymns are the Magnificat, the Benedictus, the Gloria in Excelsis, and the Nunc Dimittis. The first was sung by Mary, the second by Zacharias, the third by the angels, and the fourth by aged Simeon in the temple. The first one, which is our study, is the lovely lyric which fell from the lips of Mary, the mother of our Lord. It had been revealed to Mary that she was to have a child. Hiding this sacred secret in her heart, she hastened to the hill country of Judea to the home of her relative Elizabeth. Mary's heart was bursting with exultant joy, which was expressed in this song. She begins her song in exalting the holiness and might and faithfulness and grace of God. The hymn is made up of Old Testament phrases. A person can clearly see signs of the song of Hannah sung when her heart was rejoicing in the promised birth of Samuel. Mary, too, believes that her son is to fulfill all the promises made to Israel.

This song is a hymn of hope, thanksgiving, praise, but most of all a hymn of faith. It is truly a Christmas message which calls us to believe to obey to submit and to trust. When real faith is present in our lives then Christ is born anew in our hearts and then we can sing:

"No ear may know His coming,
But in this world of sin,
Where meek souls will receive Him still,
The dear Christ enters in."

MISSIONS DEFENDED

Presiding at a meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society in Cape Town, when 2,000 people assembled in the City Hall, the "Judge-President" said: "You hear people who say that it is a mistake to send missionaries to the natives and who speak with contempt of their work. I can understand an atheist saying that but it seems to me to be absolutely impossible to say it if you are a Christian. We hear it said that Christianity spoils the natives and that religion and education makes criminals of them. I suppose there is nobody in this hall who knows more about crime than I do—and the idea that Christianizing the native leads him into crime is a lie. Of course you will find the educated native going wrong; of course you will find that if he had not been educated he would not have been able to commit a particular crime—but the same thing applies to the white man. No Christian can possibly say that spreading the Gospel or education among the natives is going to harm them. It is not the white man's Christianity that is harming the natives; it is the white man's un-Christianity that is doing it."

—South African Outlook.

HOW MANY CHRISTIANS

The Living Church, after seeking an answer to this question, concludes that there are about 692,400,000 Christians in the world, of whom 522,596,000 or about five-sevenths, belong to the historic Catholic communions — Roman, Greek, Coptic, Armenian, etc.; 169,802,000 or about two-sevenths, to two hundred odd Protestant denominations. As this leaves about 1,167,610,000 non-Christians, or nearly twice as many as "those who call themselves Christians," there is still an ample field and urgent call for Christian missionary endeavor. The Protestant numbers would be doubled if their children were counted, as is the case in the Roman Catholic Church.

"Note the demand for the courteous physician, the patient dentist, the sympathetic pastor, and even the conscientious mechanic; then cultivate such virtues today."

JOTTINGS

The men of the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio, held their fellowship supper in the basement of the church on the evening of November 18. Ninety-six of the men of the church were present. Three of the men of the churches served as chefs and prepared an excellent and substantial meal. The local high school principal, Glenn Hilty, was dining room manager, and ten high school boys did the table waiting under the direction of Mr. Hilty. The Gerber Brothers and Vernon Suter furnished special music. Then Dr. N. S. Hilty, the toastmaster, introduced E. W. Baumgartner of Berne, Indiana, the speaker of the evening. Mr. Baumgartner gave an excellent address which was especially fitting for the occasion. These meetings are held a few times each year and are a great benefit to the men and the whole church.

At the annual meeting of the Bethel College Corporation held on November 29th, it was decided to make a serious attempt to collect enough funds to liquidate the college debt of $121,000.00 in the next six months. It was also voted to prolong the term of service of the members of the Board of Directors from three years to six years.

The Oratorio Society of the First Mennonite Church of Upland, California, gave its second annual rendition of Handel's MESSIAH on Sunday, December 15, in two concerts at 3:00 P. M. and 8:00 P. M. The choir of about 75 voices was directed by the pastor, Rev. Lester Hostetler.

The members of the Einsiedel Mennonite Church at Hanston, Kansas, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its organization on Thanksgiving Day. Two anniversary services were held, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon. At noon a dinner was served to all members and guests in the church basement. The church is located a few miles northwest of Hanston and is served by Rev. Alvin van der Smissen. The present building was erected about eleven years ago.

An illustration of how rapidly aviation is shortening distances is given by the fact that a letter mailed in Hawaii on December 5th reached its destination at Berne, Indiana, on Monday afternoon, December 9th. The letter came to San Francisco on board the famous China Clipper of the Pan American Airlines which landed there on December 6th, completing its round trip to Manila in less than two weeks. Within a few months it may be possible to send a letter to China in five days and to India in seven days. America is leading the world in Commercial Aviation and in this connection it might be well to suggest that wherever possible people living at a great distance from each other can save several days in the delivery of a letter by using the Air Mail. If you live in California, Oregon, or Washington, and wish to order something from the Mennonite Book Concern at Berne, Indiana, you can save from two to three days by using the Air Mail.

Rev. C. H. van der Smissen, who is living at the Bethel Home for the Aged at Newton, Kansas, recently celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday. He is still in good health and active in his work as editor of the Kinderbote and the German Sunday School Quarterlies of the General Conference.

The East Coast Club of the Bluffton College Alumni held its semi-annual meeting at Lansdale, Pa., on Saturday evening, November 20. A banquet was held at five o'clock for alumni and former students. Following the banquet there was a general meeting for all friends of the college, at which Dr. C. Henry Smith showed some slides on Hawaii and Dr. Harold Alderfer delivered an address.

Rev. Jessie Smucker of Smithville, Ohio, has accepted a call to become pastor of the Bethel College Mennonite Church. He will move to Newton and assume his new charge on January 1, 1936.

POINT BARROW MISSION

At the news of the tragic death of Will Rogers and Wiley Post near Point Barrow, Alaska, the eyes of the world turned to this seldom-heard-of community in the Arctic Circle where Dr. Greist, a Presbyterian missionary, is interpreting Christ's message to the Eskimos. The services rendered by Dr. Greist in that tragedy give interest to the fact that Point Barrow Mission

Is 300 miles within the Arctic Circle.

Is 2,100 miles from the North Pole.

Is on the farthest north land in North America.

Is a town of from 400 to 600 residents.

Is equipped with three buildings—the hospital, the church, and the manse.

The mission staff consists of the doctor, his wife who is the nurse, a native nurse, and a janitor.

The hospital had a total of 2,847 patients during the church year 1934-1935.

SCORE ONE FOR THE CHINESE

The procedure of teaching the parent to teach the child is merely reversing the process used so widely by the nationalist government in China. The Chinese method in many areas requires each school child to take under his tutelage one adult—for instance a grandmother—to whom he must daily pass on the lessons he learns at school. The child is given no credit for his own arithmetic paper until he also brings his grandmother's paper, no reading credit until his grandmother also can read, no graduation unless his grandmother can also pass the examinations. Seriously admin tered, the system is excellent. It works. C versely, if a Protestant American parent fou himself without status in the church until could make religious experience meaningful his child, religious education might take on deepened validity.—The Christian Century.

Worship or service, which? Ah, that is best
To which He calls us, be it toil or rest,—
To labor for Him in life's busy stir
Or seek His feet, a silent worshiper!
—Caroline Atwater Mason.
